It seems advisable first to give some account of each of the works contained in this volume, and next to explain what has been attempted in this edition.

A —1 The history of the Religio Medici is not a little curious. It was written about 1635,¹ while the Author was living at Shipden Hall, near Halifax, after his return from his travels on the Continent, and before he finally settled at Norwich. He tells us that it was not intended for publication, but was "composed at leisurable hours for his private exercise and satisfaction," and that after the MS. had been lent to his friends, and "by transcription successively corrupted," it was printed without his knowledge or consent, and without his name attached to it, in 1642 (p. 4). There seems to be no reason to doubt the truth of this statement, though Johnson is evidently inclined to disbelieve it, or at least to consider Browne's case (if true) to be a remarkable exception to the general rule with respect to surreptitious editions.¹ Though it was published anonymously, the little book seems to have attracted so much attention that it was reprinted in the course of a few months, and thus Browne was in a manner compelled to issue "a full and intended copy," which appeared (still anonymously) in the following year. In the meantime the work in its uncorrected form had been brought to the notice of Sir Kenelm Digby, who in the course of twenty-four hours (part of which time was spent in procuring a copy of the book,) wrote some "Observations," which were immediately sent to the press,² notwithstanding Browne's remonstrance and suggestion that the writer should at least wait for the appearance of the authorized edition.

Though the work was considerably altered before it was ready for the public,³ it was carelessly printed, and indeed it would almost seem as if the Author, when he

It was very soon translated into Latin, by which means it was brought to the notice of scholars on the Continent, and was afterwards translated into several European languages. Upon the whole it was well received, but was by some persons much misunderstood, and gave occasion to great and most undeserved misrepresentation of the author's religious opinions.³ After the first authorized edition it was reprinted at least sixty times during the author's life. Most of these editions profess to be 'corrected and amended,' but this appears to be probably in every case, except 1678 (K) and 1682 (L), a mere form of words without any distinct meaning, as some of the

¹ He did not even take the trouble to see that the 'Errata' which had been specially noticed on a separate leaf, were corrected in subsequent editions so that some of them remained in the text as late as 1835, when Wilkin laments that they had not been brought to his notice in time to allow of his using them for the correction of his own text. (See ERRATA to vol. II.) On the other hand, the last two editions published during his life have four short additions which could hardly have been introduced into the text without his authority. (See p. 54, l. 7, 50, 27, 94, l. 1, 10.)

² He never put his name to the book and in one of his Common Place Books written late in life he speaks of it shyly as "a piece of mine published long ago" (vol. III. p. 324, l. 11, ed. Bohn).

same errors are continued from one edition to another, even down to the present century¹

During the next hundred and fifty years only about four editions appeared, but early in the second quarter of the present century the little book, which seemed almost forgotten in the publishing world, was being edited simultaneously by a Norwich bookseller, an Oxford undergraduate, and an American divine, and in 1831, after an interval of nearly eighty years, a precocious youth of nineteen (?)² had the honour of once more bringing it before public notice³ It has since been republished seven times in England, and four times in America, so there is no probability of its ever again falling into comparative oblivion

2 "A Letter to a Friend, upon Occasion of the Death of his Intimate Friend," appears from internal evidence to have been written by Sir T. B. about 1672,⁴ ten years before his death, about the same time as the Christian Morals, but shortly after⁵ Great

¹ Of thirty four pages mentioned in the list of Errata in C, only eight were corrected in D; thirteen in L, one in J, two in K, four in Q, and the rest in different modern editions

A few particulars relating to THOMAS CHAPMAN, and the other modern editors, will be found in the Appendix to this Preface, No. III

part of it has the appearance of being a canto as the author would call it), of passages which he had treasured up in his copious Common Place Books, and which he was glad to make use of before his death. Several sentences are to be found in the extracts from these Common Place Books given by Wilkin,¹ and others may probably exist in those which are still unpublished. It consists of two parts, the former (§§ 1—29) relating more or less closely to the subject matter of the Letter, the latter (§§ 30—48) altogether distinct from it, and found with numerous variations in different parts of the Christian Morals.

It first appeared about eight years after the author's death (1690), and has since been reprinted about ten times, which is perhaps more frequently than it deserves. The former portion is comparatively uninteresting, and the latter chiefly valuable as furnishing the means of correcting the text of the Christian Morals. Dr. Edward Browne, in editing the Letter, did not do justice to his father's memory, and the first edition is disfigured by various errors² which are certainly not attributable to the author. These have been corrected in the present edition,³ the few Notes by the author have been preserved, and references have been given to the parallel passages in the Christian Morals. There is a MS. in the British Museum (Sloane, 1862) which varies considerably from the printed text. Some additional passages have been extracted by Wilkin from this MS., which are given in the Notes in this edition.

3 The "Christian Morals" are called by Dr Edward Browne "a continuation of the Religio Medici," and therefore, though in this edition (as in those of Wilkin, Gardiner, and Fields) they are separated from it probably future editors will think it better to place the two works in juxtaposition. The exact date of their composition cannot be determined with certainty, but it was after 1662,² and before 1680,³ and probably about 1671⁴. They are said by his daughter, Miss Littleton, to have been "the last work of her honoured and learned father".

They are very different in style from the Religio Medici. There is a greater admixture of strange and pedantic words, and also a more frequent allusion to events and personages in ancient and mediæval history. The book by its title raises expectations which are hardly realized, and it contains nothing equal in piety or eloquence to some passages in the Religio Medici and Urn Burial. There is, however, in many parts, a grave, solemn, stately flow of words, very artificial, but not unpleasing, and not unsuited to the subject matter, which must evidently have been imitated from the parallelism of Hebrew poetry,¹ and which not unfrequently reminds us, in this particular, of passages in the De Imitatione Christi.² The following is an elaborate specimen of this peculiarity of style, examples of which will be found in almost every page —

“ When death's heads on our hands have no influence upon our heads, and fleshless cadavers abate not the exultances of the flesh , when crucifixes upon men's hearts suppress not their bad commotions, and His image Who was murdered for us withholds not from blood and murder , phylacteries prove but formalities,
and their despised hints sharpen our condemnations ’

(pp 210, 211)

They were first published in 1716, about thirty-four years after Sir T. B.'s death, by Archdeacon Jeffery, and have enjoyed a fair amount of popularity, having been reprinted about eleven times. Of these reprints the only one that deserves particular notice is the first (1756), to which was prefixed Johnson's well-known Life of the author.¹

¹ Perhaps this is what Wilkin means when he says that the “Christian Morals” appears to have been written on the model of the Book of Proverbs. (Note to Tract xiii vol iii p 267 ed Bolin)

In the present volume the text has been printed from the first edition with (it is believed) only three alterations,² but several other improvements and corrections have been suggested in the Notes, (chiefly arising from the parallel passages in the Letter to a Friend;) some of which may probably be adopted by future editors.³ All the Notes in the first edition have been retained, as they were copied from the original MS of the author, and also most of those in ed 1756, which have been of much use in the Glossarial Index. The marginal abstract of the different sections is taken, (with a few alterations,) from Peace's edition, 1844. The extracts from MSS in the British Museum are taken from Wilkin's edition, 1852.

B—The present volume was at first intended to be little more than a corrected and improved reprint of Gardiner's edition of 1845 (W). When, however, by the kindness of Mr Wilkin's Son and of Mr. Gardiner's Sister, the whole of the scarce editions, formerly in the possession of these two editors (respectively), were placed at my disposal, it seemed to be a sort of literary duty to make the utmost possible use of them, as no such collection had ever fallen into the hands of any previous editor. Accordingly, this accident, (or θείη τίχη, as Herodotus would call it,) determined the character of the present edition, which is chiefly critical, or occupied with the improvement of the text. If I had known the amount of labour that this plan would involve, I should probably never have undertaken it; but there has been the satisfaction of thinking that the book was worth the trouble, and that future editors would thereby be exempted from the necessity of any similar work, at least to the same extent.

In the case of the Letter to a Friend, &c., and also of the Christian Morals, both of which works were published after the author's death, there was no particular difficulty in settling the text, which is taken in each case from the first published edition, with the correction of a few passages where the Author's MS. must have been copied carelessly. Where the mistakes are due to Sir T. B. himself, they are mentioned in the notes, but not corrected in the text.*

* See Notes on p. 162 l. antep., 185 ult.

With respect to the Religio Medici, however, the case is very different, and is altogether so peculiar, that it requires (for the sake of future editors,) to be examined in considerable detail

The difficulty of settling the text does not appear at first sight, and indeed seems to have been overlooked by some former editors. Here is a little book which (besides two unauthorized editions,) was reprinted eight or ten times during the author's life, the (so-called) "eighth" edition (L), published shortly before his death, claiming in the title page to be "corrected and amended." Surely (any one would say at first sight,) this is the standard edition, to be followed implicitly by all future editors. But this is certainly not the case, for the simple reason that several of the Errata specified in the first authorized edition (C) are still uncorrected in L, and therefore it is clear that this edition was not superintended by the author.

And this reasoning applies to all the previous editions, except C, which we know was certainly corrected by Sir T. B. himself. But even this cannot be implicitly adopted, because (as has been before mentioned,) some words have been added in subsequent editions which bear evident marks of genuineness.

Lastly, the edition published immediately after Sir T. B.'s death (M), though claiming, like the previous editions, to be "corrected and amended," does not profess to contain any special corrections or improvements derived from the author's own hand

There is in fact, therefore, no edition that can be considered to be of authoritative value, and accordingly each editor has had to select or form a text for himself, which is entitled to more or less respect simply in proportion to the amount of care apparently bestowed upon it, and also according to the critical principles by which the editor has been guided. For some of Sir Thomas Browne's editors have thought it their business to improve his work by correcting faults of grammar, and altering awkward or obscure words and sentences. In some cases these emendations must be admitted to be manifest improvements, in others the value of the alteration is less evident, so that some persons may consider the genuine readings to be intrinsically superior to the unauthorized corrections. But, however this may be, the present Editor has been content with a humbler object, and has endeavoured to show, not what Sir Thomas Browne might or could or should have written, but what there is reason to believe that he really did write,¹—and this has been no easy task.

¹ As the only exception to this rule it may be stated that the example of all the previous editors of the present century has been followed, in the omission or alteration of a few coarse words and expressions—in this

It seems right to mention exactly the method that has been adopted, in order that future editors may be able to judge how far the results are reliable and satisfactory, and how far they require correction or additional confirmation. All the previous editions (with about three exceptions,) have been examined more or less carefully, but only those published in Sir T. B's life-time (A to L) have been collated throughout,² and constantly used as authorities for fixing the text, the others have only been quoted occasionally.

The most important contribution to the correction of the text is the list of Errata in ed 1643 (C), all of which (with one exception,³) have been adopted.

Another means of emendation was furnished by the corrections in the text of some of the copies of ed 1645 (E), which have been adopted, with six exceptions.³

The readings of the authorized edition 1643 (C) have of course been preferred to those of the two edition there are five such cases, at pp 59, 90, 107, 111, 120. In two other places (p 35 l 15 62 25) the text would have been amended, if there had been sufficient authority for doing so.

² For this collation I am indebted to my friend and fellow-townsmen, Mr T H Corb, M A., of Sid Suss Coll, Cambridge, who has also given me his valuable assistance in the correction of the press throughout the greater part of the work.

spurious ones (A, B), except in *three cases, where some carelessness on the part of the author may be suspected

In other cases, ed 1682 (L) has been taken as the basis of this edition, simply because it was the last that was published during the author's life-time, but there seemed to be no reason why it should be followed when an apparently better reading was found in one or more of the earlier editions. In these cases, however, great latitude must be allowed for differences of taste and judgement, and probably in future editions several readings will be preferred that have been rejected in this

With respect to the antique orthography which has been adopted, (not in accordance with the opinion of the present Editor) the spelling of ed 1682 (L) has been followed, as being sufficiently antiquated to please those persons who dislike reading an old author in a modern dress, and at the same time not so far removed from the spelling of the present day as to give much offence to any one. It is far less antique than that of some of the older editions, and may be supposed to represent the latest type of spelling in use during the author's life—it also agrees more nearly with the spelling adopted in the Letter to a Friend, and the Christian Morals. The reader,

however, must not be surprised to find a considerable want of uniformity in the mode of spelling the same words,¹ which is not to be attributed to carelessness on the part of either the Editor or the Printer

The same remarks apply to the use of capital letters, which in this edition (with a few uniform exceptions) agrees with the system (if it can be so called) adopted in ed. 1682 (L). But these are matters of comparatively little consequence, which do not concern the meaning of the author

Of much more importance is the punctuation, in which no edition, either ancient or modern, has been implicitly followed, but which has been freely altered wherever the Editor thought that by so doing the obscurities of the writer's style could be better explained. Where, however, the meaning of a sentence was not only obscure, but also doubtful, it seemed unfair to impose upon the reader the Editor's interpretation, and therefore in these cases the old punctuation (generally that of ed. 1682) has been preserved, in order that the reader may form his own judgement as to the sense of the passage. In some few cases the Latin translation has been quoted, in order to explain the obscurity of the original English

In the hope of being useful to future editors the Various Readings are given very fully, and it is hardly to be expected that many important ones will be discovered hereafter. The variations in the copies of the edition of 1645 (D and E) seem to indicate the possibility that similar differences may exist in other editions,² and if this should at any time be found to be the case, fresh sources of improvement to the text (or at least additional authoritative readings,) will crop up.²

In writing the Notes (which are almost entirely confined to the explanation of the text) it has been found occasionally very difficult to decide what to notice, and what to pass over stcco pcede. The explanation of historical allusions and of unusual words has been for the most part relegated to the Index, so that those persons who do not need them will not be annoyed by having such matters brought before their notice. The labours of my predecessors have been freely used, and (it is believed) as freely acknowledged, whenever a special acknowledgment seemed to be required, but certainly in several passages where I have most wanted assistance, I have found none.¹ Of course I shall not be surprised if some of my readers make the same complaint about myself.

² I am myself inclined to suspect that all the copies of 1656 (F) and of 1659 (G) are not exactly similar, but as I have never had the opportunity of examining two copies of these editions (respectively) at the same time, I cannot speak with certainty on the point. Perhaps also it may be the case with ed. 1682 (L), at least, Mr Willis Bund's text (Z), which he says is taken from that edition, differs very much from the copy which I have used.

In connexion with this subject it should be stated that while I have endeavoured to mention some public library in which each edition may (respectively) be consulted, there are not the copies which have been collated for this edition which were almost exclusively contained in the collections of Wilkin and Gardiner.

The Index is intended to contain a tolerably complete list of the strange words used by Sir T. B., which may possibly be useful to future lexicographers. Peace's list of words (V) and Gardiner's short Glossary (W) are incorporated in it, and it has had the benefit of the supervision of the Rev C. B. MOUNT, M.A., late Fellow of New College, Oxford, who has been reading the Religio Medici for the forthcoming English Dictionary edited by Dr Murray for the Philological Society.

Several additions have been made to the bibliographical lists given by Wilkin and Gardiner, so that the catalogue of editions is probably nearly complete.²

Instead of giving a full account of Sir T. B., after the admirable Life by Johnson, and the exhaustive "Supplementary Memoir" by Wilkin, I have drawn up a Chronological Table of the principal events relating to him and his contemporaries.³ All that need be added here is that in 1840, about five years after the publication of Wilkin's edition, his coffin was found accidentally in the chancel of the church of St. Peter's Mancroft, in Norwich, with a curious inscription, written probably by his son Edward,¹ which gave rise to an antiquarian discussion that would have amused both Father and Son.

¹ In the case of some few passages in the Religio Medici I have been almost inclined to believe that Sir T. B. in after life might have confessed (as Coleridge did about some of his own youthful lines,) "Hang me if I know or ever did know, the meaning of them though my own composition" (see Notes and Queries, 1880, vol. 1, p. 277.)

The curious way in which some quaint passages in his writings were illustrated in his own person, is too remarkable to be left unnoticed. He says, "When there are no less than three hundred sixty-five days to determine their lives in every year, . . . that [any persons] should wind up upon the day of their nativity, is indeed a remarkable coincidence."² He was himself an instance of this "remarkable coincidence," for he died on his seventy-seventh birthday.

Again, he calls it a "tragical abomination" for us "to be knaved out of our graves, to have our skulls made drinking-bowls . . . to delight and sport our enemies."³ Would he have been much better satisfied if he could have foreseen that his skull, after being "knaved out of his grave," would be kept under a glass case in the Museum at the Norwich Hospital?

² Letter to a Friend, § 8, p. 133.

³ Urn Burial, ch. 3, p. 30, ed. Bohn, where "knaved" is changed into "gnawed." To knave is to thieve, cheat, steal.

Once more, he says that "He that lay in a golden urn eminently above the earth, was not like to find the quiet of his bones many of these urns were broke by a vulgar discoverer in hope of enclosed treasure"¹ Of this thievish propensity also he narrowly escaped furnishing an example, for if the inscription on his coffin, with its enigmatical statement about the change of lead into gold, had been placed "eminently above the earth," his "spagyric body" would hardly have been left at peace for one hundred and sixty years

In the course of this work I have troubled so many of my friends with queries and requests of various kinds, that it would appear ostentatious and pedantic if I were to attempt to enumerate them all I am, however, none the less thankful to them for their assistance, without which I am quite sensible that the work would have been far more imperfect than it is But I must especially mention my obligation to the Rev W D MACRAY, M A, F S A, for his constant kindness in consulting in the Bodleian Library books which I had no opportunity of using myself —and I wish also (if I may do so without impertinence,) to express my sense of the great utility of Notes and Queries, to which (besides other advantages,) I owe my introduction to Mr WILKIN'S Son, and the use of his Father's books.

The portrait of Sir Thomas Browne which forms the vignette to this volume was engraved by the late C. H. Jeens from a painting in the Library of the Royal College of Physicians of London. The name of the artist is unknown, but the donor of the picture is conjectured to be Dr Edward Browne, son of Sir Thomas Browne, and a well-known London physician, who was President of the College in 1704

Let me end this Preface with two short extracts from Sir T. B.'s writings, one for the consideration of editors and commentators, the other for that of critics and reviewers —

"I have seen a grammarian tower and plume himself over a single line in Horace, and show more pride in the construction of one Ode than the author in the composure of the whole book"—Rel Med, II. 8, p. 108.

"Bring candid eyes unto the perusal of men's works, and let not zealism or detraction blast well-intended labours"—Chr Mor, II. 2, p. 186

NOTE ON THE DISCOVERY OF THE REMAINS OF SIR THOMAS BROWNE IN 1840

By ROBERT FITCH,¹ ESQ, F G S [Extracted from the Proceedings of the Archæological Institute, 1847]

"In August, 1840, some workmen, who were employed in digging a vault in the chancel of the church of St Peter's Mancroft, Norwich, accidentally broke, with a blow of the pick-axe, the lid of a coffin, which proved to be that of [Sir Thomas Browne,] whose residence within its walls conferred honour on Norwich in olden times. This circumstance afforded me an opportunity of inspecting the remains. The bones of the skeleton were found to be in good preservation, particularly those of the skull, the forehead was remarkably low and depressed, the head unusually long, the back part exhibiting an uncommon appearance of depth and capaciousness, the brain was considerable in quantity, quite brown and unctuous, the hair profuse and perfect, of a fine auburn colour, similar to that in the portrait presented to the parish by Dr Howman, and exhibited at the meeting of the Institute in 1847, and which is carefully preserved in the vestry of St Peter's Mancroft The coffin-plate, which was also broken, was of brass, in the form of a shield, and it bore the following quaint inscription —

‘Amplissimus Vir

ren-is Octobris, Anno Dⁿⁱ 1682, hoc

Convertit’

“I succeeded in taking a few impressions¹ from the plate, and have presented one, with a counter-impression, to the Institute, to be deposited amongst the collections of the Society

“There was another singular circumstance connected with the discovery, the lead of which the coffin was made was completely decomposed and changed to a carbonate, crumbling at the touch ’ * * * *

² [One of these impressions I have seen and have thus been enabled to correct two minute errors in Mr. Fitch's copy of the inscription.]

APPENDIX No III

BRIEF NOTICES OF FORMER EDITORS OF THE "RELIGIO MEDICI"

THOMAS CHAPMAN, who has the credit of being the first modern editor of the Religio Medici, died in or near London, August, 1834, at the early age of twenty-two. Of his brief life, which gave promise of future literary activity, nothing has to be said but that his father was a London merchant, that he was born August, 1812, and after passing about six years at the Charterhouse, was entered at Laster College, Oxford, in February, 1830, that he edited the Religio Medici in 1831, and that he took his B.A. degree (with a second class in Litt. Human.) about three months before his death.

ALEXANDER YOUNG, D.D., an American divine and historian, and the first trans-Atlantic editor of any of Sir T. B.'s works, born 1801, died 1854. He edited a series of works with the title, "Library of Old English Prose Writers," (the third volume of which (Cambridge, 1831,) contains the "Miscellaneous Works of Sir T. B.") and wrote "An Account of the Pilgrim Fathers," (Boston, 1841). There is a notice of him in Allen's American Biogr. Dict., and in Ripley and Dana's New American Cyclop.

SIMON WILKIN, F L S , to whom Sir T B's readers are more indebted than to any other single person, was born near Norwich, July, 1790. He succeeded in early life to a handsome fortune, which left him at leisure to indulge in literary and scientific pursuits, especially botany and entomology. Having lost all his property by a disastrous speculation in some paper-mills, he established himself as a printer and publisher at Norwich, where he earned an honorable place in the list of literary booksellers by the publication of a variety of elegant works, and especially by his edition of Sir T B's Works and Correspondence (1835), on which he had expended the leisure of a dozen years, and with which his name is inseparably connected. During his residence at Norwich he took an active part in the establishment of the local Museum and Literary Institution, both of which still continue to flourish. In 1837 he removed to London, and he died at Ilampstead July, 1862. A sketch of his life by his son appeared in the Trans of the Linnean Soc, and another in the Baptist Mag. for May, 1863, the former dealing more with his literary and scientific character, the latter with his religious and private life.

JAMES AUGUSTUS ST JOHN, "traveller, linguist, author, and editor," was born in Wales in 1800, and removed to London about 1817. He was for a time sub-editor of J S Buckingham's Oriental Herald, and during a long and active literary life published numerous works, of which no one requires to be specially noticed here. His edition of the Religio Medici, and Hydriothaphia, appeared in 1833, and he also edited Bunyan's

Pilgrim's Progress, More's Utopia, Locke's Philosophical Works, Milton's Prose Works, and Bacon's New Atlantis. He died in 1875. There is a notice of him in Walford's Men of the Time, and in Allibone's Dict. of English Literature.

JOHN PRACE was born in Bristol in 1785, was for forty years keeper of the City Library, and died unmarried on Durdham Down in 1861. He at one time, rather late in life, thought of entering Holy Orders, and in 1824 kept some terms at Cambridge with that object, but this intention was given up on account of the failure of his voice. Owing to delicate health in early life he had (he says) but a broken education, or no education at all (Arion p. 46). He was a most regular worshipper at the Cathedral, and in 1839 published anonymously An Apology for Cathedral Services, dedicated to the Poet Wordsworth, with whom he was intimate. He was a man of much quaint humour, with various peculiarities and prejudices, e.g. against rhinoceros and the penny postage, and especially his "defiance of modern punctuation" (p. 240), evinced in his abhorrence of commas, colons, and semi colons. Shortly after his death was published a volume of detached thoughts, put together by himself, with the punning title Arionata Pens, and the colophon, Par tibi, to which is prefixed a biographical preface, the source of the preceding notice.

HENRY GARDINER, M.A., who was loved and respected by all who knew him, was born in Surrey in 1815, was educated for a surgeon, and came up to Oxford in 1839, rather later in life than usual, with the intention of taking a medical degree. This intention he did not carry out, but after residing several years in Oxford as a member of Exeter College, (during which time he edited the Religio Medici and Christian Morals in 1845,) he entered Holy Orders in 1846. He was presented to the living of Catton, near York, in 1859, and died unmarried in 1864. He was preparing a new edition of the Religio Medici, &c., at the time of his death.

JAMES T. FIELDS, an American author and publisher, born 1816, died April, 1881. He was for many years an active partner in the publishing house of Ticknor and Fields at Boston, and retired from business about 1870. He reprinted Gardiner's edition of the Religio Medici, &c., with the addition of the Hydriotaphia, and extracts from Sir T. B.'s Letters, and other works, 1862. He paid several visits to this country and was acquainted with most of the notable men of letters in England and America. He gave some lectures about his intercourse with eminent men in England, and also wrote an interesting series of papers in the Atlantic Monthly (1871) on the same subject, which were republished by himself under the title, Yesterdays with Authors, Boston, 1872. There is a notice of him in Allibone's Dict. of Authors, and Ripley and Dana's New Amer. Cyclop., and a Memoir has since been published.

APPENDIX No. IV.

LIST OF EDITIONS.

RELIGIO MEDICI.

1. *English Editions*¹

A. 1642 Small 8vo London, Crooke.

There is no printed title-page, but an engraved frontispiece, representing a man falling from a rock into the sea, but caught by a hand issuing from the clouds. The motto, "à cælo salus," and the words, "Religio Medici," are engraved on the plate, and at the foot, "Printed for Andrew Crooke, 1642 Will Marshall sen" It contains nothing but the text, beginning (on p 1) "For my religion," &c, and ending (on p 190), "Thy will be done," &c. Contains 25 lines in a page, and said to be extremely rare. (Bodl Libr Oxford)

A facsimile reprint was published by Elliot Stock, London, 1883

B 1642. Small 8vo London Crooke.

No printed title-page, but the same engraved frontispiece as in A. It contains 26 lines in a page, with only the text, which ends on p 159, and agrees generally with A. Wilkin thinks this edition was probably the later of the two. The variations are chiefly orthogra-

¹ A few other editions, mentioned by bibliographers, are omitted in this list, because the Editor has not met with any satisfactory evidence of their existence

phical, in other cases the readings of B are generally (but not always) preferable. (British Museum)

C 1643 Small 8vo London, Crooke

No printed title-page, but an engraved frontispiece with the same device, and the following words at the foot of the plate 'A true and full copy of that which was most imperfectly and surreptitiously printed before under the name of Religio Medici Printed for Andrew Crooke, 1643'

It contains, when complete 1 "A Letter sent [from Sir Thomas Browne to Sir Kenelm Digby] upon the Information of Animadversions to come forth, upon the imperfect and surreptitious Copy of Religio Medici, whilst this true one was going to the Presse,"—2 Sir Kenelm Digby's answer,—3 a short address from "A B," "To such as have, or shall peruse the Observations upon a former corrupt Copy of this Booke,"—4 a list of more than thirty Errata (many of which were overlooked or neglected in most of the subsequent editions),—5 a preface from Sir Thomas Browne "To the Reader,"—and 6 the text (ending on p 183) much enlarged divided into two Parts each of which is subdivided into Sections This is the first authorized edition (British Museum)

D 1645 Small 8vo London, Crooke

A careless reprint of C, with only about one-fourth of the Errata corrected The text ends on p 174 This appears to be the second authorized edition. (Bodl. Libr Oxford)

E 1645 Small 8vo. London, Crooke

This is apparently the same edition as the preceding, but with various corrections made in some of the sheets while they were being printed off. It appears to have been unknown to Wilkin (though he had three copies of D in his collection), as, whenever he refers to "ed 1645," he quotes the reading found in D. This was probably reckoned as the second authorized edition: (Bodl Libr Oxford)

1648(?) Small 8-o London

An edition of this date is mentioned by Watt (Biblioth Britanu), but neither Wilkin nor Gardiner ever saw it, nor has the present Editor been able to discover a copy. It is probable that between 1645 and 1656 an edition was published which was reckoned the third authorized edition, as I is called the fourth.

A MS note in Hicks copy of ed 1643 (now in the Bodleian Library at Oxford) seems to point to an edition in 1654 (the date of the Preface to his Annotations), but of this, also the present Editor has been unable to discover the existence.

F. 1656 Small 8-o London, 1600

The usual frontispiece title, with the date altered, and then the following printed title page: 'Religio Medici. The fourth Edition, corrected and amended. With Annotations never before published, upon all the obscure passages therein." The former part of the volume (to p 174) is a reprint of F. Then follows another title page (Annotations upon Religio Medici), with the date 1659 (not 1656), forming the first page of sheet M,

* In order to distinguish the two volumes it may be mentioned that at p 11, l 7, D has ha e and I ha e, at p 88 l 1, D has neatest and F, est, and at p 153 l 6 D has dith but and F, soth not. These are probably the only three places in which the reading of D better than that of F. (See in this edition, p 14, l 3. p 65 l 30. p 109, l 27.)

* The words 'corrected and amended' are found in the title pages of several of the old editions, which cannot fairly lay claim to any such credit.

the pagination of which is incorrect. The Preface is dated March, 1654, and the Annotations end on p 297. These are supposed to have been written by Thomas Keck (see Wilkins Preface), and are learned and useful, but unnecessarily prolix and tedious (British Museum).

G 1659 Small 8 o London, Crook

A newly engraved frontispiece with the usual device and the date 1660. The printed title "Religio Medici" The fifth Edition, corrected and amended. With Annotations new, &c. Also, Observations by Sir Kenelm Digby, now newly added. At the back of the title page is a list of four Errata, one of which (at least in the copies examined for this edition) is no erratum at all. This volume is apparently the same as the preceding, only the prefatory matter having been reprinted,¹ and with the addition of Digby's 'Observations upon Religio Medici,' which has a separate title page and pagination, and is called 'The third Edition corrected and enlarged,' pp 77 (British Museum).

H 1659 Small Fol London, Flins

Appended to the third edition of the Pseudodoxia Epidemica, and prefixed to the Hydrotophia and The Garden of Cyrus. Title "Religio Medici whereunto is added, &c. by Thomas Brown, Doctor of Physick. Printed for the Good of the Commonwealth." A reprint probably of F, but beginning with the Author's address

² The spelling of various words is altered but the readings agree exactly (so far as has been observed) and even the mistake of Ocpidus for Oedipus (p 10) has been retained p 2 col 2).

"To the Reader," the text is printed in double columns, and ends on p 29. (Bodl Libr. Oxford)

I 1669 Small 8vo London, Crook

A reprint of G, ending on p 379, called, "the sixth Edition, corrected and amended" (British Museum)

J 1672 Small 4to London, Crook

At the end of the sixth edition of the Pseudodoxia Epidemica, a reprint of I, but with some variations, and without the usual frontispiece, called, "the seventh Edition, corrected and amended," ending on p 144 (Bodl Libr. Oxford)

K 1678 Small 8vo London, Scot, Basset, &c

A reprint of I, with the usual frontispiece, and several alterations in the text, some of which may have been accidental, while others can hardly have been made during the Author's life without his authority¹. It omits "A B s" address, "To such as have," &c, and is called, "the seventh Edition, corrected and amended," it ends on p 374 (Trin Coll Dublin)

L 1682 Small 8vo London, Scot, Basset, &c

A reprint of K, with the usual frontispiece, called, "the eighth Edition, corrected and amended," and ending on p 374. This was the last edition published during the Author's life (Med Chir Soc London)

M 1685 Fol London, Scott, Basset, &c

In the first collective edition of Browne's works, 1686; a reprint probably of J, called, "the eighth Edition, corrected and amended." This edition is said to have been edited by Dr (afterwards Abp) Tenison, but there is probably no reason for this statement, except that

N 1736 8vo London, Curll

Title, "Sir Thomas Browne's Religio Medici. or, the Christian Religion, as professed by a Physician; freed from Priest-craft and the Jargon of Schools A Cælo Salus The tenth Edition," pp 103 A short biographical notice prefixed, and a few notes interspersed The Latin quotations and phrases in the text are translated, and all the prefatory matter is omitted, together with the "Annotations" and "Observations" Probably very scarce,—never seen by Wilkin or Gardiner (Bodl Libr. Oxford)

O 1736 12mo London, Torbuck

A newly engraved and much larger frontispiece Title, "Religio Medici, by Sir Thos Browne, Knt M D A New Edition corrected and amended, with Notes and Annotations never before published, upon all the obscure passages therein To which is added, The Life of the Author Also, Sir Kenelm Digby's Observations" Contains the usual matter, with Keck's Annotations distributed at the bottom of the pages, instead of all together at the end of the treatise, also, a few additional Notes, a short Life of the Author, and a Table of Contents at the end of the volume The text seems to be a reprint of L, with a few variations (British Museum)

P 1738 12mo London, Torbuck

Title, "Religio Medici, or the Religion of a Physician By Sir Tho Browne, Knt M D The eleventh Edition corrected and amended, with Notes," &c &c. A new title-page, containing a sort of Table of Contents in double columns, attached to the unsold copies of O. (Wilkin, Gardiner)

Q 1754 Small 8vo Edinburgh, printed by W. Ruddiman, Jun

Title, "Religio Medici By Sir Tho Browne, Knt M D. With the Life of the Author To which is added Sir Kenelm Digby's Observations Also Critical Notes upon all the obscure Passages therein, never before published The tenth Edition carefully corrected'

Containing the usual prefatory matter, with copious Notes, partly original, and partly abridged from Keck's Annotations, carefully edited, but with very numerous unauthorized alterations in the text, which appears to be taken mainly from K or L. Probably very scarce,—unknown to Wilkin and Gardiner (Univ Libr Edinb)

R 1831 12mo Oxford, Vincent

Title, "Religio Medici By Sir Thomas Brown Kt M D" Contains a short notice by the Editor, 'T C' (viz Thomas Chapman, then an undergraduate of Exeter College, Oxford,) the usual old prefatory matter, a selection of Keck's Annotations, with a few additional Notes by the Editor, and the text probably reprinted from J or M, with a few alterations (Radl Libr Oxford)

S 1831 Small 8vo Cambridge (US), Hilliard and Brown

In the "Miscellaneous Works of Sir Thomas Browne," forming the third volume of a series called "Library of Old English Prose Writers," edited by the Rev Alexander Young, D D, of Boston The volume contains also Hydrotopia, and the Letter to a Friend, together with some extracts from Vulgar Errors. The Editor states in his Preface that the Notes are for the most part selected from Keck's Annotations,¹ but he does not specify the edition from which the text is taken (Only the title-page and preface seen by the present Editor.)

I 1835 8vo London, Pickering

In the second volume of Browne's Works (4 vols) carefully edited by Simon Wilkin, F.L.S., and called "the fifteenth Edition" (which it certainly is not). The text is mainly taken from C, but with numerous alterations taken from the MSS and the other printed editions. Under the text there is a notice of the principal various readings, and a copious collection of Notes, partly selected from Keck's, and partly original, and Digby's "Observations" are added at the end. There is also a list of "Additions and Corrections" (pp. vii-viii), chiefly caused by Wilkin's having overlooked the table of Errata in C until his own edition was printed off (British Museum).

U 1838 Small 8vo London, Rickerby

Prefixed to the Hydriotaphia, edited by J. A. St. John. Contains the usual old prefatory matter, and Digby's "Observations," also a "Preliminary Discourse," and Notes by the Editor, and a useful Table of Contents. The text is probably a reprint of L. (Bodleian Oxford).

V 1844 8vo London, Longman

Prefixed to the Christian Morals, carefully edited by John Peace, with a Preface by the Editor, a useful Table of Contents, a selection of "resembling passages from ¹ These, he says, were "first published in 1654." If this statement is correct, the edition of 1634 has escaped the researches of Wilkin Gardiner, and the present Editor will be the missing edition mentioned above.

Cowper's Task," and a copious Index of unusual words. It omits all Notes except the few inserted in the margin by the Author himself. The text is a careful reprint of C, with a few alterations. (British Museum)

Republished by Lea and Blanchard, Philadelphia, 1844.

W 1845 Small 8vo London, Pickering

Prefixed to the Letter to a Friend and the Christian Morals. Carefully edited by the Rev Henry Gardiner, M A, of Exeter College, Oxford, with a Preface by the Editor, and numerous Notes, partly original, partly from Keck's Annotations, a marginal analysis of the different sections, and a useful Glossary of unusual words and phrases. It is called "the eighteenth Edition (in English),"—which, however, it certainly is not. The Editor "carefully collated the text with three of the MSS and with the most trustworthy of the editions" (British Museum)

1848 16mo Philadelphia, Lea and Blanchard

In a volume containing also Christian Morals (Mentioned on the authority of Mr J T Fields)

X 1852 Small 8vo London, H G Bohn

In the second volume of Browne's Works, forming part of "Bohn's Antiquarian Library,"—a reprint of Z, with the "Additions and Corrections" duly inserted in the text—still called "the fifteenth Edition" (British Museum)

1862 Small 8vo Boston (U S), Ticknor and Fields

Prefixed to the Letter to a Friend, Christian Morals, Urn Burial, and other papers. Edited by J T F. (viz James T Fields). It contains the text and a selection of Notes, both taken apparently from Gardiner's edition (W), and a "Biographical Sketch of the Author"

A reprint of the preceding, called, on the back of the title-page, the "second Edition" (Editor)

Z 1869 Small 8vo London, Sampson Low, Son, and Marston

Prefixed to the Hydriotaphia and the Letter to a Friend, edited, with an Introduction and Notes, by J W Willis Bund, M A, LL B It is stated in the Preface that the text is taken from L, but if this is correct, the copy used by Mr Bund must be very different from that used by the present Editor (British Museum)

AA 1874 Small 8vo London, Rivingtons

Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by W P Smith, M A, for the series of "English School Classics" Wilkin's text, as given in Bohn's edition (X), has been followed, with a few slight alterations (British Museum)

2 Latin Translation

i 1644 12mo Lugd Bat Hack.

No printed title-page, but an engraved frontispiece with the same device as in the English editions, but reversed, and at the foot of the plate the words, "LUGD BATAVORUM, Apud Franciscum Hackium, A^o 1644." It contains 1 a short Latin address from the translator, John Merryweather, to the Reader,—2 the Author's Preface,—3 three copies of Latin verses, "In Religionem Medici Latinitate donatam,"—4 the text translated from the English edition of 1643, and ending on p 242,—5. an "Anacephalæosis," &c,—and 6 a list of Errata It is probably scarce, as Wilkin had never seen a copy. (Exeter Coll, Oxford)

2. 1644. 12mo. [Paris]

The usual frontispiece-title, and the words, "Juxta Exemp Lug Batavor" It contains 244 pp. of text (some of those at the end of the volume being numbered wrongly), and 3 pp of "Anacephalæsis" the French verses in Pt II § 4 are omitted This is probably the edition mentioned by Merryweather in a letter to Sir T B (vol III p 486, ed Bohn), as follows — "When I came to Paris the next year after [1644?], I found it printed again, in which edition both the Epistles were left out, and a Preface by some papist put in their place, in which, making use of and wresting some passages in your book, he endeavoured to show that nothing but custom and education kept you from their Church" The volume is probably scarce, as Gardiner appears never to have seen it (British Museum)

3. 1644. 12mo. Lugd Bat, Hack

A reprint of No 1, the text ending on p 235 This is probably the edition mentioned by Merryweather, as follows — "I see Hackius, the Leyden printer, hath made a new impression, as is easily observable by the difference of the pages, and the omission of the Errata, which were noted in the first, though the title-page be the same in both" This edition also is probably scarce, as it is not noticed by Wilkin or Gardiner* (London Medical Society)

4. 1650. 12mo. Lugd Bat, Hack

A reprint of No 3, with the usual frontispiece-title, the text ending on p 235 (Univ Libr, Camb)

* Wilkin thought that No 4 was the edition mentioned by Merryweather in his letter to Sir Thomas Browne but if so, there must be some mistake in the date of the letter, viz, "Oct 1, 1649"

5 1652 Small 8vo Argent, Spoor

The usual frontispiece title, and at the foot of the plate the words "Religio Medici, cum Annotationibus. Argentorati, Sumptibus Friderici Spoor, 1652" It contains 1. the Editor's Preface, signed with the letters "L N M E M," which are supposed to mean, Levinus Nicolaus Moltkeus (or Moltkenius) Equus Mismiensis (or Mecklenburgensis, or Megalopolitanus),—2, 3, 4 the Prefaces of the Translator, the Author, and the Paris Editor,—5 the Latin text, with Annotations at the end of each section,—6 the "Anacephalæosis," &c,—7 a lengthy "Index Rerum quæ in Annotatis continentur,"—and 8. a list of Errata on the last page The Annotations are learned and useful, but intolerably prolix and tedious, and swell out the little book to pp 440 (British Museum.)

6 1665 Small 8vo Argent, Spoor.

Apparently, an exact reprint of No 5, except the Errata on the last page (British Museum)

7 1677 Small 8vo Argent, Spoor

Probably a reprint of No 6 (Wadh. Coll., Oxford)

8 1692 12mo Francof

Title, "De Religione Medici, in Latinum versus a J Merryweather, nunc vero Annotationibus a L N. M E. M," &c. Probably a reprint of No. 7 (Nutt's Catalogue, 1837)

9 1743 Small 8vo Eleutheropoli [i.e. Zurich]

Title, "Religio Medici Juxta exemplar Lugdunense." Probably very scarce (British Museum)

3 *Dutch Translation*1665 12mo Laege-duynen

After the usual engraved title, the following printed title, "Religio Medici Dat is Nootwendige beschrijvinge van Mr Thomas Browne," &c It contains a Preface by the Translator, (whose name is not mentioned, but who is said by some persons to have been John Grundahl,) a Table of Contents, and the text with a few Notes, pp 364 (British Museum)

An edition printed in 1668, at Amsterdam, is mentioned by Watt, Biblioth Britann

1683 12mo Laege-duynen

A reprint of the preceding, with additional Notes, Digby's "Observations," and an Index, making altogether about 550 pages (Wilkin)

4 *French Translation.*1668 12mo [La Haye]

The title is as follows "La Religion du Medecin, c'est à dire Description nécessaire par Thomas Brown touchant son Opinion accordante avec le pur service Divin d'Angleterre" It appears from pp 99 and 169 to have been printed in Holland, and is said to have been translated from the Dutch by Nicholas Lefebvre, contains pp. 360 (Advocates' Libr, Edinb)

Watt mentions also an ed in two vols, 1732 12mo.

5. German Translation.

1680. 4to. Leipz (Watt, Biblioth Britann.)

1746 8vo Prenzlau

Title, "Religion eines Arztes, nebst der Geschichte des Verfassers" Attributed by some persons to George Ventzky

Wilkin also mentions an edition in 4to Leipz 1680, by Christian Knorr, Baron of Rosenroth (calling himself Christian Peganius), which, however, he had never seen.

Sir Thomas Browne, in a letter to John Aubrey, dated March 14, 1672(3), says that the work had then been translated into High Dutch, and also into Italian, which latter translation neither Wilkin nor Gardiner, nor the present Editor, has ever met with

LETTER TO A FRIEND, &c

F 1690 Fol London, Brom

Title, "A Letter to a Friend, upon occasion of the Death of his intimate Friend By the learned Sir Thomas Brown, Knight, Doctor of Physick, late of Norwich" Said by the editor of the "Posthumous Works" to have been edited by Dr Edward Browne, son of Sir Thomas — probably scarce (British Museum)

Δ 1712 8vo London, Cull

In the volume entitled, 'Posthumous Works of the learned Sir Thomas Browne, Knt, M D, late of Norwich printed from his original Manuscripts,' &c &c (British Museum) There is a reprint title-page dated 1723 (British Museum)

Θ 1821 8vo Edinb, Blackwood

Edited by James Crossley, of Manchester, in the ninth volume of Blackwood's Magazine, ends at "sinning immortality," (p 146, l 25, of this edition) (British Museum)

Λ. 1822 12mo Edinb, Blackwood, and London, Cadell

Edited by James Crossley, with some other of Browne's smaller works, in a small volume entitled, "Tracts by Sir Thomas Browne, Knight, M D A New Edition" Probably scarce (British Museum)

S. 1831 Small 8vo Cambridge (U S), Hilliard and Brown

In the 'Miscellaneous Works of Sir Thomas Browne,' forming the third volume of a series called "Library of Old English Prose Writers," edited by the Rev Alex

Young, D D , of Boston, and containing also the Religio Medici and the Hydriotaphia, together with some extracts from the Vulgar Errors (Only the title-page and preface seen by the present Editor)

T 1835 8vo London, Pickering

In the fourth volume of Wilkin's edition of his works It is called (incorrectly) "the third Edition," and ends with Sect 30 Wilkin says, "From a collation with a MS copy in the British Museum (MS Sloane, 1862) several additional passages are given" (British Museum)

W 1845 Small 8vo London, Pickering

Edited by Gardiner, in the same volume with the Religio Medici and the Christian Morals It is called (incorrectly) "the fifth Edition," and ends with Sect 30, without any intimation that this is not the proper end of the Letter (British Museum)

X 1852 Small 8vo London, H G Bohn

In the third volume of the reprint of Wilkin's edition (T), called the "fifth Edition" (British Museum)

1862 Small 8vo Boston (U S) Ticknor and Fields

In the same volume with the Religio Medici, and other works Edited by J T Fields, and reprinted apparently from Gardiner's edition

Y 1862 Small 8vo Boston (U S), Ticknor and Fields

Z 1869 Small 8vo London, Sampson Low, Son, and Marston

Edited without curtailment by J W. Willis Bund, in the same volume with the Religio Medici (British Museum)

CHRISTIAN MORALS.

Σ 1716 12mo Cambridge, Crownfield (Univ Press)

Title, "Christian Morals by Sir Thomas Brown, of Norwich, M D, and Author of Religio Medici Published from the original and correct Manuscript of the Author, by John Jeffery, D D, Arch-Deacon of Norwich" Contains a Dedication from Mrs Littelton, Browne's daughter, to her relative the Earl of Buchan, and a Preface by Archdeacon Jeffery, with a few short Notes by the Author (British Museum)

Π 1756 Small 8vo London, Payne

Title, "Christian Morals by Sir Thomas Browne, of Norwich, M D, and Author of Religio Medici The second Edition, with a Life of the Author, by Samuel Johnson, and explanatory Notes" The Life by Johnson has been frequently republished, the Notes are short and useful, chiefly explanatory of the Author's strange words, they are generally quoted as if written by Johnson, but they are not attributed to him in the title-page of this edition, nor of the following, nor in any Preface (Coll of Phys, London)

Σ 1761 Small 8vo London, Stuart

Title, "True Christian Morals by Sir Thomas Browne, M D, Author of Religio Medici, &c with his Life written by the celebrated Author of the Rambler, and explanatory Notes The third Edition" A new title-page prefixed to the unsold copies of Π (Wilkin)

Y 1765. Small 8vo London

The existence of this second reprint title-page is given on the authority of Gardiner

T 1835 8vo London, Pickering

A reprint of Π in the fourth volume of Wilkin's edition of Browne's Works, with some additional Notes, "together with some various readings from MSS in the British Museum" It is called the third Edition (British Museum)

V. 1844 8vo London, Longman

A careful reprint of Z, edited by John Peace, with a useful Table of Contents, and a copious Index of unusual words appended to the Religio Medici (British Museum)

Φ 1845 8vo London, Washbourne

This edition is mentioned on the authority of Gardiner

W 1845 Small 8vo London, Pickering

Appended by Gardiner to his edition of the Religio Medici, with Notes partly original, and partly taken from Π It is called the sixth Edition (British Museum)

1848 16mo Philadelphia, Lea and Blanchard

In a volume containing also the Religio Medici. (Mentioned on the authority of Mr. Fields.)

X 1852 Small 8vo London, H G Bohn

In the third volume of Bohn's reprint of Wilkin's edition of Browne's Works,—called "the fourth Edition," which is certainly wrong (British Museum)

1862 Small 8vo Boston (U S), Ticknor and Fields.

Appended by J T Fields to his edition of the Religio Medici, it is apparently taken from Gardiner's edition (w)

Y 1862 Small 8vo Boston (U S), Ticknor and Fields.

Ψ 1863 8vo London, Rivingtons

Title, "Christian Morals, by Sir Thomas Browne, Kt , M D " A neat reprint, apparently of II, with a fac-simile of the title-page of that edition, and a portrait of the Author. (British Museum)

ADDENDA ET CORRIGENDA.

P 107, l 14 Keck thinks that by Nero Sir T. B. meant Tiberius, "whose name was Nero too," viz Tiberius Claudius Nero Cæsar, but perhaps it is more probable that he simply confused the two Emperors

P 119, l 28 at last, A, B, C, M, probably all the other old edd have at least This reading, and also the punctuation of p 120 ll 22, 23, are discussed in Notes and Queries, 1880, vol 11, pp 245, 451

P 267 In the note on p 63, l 11, Sir T. B.'s lost or projected Dialogue between two unborn infants is called a "whimical conceit," and treated as a mere jeu d'esprit. It may have been so, and so Wilkin in his note on this passage appears to have taken it, but upon further consideration it seems more likely to have been a serious, philosophical attempt to "handsomely illustrate our ignorance of the next" world (Urn Burial, ch. 4) by the inability of the unborn infants to understand the condition of this.

TO THE READER.

CERTAINLY that man were greedy of Life, who should desire to live when all the world were at an end, and he must needs be very impatient, who would repine at death in the society of all things that suffer under it. Had not almost every man suffered by the Press, or were not the tyranny thereof become universal, I had not wanted reason for complaint but in times wherein I have lived to behold the highest perversion of that excellent invention, the name of his Majesty defamed, the Honour of Parliament depraved, the Writings of both depravedly, anticipatively, counterfeitly imprinted; complaints may seem ridiculous in private persons, and men of my condition may be as incapable of affronts, as hopeless of their reparations. And truly, had not the duty I owe unto the importunity of friends, and the allegiance I must ever acknowledge unto truth, prevailed with me, the inactivity of my disposition might have made these sufferings continual, and time, that brings other things to light, should have satisfied me in the remedy of its oblivion. But because things evidently false are not onely printed, but many things of truth most falsly set forth, in this latter I could not but think my self engaged for, though we have no power to redress the former, yet in the other the reparation being within our selves, I have at present represented unto the world a full and intended Copy of that Piece, which was most imperfectly and surreptitiously published before

This, I confess, about seven years past, with some others of affinity thereto, for my private exercise and satisfaction, I had at leisureable hours composed ; which being communicated unto one, it became common unto many, and was by Transcription successively corrupted, untill it arrived in a most depraved Copy at the Press. He that shall peruse that work, and shall take notice of sundry particularities and personal expressions therein, will easily discern the intention was not publick, and, being a private Exercise directed to my self, what is delivered therein, was rather a memorial unto me, than an Example or Rule unto any other, and therefore, if there be any singularity therein correspondent unto the private conceptions of any man, it doth not advantage them, or if dissentaneous thereunto, it no way overthrows them. It was penned in such a place, and with such disadvantage, that, (I protest,) from the first setting of pen unto paper, I had not the assistance of any good Book whereby to promote my invention or relieve my memory ; and therefore there might be many real lapses therein, which others might take notice of, and more that I suspected my self. It was set down

many years past, and was the sense of my conceptions at that time, not an immutable Law unto my advancing judgement at all times , and therefore there might be many things therein plausible unto my passed apprehension, which are not agreeable unto my present self There are many things delivered Rhetorically, many expressions therein meerly Tropical, and as they best illustrate my intention , and therefore also there are many things to be taken in a soft and flexible sense, and not to be called unto the rigid test of Reason Lastly, all that is contained therein is in submission unto maturer discernments , and, as I have declared, shall no further father them than the best and learned judgments shall authorize them under favour of which considerations I have made its secrecy publick, and committed the truth thereof to every Ingenuous Reader

THE FIRST PART.

FOR my Religion, though there be several PART I Circumstances that might perswade the SECT. I World I have none at all, (as the general scandal of my Profession, the natural course of my Our Physician a Christian, Studies, the indifferency of my Behaviour and Discourse in matters of Religion, neither violently Defending one, nor with that common ardour and contention Opposing another,) yet, in despite hereof, I dare without usurpation assume the honourable Stile of a Christian. Not that I merely owe this Title to the Font, my Education, or the clime wherein I was born, (as being bred up either to confirm those Principles my Parents instilled into my unwary Understanding, or by a general consent proceed in the Religion of my Country,) but having in my riper years and confirmed Judgment seen and examined all. I find my self obliged by the Principles of Grace, and the Law of mine own Reason, to embrace no other Name but this. Neither doth herein my zeal so far make me forget the general Charity I owe unto Humanity, as rather to hate than

PART I pity Turks, Infidels, and (what is worse,) Jews ; rather contenting my self to enjoy that happy Stile, than maligning those who refuse so glorious a Title and of the Reformed Religion.

But, because the Name of a Christian is become too general to express our Faith, (there being a Geography of Religions as well as Lands, and every Clime distinguished not only by their Laws and Limits, but circumscribed by their Doctrines and Rules of Faith,) to be particular, I am of that Reformed new-cast Religion wherein I dislike nothing but the Name, of the same belief our Saviour taught, the Apostles disseminated, the Fathers authorized, and the Martyrs confirmed but by the sinister ends of Princes, the ambition and avarice of Prelates and the fatal corruption of times, so decayed, impaired, and fallen from its native Beauty, that it required the careful and charitable hands of these times to restore it to its primitive Integrity Now the accidental occasion whereupon, the slender means whereby, the low and abject condition of the Person by whom so good a work was set on foot, which in our Adversaries beget contempt and scorn, fills me with wonder, and is the very same Objection the insolent Pagans first cast at CHRIST and HIS Disciples

Differences of opinion need not separate Christians.

Yet have I not so shaken hands with those desperate Resolutions, (who had rather venture at large their decayed bottom, than bring her in to be new trimm'd in the Dock, who had rather promiscuously retain all, than abridge any, and obstinately be what they are, than what they have been,) as to stand in Diameter and Swords point with them We have reformed from them, not against them , for (omitting those Impropriations and Ferms of Scurrility betwixt us, which only difference our Affections, and not our Cause,) there is between us one common Name and Appellation, one Faith and necessary body of Principles common to us both , and therefore I am not scrupulous to converse and live with them, to enter their Churches in defect of ours, and either pray with them, or for them I could never perceive any rational Consequence from those many Texts which prohibit the Children of Israel to pollute themselves with the Temples of the Heathens ; we being all Christians, and not divided by such detested impieties as might profane our Prayers, or the place wherein we make them , or that a resolved Conscience may not adore her Creator any where, especially in places devoted to His Service , where, if their Devotions offend Him, mine may please Him , if theirs profane it, mine may hallow it Holy-water and Crucifix (dangerous to the common people,) deceive not my judgment, nor abuse my devotion at all I am, I confess, naturally inclined to that which misguided Zeal terms Superstition My common conversation I do acknowledge austere, my behaviour full of rigour, sometimes not without morosity , yet at my Devotion I love to use the civility of my knee, my hat, and hand, with all those outward and sensible motions which may express or promote my invisible Devotion I

PART I

PART I should violate my own arm rather than a Church, nor willingly deface the name of Saint or Martyr. At the sight of a Cross or Crucifix I can dispense with my hat, but scarce with the thought or memory of my Saviour. I cannot laugh at, but rather pity, the fruitless journeys of Pilgrims, or condemn the miserable condition of Fryars, for, though misplaced in Circumstances, there is something in it of Devotion. I could never hear the Ave-Mary Bell without an elevation, or think it a sufficient warrant, because they erred in one circumstance, for me to err in all, that is, in silence and dumb contempt. Whilst, therefore, they directed their Devotions to Her, I offered mine to GOD, and rectified the Errors of their Prayers by rightly ordering mine own. At a solemn Procession I have wept abundantly while my consorts, blind with opposition and prejudice, have fallen into an excess of scorn and laughter. There are, questionless, both in Greek, Roman, and African Churches, Solemnities and Ceremonies, whereof the wiser Zeals do make a Christian use, and stand condemned by us, not as evil in themselves, but as allurements and baits of superstition to those vulgar heads that look askant on the face of Truth, and those unstable Judgments that cannot consist in the narrow point and centre of Virtue without a reel or stagger to the Circumferencce.

SECT. IV
Of Reformations

As there were many Reformers, so likewise many Reformatations; every Country proceeding in a particular way and method, according

as their national Interest, together with their Constitution and Clime, inclined them, some angrily, and with extremity, others calmly, and with mediocrity, not rending, but easily dividing the community, and leaving an honest possibility of a reconciliation, which though peaceable Spirits do desire, and may conceive that revolution of time and the mercies of GOD may effect, yet that judgment that shall consider the present antipathies between the two extremes, their contrarieties in condition, affection, and opinion, may with the same hopes expect an union in the Poles of Heaven

PART I.

But (to difference my self nearer, and draw into a lesser Circle,) there is no Church whose every part so squares unto my Conscience, whose Articles, Constitutions, and Customs seem so consonant unto reason, and as it were framed to my particular Devotion, as this whereof I hold my Belief, the Church of England, to whose Faith I am a sworn Subject, and therefore in a double Obligation subscribe unto her Articles, and endeavour to observe her Constitutions. Whatsoever is beyond, as points indifferent, I observe according to the rules of my private reason, or the humour and fashion of my Devotion, neither believing this, because Luther affirmed it, or disproving that, because Calvin hath disavouched it. I condemn not all things in the Council of Trent, nor approve all in the Synod of Dort. In brief, where the Scripture is silent, the Church is my Text, where that speaks, 'tis but my Comment. where there is a

PART I joynt silence of both, I borrow not the rules of my Religion from Rome or Geneva, but the dictates of my own reason. It is an unjust scandal of our advisers, and a gross error in our selves, to compute the Nativity of our Religion from Henry the Eighth, who, though he rejected the Pope, refus'd not the faith of Rome, and effected no more than what his own Predecessors desired and assayed in Ages past, and was conceived the State of Venice would have attempted in our days. It is as uncharitable a point in us to fall upon those popular scurrilities and opprobrious scoffs of the Bishop of Rome, to whom, as a temporal Prince, we owe the duty of good language. I confess there is cause of passion between us by his sentence I stand excommunicated, Hutch is the best language he affords me, yet can no ear witness I ever returned him the name of Antichrist, Man of Sin, or W hole of Babylon. It is the method of Charity to suffice without reaction: those usual Satyrs and invectives of the Pulpit may perchance produce a good effect on the vulgar, whose ears are open to Rhetorick than Logick, yet do they in no wise confirm the faith of wiser Believers, who know that a good cause needs not to be patron'd by passion, but can sustain it self upon a temperate dispute.

SECT VI Disputes

avoided

I could never divide my self from any man upon the difference of an opinion, or be angry with his judgment for not agreeing with me in that from which perhaps within a few days I should dissent my self. I have no Genius to disputes in Religion, and have often thought it wisdom to decline them, especially upon a disadvantage, or when the cause of Truth might suffer in the weakness of my passion. Where we desire to be informed, 'tis good to contest with men above our selves, but to confirm and establish our opinions, 'tis best to argue with judgments below our own, that the frequent spoils and Victories over their reasons may settle in ourselves an esteem and confirmed Opinion of our own. Every man is not a proper Champion for Truth, nor fit to take up the Gauntlet in the cause of Verity. Many, from the ignorance of these Maxims, and an inconsiderate Zeal unto Truth, have too rashly charged the Troops of Error, and remain as Trophies to the enemies of Truth.

 A man may be in as just possession of Truth as of a City, and yet be forced to surrender, 'tis therefore far better to enjoy her with peace, than to hazard her on a battle. If, therefore, there rise any doubts in my way, I do forget them, or at least defer them till my better settled judgment and more mature reason be able to resolve them, for I perceive every man's own reason is his best Oedipus, and will, upon a reasonable truce, find a way to loose those bonds wherewith the subtleties of error have enchained our more flexible and tender judgements. In Philosophy, where Truth seems double fac'd, there is no man more Paradoxical than my self. but in Divinity I love to keep the Road, and, though not in an implicate yet an humble faith, follow the great wheel of the Church, by which I

PART I move, not reserving any proper Poles or motion from the Epicycle of my own brain By this means I leave no gap for Heresies, Schismes, or Errors, of which at present I hope I shall not injure Truth to say I have no taint or tincture I must confess my greener studies have been polluted with two or three, not any begotten in the latter Centuries, but old and obsolete, such as could never have been revived, but by such extravagant and irregular heads as mine for indeed Heresies perish not with their Authors, but, like the river Aethusa, though they lose their currents in one place, they rise up again in another One General Council is not able to extirpate one single Heresie it may be cancelled for the present but revolution of time, and the like aspects from Heaven, will restore it when it will flourish till it be condemned again For as though there were a Metempsychosis, and the soul of one man passed into another, Opinions do find, after certain Revolutions, men and minds like those that first begat them To see our selves again, we need not look for Platos ven every man is not only himself, there hath been many Diogenes, and as many Timons, though but few of that name men are liv'd over again, the world is now as it was in Ages past, there was none then, but there hath been some one since that parallels him, and is, as it were, his revived self

The second was that of Origen, That GOD would not persist in His vengeance for ever, but after a definite time of His wrath, He would release the damned Souls from torture Which error I fell into upon a serious contemplation of the great Attribute of GOD, His Mercy, and did a little cherish it in my self, because I found therein no malice, and ready weight to sway me from the other extremum of despair, whereunto Melancholy and Contemplative Natures are too easily disposed

A third there is, which I did never positively maintain or practise, but have often wished it had been consonant to Truth, and not offensive to my Religion and that is, the Prayer for the Dead, whereunto I was inclin'd from some charitable inducements, whereby I could scarce contain my Prayers for a friend at the ringing of a Bell, or behold his Corps without an Orison for his Soul. These opinions I never maintained with pertinacy, or endeavoured to enveagle any mans belief unto mine, nor so much as ever revealed or disputed them with my dearest friends, by which means I neither propagated them in others, nor confirmed them in my self, but suffering them to flame upon their own substance, without addition of new fuel, they went out insensibly of themselves. Therefore these Opinions, though condemned by lawful Councils, were not Heresies in me, but error lapses, and single Lapses of my understanding without a joynt depravity of my will. Those have not onely depraved understandings, but diseased affections, which cannot enjoy a singularity without an Heresie, or be the Author of an Opinion without they be of a Sect also. This was the villany of the first Schism of Lucifer, who was not content to err alone, but drew into his faction many Legions of Spirits, and upon this experience he tempted only Eve, as well understanding the Communicable nature of Sin, and that to deceive but one, was tacitely and upon consequence to delude them both.

 Judgment may do without offence or heresie for there is yet after all the Decrees of Councils and the niceties of the Schools, many things un-

1 The Eternity of God

I remember I am not alone, and therefore forget not to contemplate Him and His Attributes Who is ever with me, especially those two mighty ones. His Wisdom and Eternity. With the one I recreate, with the other I confound my understanding, for who can speak of Eternity without a solœcism, or think thereof without an Extasie? Time we may comprehend, tis but five days elder then our selves, and hath the same Horoscope with the World, but to retire so far back as to apprehend a beginning to give such an infinite start forwards as to conceive an end, in an essence that we affirm hath neither the one nor the other, it puts my Reason to St Paul's Sanctuary. My Philosophy dares not say the Angels can do it. GOD hath not made a Creature that can comprehend Him; 'tis a privilege of His own nature. I AM THAT I AM, was His own definition unto Moses, and 'twas a short one, to confound mortality, that durst question GOD, or ask Him what He was. Indeed, He onely is, all others have and shall be. But in Eternity there is no distinction of Persons and therefore that terrible term Predestination, which hath troubled so many weak heads to conceive, and the wisest to explain, is in respect to GOD no preconscious determination of our Estates to come, but a definitive blast of His Will already fulfilled, and at the instant that He first decreed it for to His Eternity, which is indivisible and all together, the last Trump is already sounded, the reprobates in the flame and the blessed in Abraham's bosom. St Peter speaks modestly, ^{St Luke xvi} when he saith, a thousand years to GOD are but as one day, for, to speak like a Philosopher, those continued instances of time which flow into a thousand years, make not to Him one moment what to us is to come, to His Eternity is present, His whole duration being but one permanent point without Succession, Parts, Flux, or Division.

There is no Attribute that adds more difficulty to the mystery of the Trinity, where, though in a relative way of Father and Son, we must deny a priority. I wonder how Aristotle ^{SECRET XII} could conceive the World eternal, or how he ^{Of the Holy Trinity} could make good two Eternities. His similitude ^{De Caelo 1} of a Triangle comprehended in a square doth ^{10 3} somewhat illustrate the Trinity of our Souls, and ^{See below, P 57} that the Triple Unity of GOD, for there is in us not three, but a Trinity of Souls, because there is in us, if not three distinct Souls, yet differing faculties, that can and do subsist apart in different Subjects and yet in us are so united as to make but one Soul and substance. If one Soul

2 The Wisdom
of GOD

That other Attribute wherewith I recreate my devotion, is His Wisdom, in which I am happy, and for the contemplation of this only, do not repent me that I was bred in the way of Study the advantage I have of the vulgar, with the content and happiness I conceive therein, is an ample recompence for all my endeavours, in what part of knowledge soever Wisdom is His most beauteous Attribute, no man can attain unto it, yet Solomon pleased GOD when he desired it. He is wise, because because He made them all but His greatest knowledge is in comprehending that He made not, that is, Himself And this is also the greatest knowledge in man For this do I honour my own profession, and embrace the Counsel even of the Devil himself had he read such a Lecture in Paradise as he did at Delphos, we had better known our selves, nor had we stood in fear to know him I know He is wise in all, wonderful in what we conceive, but far more in what we comprehend not, for we behold Him but asquint, upon reflex or shadow, our understanding is the back-parts or lower side of His Divinity, 12, &c therefore to prie into the maze of His Counsels is not only folly in man, but presumption even in Angels Like us, they are His Servants, not His Senators, He holds no Counsel, but that mystical thice Persons, there is but one mind that decrees

Nature There is no danger to profound these mysteries, no sanctum sanctorum in Philosophy The World was made to be inhabited by Beasts, but studied and contemplated by Man 'tis the Debt of our Reason we owe unto GOD, and the homage we pay for not being Beasts Without this, the World is still as though it had not been, or as it was before the sixth day, when as yet there was not a Creature that could conceive or say there was a World The Wisdom of GOD receives small honour from those vulgar Heads that rudely stare about, and with a gross rusticity admire His works those highly magnifie Him, whose judicious inquiry into His Acts, and deliberate research into His Creatures, return the duty of a devout and learned admiration Therefore,

Search while thou wilt and let thy Reason go
To chase some Truth even to the Abyss below Rally the scattered Causes and the Effects
Which Nature twists be able to untwist
It is thy Makers will, for unto none
But unto Reason can He e're be known
The Devils do know Thee but the ignorant Meteors
Build not Thy Glory but confound Thy Creatures Teach my endeavours so Thy works to read
That learning them in Thee, I may proceed
Give Thou my reason that instructive flight
Whose weary wings may on Thy hands still light Teach me to soar aloft, yet ever so,
When neer the Sun to stoop again below
Thus shall my humble Feathers safely hover,
And, though near Earth, more than the Heavens discover.
And then at last, when homeward I shall dive Rich with the Spoils of Nature, to my Hive,
There will I sit like that industrious Fly,
Buzzing Thy praises, which shall never die,
Till Death abrupts them, and succeeding Glory
Bid me go on in a more lasting story

And this is almost all wherein an humble Creature may endeavour to requite and some way to retribute unto his Creator for if not he that saith, "Loid, Loid," but he that doth the will of his Father, shall be saved, certainly our wills must be our performances, and our intents make out our Actions, otherwise our pious labours shall find anxiety in our Graves, and our best endeavours not hope, but fear, a resurrection

PART I

St Matth.
vii 21

There is but one first cause, and four second causes of all things Some are without efficient as GOD, others without matter, as Angels, some without form, as the first matter but every Essence, created or uncreated, hath its final cause, and some positive end both of its Essence and Operation This is the cause I grope after in the works of Nature, on this hangs the Providence of GOD To raise so beauteous a structure as the World and the Creatures thereof, was but His Art, but then sundry and divided operations, with their predestinated ends, are from the Treasure of His Wisdom In the causes, nature, and affections of the Eclipses of the Sun and Moon, there is most excellent speculation, but to profound farther, and to contemplate a reason why His Providence hath so disposed and ordered their motions in that vast cicle as to conjoyn and obscure each other, is a sweeter piece of Reason, and a diviner point of Philosophy Therefore sometimes, and in some things, there appears to me as much Divinity in Galen his books De Usu Partium, as in Suarez Metaphysics.

xxx 28

Natura nihil agit frustra, is the only indisputed Axiome in Philosophy There are no Grotesques in Nature, not anything framed to fill up empty Cantons, and unnecessary spaces In the most imperfect Creatures and such as were not preserved in the Ark, but having their Seeds and Principles in the womb of Nature are every where, where the power of the Sun is, in these is the Wisdom of His hand discovered Out of this rank Solomon chose the object of his admiration Indeed what Reason may not go to School to the wisdom of Bees, Ants and Spiders? what wise hand teacheth them to do what Reason cannot teach us? Rude heads stand amazed at those prodigious pieces of Nature Whales, Elephants, Diomedes and Camels, these, I confess, are the Colossus and majestick pieces of her hand but in these narrow Engines there is more curious Mathematicks and the civility of these little Citizens more neatly sets forth the Wisdom of their Maker Who admires not Regio Montanus his Fly beyond his Eagle, or wonders not more at the operation of two Souls in those little Bodies, than but one in the Trunk of a Cedar? I could never content my contemplation with those general pieces of wonder, the Flux and Reflux of the Sea, the increase of Nile, the conversion of the Needle to the North, and have studied to match and parallel those in the more obvious and neglected pieces of Nature, which without further travel I can do in the Cosmography of my self We carry with us the wonders we seek without us there is all Africa and her prodigies in us , we are that bold and adventurous piece of Nature, which he that studies wisely learns in a compendium what others labour at in a divided piece and endless volume

Thus there are two Books from whence I collect my Divinity, besides that written one of GOD, another of His servant Nature, that universal and publick Manuscript, that lies expans'd unto the Eyes of all those that never saw Him in the one, have discover'd Him in the other This was the Scripture and Theology of the Heathens the natural motion of the Sun made them more admire Him than its supernatural station did the Children of Israel, the ordinary effects of Nature wrought more admiration in them than in the other all His Miracles Surely the Heathens knew better how to joyn and read these mystical Letters than we Christians, who cast a more clueless Eye on these common Hieroglyphicks, and disdain to suck Divinity from the flowers of Nature Nor do I so forget GOD as to adore the name of Nature , which I define not, with the Schools, to be the principle of motion and rest, but that streight and regular line, that settled and constant course the Wisdom of GOD hath ordained the actions of His creatures, according to their several kinds To make a revolution every day is the Nature of the Sun, because of that necessary course which GOD hath ordained

PART I it, from which it cannot sweive out by a faculty from that voice which first did give it motion Now this course of Nature GOD seldome alters or perverts but, like an excellent Artist, hath so contrived His work that with the self same instrument without a new creation, He may effect His obscurest designs Thus He sweetneth the Water with a Wood, preserveth the Creatures in the Air, which the blast of His mouth might have as easily created, for GOD is like a skilful Geometrier who, when more easily and with one stroke of his Compass he might describe or divide a right line, had yet rather do this in a circle or longer way, according to the constituted and fore laid principles of his Art Yet this rule of His He doth sometimes pervert to requirunt the World with His Privogative lest the arrogancy of our reason should question His power and conclude He could not And thus I call the effects of Nature the works of GOD Whose hand and instrument she only is and therefore to ascribe His actions unto her is to devolve the honour of the principal agent upon the instrument which if with reason we may do, then let our hammers rise up and boast they have built our houses and our pens receive the honour of our writings I hold there is a general beauty in the works of GOD, and therefore no deformity in any kind or species of creature whatsoever I cannot tell by what Logick we call a Tord, a Bear, or an Elephant ugly, they being created in those outward shapes and figures which best expiess the actions of their inward forms, and having past that general

Visitation of GOD, Who saw that all that He had made was good, that is, conformable to His Will, which abhors deformity, and is the rule of order and beauty. There is no deformity but in Monstrosity, wherein, notwithstanding, there is a kind of Beauty, Nature so ingeniously contriving the irregular parts, as they become sometimes more remarkable than the principal Fabrick. To speak yet more narrowly, there was never any thing ugly or mis-shapen, but the Chaos, wherein, notwithstanding, (to speak strictly,) there was no deformity, because no form, nor was it yet impregnant by the voice of GOD. Now Nature is not at variance with Art, nor Art with Nature, they being both servants of His Providence. Art is the perfection of Nature. Were the World now as it was the sixth day, there were yet a Chaos. Nature hath made one World, and Art another. In brief, all things are artificial, for Nature is the Art of GOD.

This is the ordinary and open way of His Providence, which Art and Industry have in a good part discovered, whose effects we may foretell without an Oracle to foreshew these, is not Prophesie, but Prognostication. There is another way, full of Meanders and Labrynths, whereof the Devil and Spirits have no exact Ephemerides, and that is a more particular and obscure method of His Providence, directing the operations of individuals and single Essences, this we call Fortune, that serpentine and crooked line, whereby He drawst those actions His Wisdom intends, in a more unknown and secret way

PART I This cryptick and involved method of His Providence have I ever admired, nor can I relate the History of my life, the occurrences of my days, the escapes of dangers, and hits of chance, with a Beso las Manos to Fortune, or a bare Gramercy to my good Stars Abiahham might

 Province of Holland (of which the Grand Seignour proudly said, if they should trouble him as they did the Spaniard, he would send his men with shovels and pick-axes, and throw it into the Sea.) I cannot altogether ascribe to the ingenuity and industry of the people, but the mercy of GOD, that hath disposed them to such a thriving Genius, and to the will of His Providence, that disposeth her favour to each Country in their pic-ordinate season All cannot be happy at once, for, because the glory of one State depends upon the ruine of another, there is a revolution and vicissitude of their greatness, and must obey the swing of that wheel, not moved by Intelligences, but by the hand of GOD, whereby all Estates arise to their Zenith and Vertical points according to their predestinated periods For the lives, not only of men, but of Commonwealths, and the whole World, run not upon an Helix that still enlargeth, but on a Circle, where, arriving to their Meridian, they decline in obscurity, and fall under the Horizon again.

These must not therefore be named the effects SICUT XVIII of Fortune, but in a relative way, and as we term the term the works of Nature It was the ignorance of Fortune mans reason that begat this very name, and by used in a a careless term miscalled the Providence of relative

PART I culous devotion to say a prayer before a game at Tables, for even in sortilugus and matters of greatest uncertainty, there is a settled and pre-ordered course of effects. It is we that are blind, not Fortune, because our Eye is too dim to discover the mystery of her effects: we foolishly paint her blind, and hoodwink the Providence of the Almighty. I cannot justify that contemptible Proverb, That fools only are Fortunate, or that insolent Paradox, That a wise man is out of the reach of Fortune, much less those opprobrious epithets of Poets, Il hore, Bawd, and Strumpet. 'Tis, I confess, the common fate of men of singular gifts of mind to be destitute of those of Fortune, which doth not any way deject the Spirit of wiser judgements, who thoroughly understand the justice of this proceeding, and being enriched with higher donatives, cast a more careless eye on these vulgar parts of felicity. It is a most unjust ambition to desire to engross the mercies of the Almighty: not to be content with the goods of mind without a possession of those of body or Fortune, and it is an error worse than hecistic, to adore these complementary and circumstantial pieces of felicity, and undervalue those perfections and essential points of happiness wherein we resemble our Maker. To wiser desires it is satisfaction enough to deserve, though not to enjoy, the favours of Fortune: let Providence provide for Fools. 'Tis not partiality, but equity in GOD, Who deals with us but as our natural Parents: those that are able of Body and Mind He leaves to their deserts; to those of weaker merits He imparts a larger portion, and pieces out the defect of one by the excess of the other. Thus have we no just quarrel with Nature for leaving us naked, or to envy the Horns, Hoofs, Skins, and I urs of other Creatures, being provided with Reason, that can supply them all. We need not labour with so many Arguments to confute Judicial Astrology, for, if there be a truth therein, it doth not injure Divinity. If to be born under Mercury disposeth us to be witty, under Jupiter to be wealthy, I do not owe a Knece unto these, but unto that merciful Hand that hath ordered my indifferent and uncertain nativity unto such benevolous Aspects. Those that hold that all things are governed by Fortune, had not erred, had they not persisted therein. The Romans, that erected a Temple to Fortune, acknowledged therein, though in a blinded way, somewhat of Divinity, for, in a wise supputation, all things begin and end in the Almighty. There is a nearer way to Heaven than Homer's Chiron: an easie Logic may conjoyn Heaven and Earth in one Argument, and with less than a Sorites resolve all things into GOD. For though we christen effects by their most sensible and nearest Causes, yet is GOD the true and infallible Cause of all, whose concurrence, though it be general, yet doth it subdivide it self into the particular Actions of every thing, and is that Spirit, by which each singular Essence not only subsists, but performs its operation.

of GOD, have perverted the Devotion of many unto Atheism, who, forgetting the honest Advices of Faith, have listened unto the conspiracy of Passion and Reason. I have therefore always endeavoured to compose those Feuds and angry Dissentions between Affection, Faith, and Reason, for there is in our Soul a kind of Triumvirate, or triple Government of three Competitors, which distract the Peace of this our Commonwealth not less than did that other the State of Rome.

Passion, Reason, Faith

See below,
p. 106

As Reason is a Rebel unto Faith, so Passion unto Reason, as the propositions of Faith seem absurd unto Reason, so the Theorems of Reason unto Passion, and both unto Reason. Yet a moderate and peaceable discretion may so state and order the matter, that they may be all Kings, and yet make but one Monarchy, every one exercising his Sovereignty and Privilege in a due time and place, according to the restraint and limit of circumstance. There is, as in Philosophy, so in Divinity, sturdy doubts and loisterous Objections, wherewith the unhappiness of our knowledge too nearly acquainteth us. More of these no man hath known than myself, which I confess I conquered, not in a martial posture, but on my Knees. For our endeavours are not only to combat with doubts, but always to dispute with the Devil. The villany of that Spirit takes a hint of Infidelity from our Studies, and, by demonstrating a naturality in one way, makes us mistrust a miracle in another. Thus, having perused the Archidoxis and read the secret Sympathies of things, he would dissuade my belief from the miracle of the Brazen Serpent, make me conceit that Image worked by Sympathy, and was but an Egyptian trick to cure their Diseases without a miracle. Again, having seen some experiments of Bitumen, and having read far more of Naphtha, he whispered to my curiosity the fire of the Altar might be natural, and bid me mistrust a miracle in Lhas, when he entrenched the Altar round with Water, for that inflammable substance yields not easily unto Water, but flames in the Arms of its Antagonist. And thus would he inveigle my belief to think the combustion of Sodom might be natural, and that there was an Asphaltick and Bituminous nature in that Lake before the Fire of Gomorrah. I know that Manna is now plentifully gathered in Calabria, and Josephus tells me in his days it was as plentiful in Arabia, the Devil therefore made the quare, It here was then the miracle in the days of Moses? the Israelites saw but that in his time, the Natives of those Countries behold in ours. Thus the Devil played at Chess with me, and yielding a Pawn, thought to gain a Queen of me, taking advantage of my honest endeavours, and whilst I laboured to raise the structure of my Reason, he strived to undermine the edifice of my Faith.

Neither had these or any other ever such advantage of me, as to incline me to any point of Infidelity or desperate positions of Atheism, for I have been these many years of opinion there was never any. Those that held Religion was the difference of Man from Beasts, have

'Tis ridiculous to put off or down the general Flood of Noah in that particular inundation of Deucalion. That there was a Deluge once, seems not to me so great a Miracle, as that there is not one always. How all the kinds of Creatures, not only in their own bulks, but with a competency of food and sustenance, might be preserved in one Ark, and within the extent of three hundred Cubits, to a reason that rightly examines it, will appear very feasible. There is another secret, not contained in the Scripture, which is more hard to comprehend, and put the honest Father to the refuge of a Miracle, and that is, not only how the distinct pieces of the World, and divided Islands, should be first planted by men, but inhabited by Tigers, Panthers, and Beasts. How America abounded with Beasts of prey and noxious Animals, yet contained not in it that necessary Creature, a Horse, is very strange. By what passage those, not only Birds but dangerous and unwelcome Beasts, came over, how there be Creatures there, which are not found in this Triple Continent, (all which must needs be strange unto us, that hold but one Ark, and that the Creatures began their progress from the Mountains of Ararat) they who, to salve this, would make the Deluge particular, proceed upon a principle that I can no way grant, not only upon the negative of Holy Scriptures, but

There are other assertions and common Tenents drawn from Scripture, and generally believed as Scripture, whereunto, notwithstanding, I would never betray the liberty of my Reason 'Tis a Postulate to me, that Methusalem was the longest liv'd of all the Children of Adam and no man will be able to prove it, when, from the process of the Text I can manifest it may be otherwise That Judas perished by hanging himself, there is no certainty in Scripture though in one place it seems to affirm it, and by a doubtful word hath given occasion to translate it, yet in another place, in a more punctual description, it makes it improbable, and seems to overthrow it That our I athers, after the Flood, erected the Tower of Babel to preserve themselves against a second Deluge, is generally opinioned and believed, yet is there another intention of theirs expressed in Scripture besides, it is improbable from the circumstance of the place, that is, a plain in the Land of Shinar These are no points of Faith, and therefore may admit a free dispute

There are yet others, and those familiarly concluded from the Text, wherein (under favour,) I see no consequence The Church of Rome confidently proves the opinion of tutelary Angels

from that Answer when Peter knockt at the Door, 'Tis not he, but his Angel, that is, (might some say,) his Messenger, or some body from him, for so the Original signifies, and is as likely to be the doubtful Families meaning This exposition I once suggested to a young Divine, that answered upon this point, to which I remember the Franciscan Opponent replied no more, but That it was a new, and no authentick interpretation

These are but the conclusions and fallible discourses of man upon the Word of GOD, for such I do believe the Holy Scriptures yet, were it of man, I could not chuse but say, it was the singularst and superlative piece that hath been extant since the Creation Were I a Pagan, I should not refrain the Lecture of it and cannot but commend the judgment of Ptolomy, that thought not his Library compleat without it The Alcoran of the Turks (I speak without prejudice,) is an ill composed Piece, containing in it vain and ridiculous Errors in Philosophy, impossibilities, fictions, and vanities beyond laughter, maintained by evident and open Sophisms, the Policy of Ignorance, deposition of Universities and banishment of Learning, that hath gotten Foot by Arms and violence this without a blow hath disseminated it self through the whole Earth It is not unremarkable what Philo first observed, that the Law of Moses continued two thousand years without the least alteration, whereas, we see the Laws of other Common-wealths do alter with occasions, and even those that

I cannot but wonder with what exception the Samaritans could confine their belief to the Pentateuch, or five Books of Moses. I am ashamed at the Rabbinical Interpretation of the Jews upon the Old Testament as much as their defection from the New: and truly it is beyond wonder, how that contemptible and degenerate issue of Jacob, once so devoted to Lethick Superstition, and so easily seduced to the Idolatry of their Neighbours should now in such an obstinate and peremptory belief adhere unto their own Doctrine, expect impossibilities, and, in the face and eye of the Church persist without the least hope of Conversion. This is vice in them, that were virtue in us, for obstinacy in a bad Cause is but constancy in a good. And herein I must accuse those of my own Religion, for there is not any of such a fugitive Faith such an unstable belief, as a Christian, none that do so oft transform themselves, not unto several shapes of Christianity and of the same Species, but unto more unnatural and contrary Forms of Jew and Mahometan, that, from the name of Saviour, can condescend to the bare term of Prophet, and, from an old belief that He is come, fall to a new expectation of His coming. It is the promise of CHRIST to make us all one Flock, ^{St John x 16} but how and when this Union shall be, is as obscure to me as the last day. Of those four the name only in his Master, Alexander, and as little in that Roman Worthy, Julius Cæsar, and if any in that easie and active way have done so nobly as to deserve that name, yet in the passive and more terrible piece these have surpassed, and in a more heroical way may claim the honour of that Title. 'Tis not in the power of every honest Faith to proceed thus far, or pass to Heaven through the flames. Every one hath it not in that full measure, nor in so audacious and resolute a temper, as to endure those terrible tests and trials, who, notwithstanding, in a peaceable way, do truly adore their Saviour, and have (no doubt,) a Faith acceptable in the eyes of GOD.

Now, as all that dye in the War are not termed Souldiers, so neither can I properly term all those that suffer in matters of Religion, Martyrs. The Council of Constance condemns John Huss for an Heretick, the Stories of his own Party stile him a Martyr. he must needs offend the Divinity of both, that says he was neither the one nor the other. There are many (questionless,) canonized on earth, that shall never be Saints in Heaven, and have their names in Histories and Martyrologies, who in the eyes of GOD are not so perfect Martyrs as was that wise Heathen, Socrates, that suffered on a fundamental point of Religion, the Unity of GOD. I have often pitied the miserable Bishop that suffered in the cause of Antipodes, yet cannot chuse but accuse him of as much madness, for exposing his living on such a trifle, as those of

 For this is also a Miracle, not onely to produce

 as to contradict or transcend her We do too

Deut
xxxiii

It is a riddle to me, how this story of Oracles hath not worn'd out of the World that doubtful conceit of Spirits and Witches, how so many learned heads should so far forget their Metaphysics, and destroy the ladder and scale of creatures, as to question the existence of Spirits

SECT. xxx
Witchcraft

PART I For my part, I have ever believed, and do now know, that there are Witches they that doubt of these, do not onely deny them, but Spirits, and are obliquely and upon consequence a sort not of Infidels, but Atheists Those that to confute their incredulity desire to see apparitions, shall questionless never behold any, nor have the power to be so much as Witches, the Devil hath them already in a hearse as capital as Witchcraft, and to appear to them, were but to convert them Of all the delusions wherewith he deceives mortality, there is not any that puzzleth me more than the Legendemain of Changelings I do not credit those transformations of reasonable creatures into beasts, or that the Devil hath a power to transmute a man into a Horse, who tempted CHRIST (is a trial of His Divinity,) to convert but stones into bread I could believe that Spirits use with man the act of carnality, and that in both sexes I conceive they may assume, steal, or contrive a body, wherein there may be action enough to content decrepit lust, or passion to satiate more active veneries, yet, in both, without a possibility of generation and therefore that opinion that Antichrist should be born of the Tribe of Dan by conjunction with the Devil, is ridiculous, and a conceit fitter for a Rabbín than a Christian I hold that the Devil doth really possess some men, the spirit of Melancholly others, the spirit of Delusion others, that, as the Devil is concealed and denied by some, so GOD and good Angels are pretended by others, whereof the late

pregnant example

Again, I believe that all that use sorceries, incantations, and spells, are not Witches, or, as we term them, Magicians. I conceive there is a SECT XXXI Philosophy distinguished from Magic traditional Magick, not learned immediately from the Devil, but at second hand from his Scholars, who having once the secret betrayed, are able, and do empiricallv practise without his advice, they both proceeding upon the principles of Nature, where actives aptly conjoined to disposed passives, will under any Master produce their effects. Thus I think at first a great part of Philosophy was Witchcraft, which, being afterward derived to one another, proved but Philosophy, and was indeed no more but the honest effects of Nature what invented by us, is Philosophy learned from him is Magick. We do surely owe the discovery of many secrets to the discovery of good and bad Angels. I could never pass that sentence of Pindarus without an asterisk or annotation, Iscondens constellation multa revelat quæritibus magna natura (i.e. opera DEI). I do think that many mysteries ascribed to our own inventions have been the courteous revelations of Spirits, (for those noble essences in Heaven bear a friendly regard unto their fellow Natures on Earth) and therefore believe that those many prodigies and ominous prognosticks, which fore run the ruines of States, Princes, and private persons, are the charitable premonitions of good Angels, which more careless enquiries term but the effects of chance and nature.

SECT. XXVII
The Spirit of God
diffused throughout

Geo 1 2

Now, besides these particular and divided Spirits, there may be (for ought I know,) an universal and common Spirit to the whole World. It was the opinion of Plato, and it is yet of the Hermetical Philosophers. If there be a common nature that unites and ties the scattered and divided individuals into one species, why may there not be one that unites them all? However, I am sure there is a common Spirit that plays within us, yet makes no part of us, and that is, the Spirit of GOD, the fire and scintillation of that noble and mighty Essence, which is the life and radical heat of Spirits, and those essences that know not the virtue of the Sun, a fire quite contrary to the fire of Hell. This is that gentle heat that brooded on the waters, and in six days hatched the World, this is that irradiation that dispels the mists of Hell, the clouds of honour, fear, sorrow, despair, and preserves the region of the mind in serenity. Whosoever feels not the warm gale and gentle ventilation of this Spirit, though I feel his pulse, I dare not say he lives for truly, without this, to me there is no heat under the Tropick, nor any light, though I dwelt in the body of the Sun.

As, when the labouring Sun hath wrought his track
Up to the top of lofty Cancers back
The ycie Ocean cracks, the frozen pole
Thaws with the heat of the Celestial coil
So, when Thy absent beams begin t' impart
Again a Solstice on my frozen heart,
My winter's o'er, my drooping spirits sing,
And every part revives into a Spring

PART I

But if Thy quickning beams a while decline
 And with their light bless not this Orb of mine,
 A chilly frost surpriseth every member
 And in the midst of June I feel December
 O how this earthly temper doth decline
 The noble Soul in this her humble place
 Whose wingy nature ever doth aspire
 To reach that place whence first it took its fire
 These flames I feel which in my heart do dwell
 Are not Thy beams but take their fire from Hell
 O quench them all, and let Thy Light divine
 Be as the Sun to this poor Orb of mine
 And to Thy sacred Spirit convert those fires
 Whose earthly fumes choke my devout aspires

Therefore for Spirits, I am so far from denying their existence, that I could easily believe, that not onely whole Countries, but particuler persons, have their Tutelary and Guardian Angels It is not a new opinion of the Church of Rome, but an old one of Pythagoras and Plato there is no heresie in it, and if not manifestly defin'd in Scripture, yet is it an opinion of a good and wholesome use in the course and actions of a mans life, and would serve as an Hypothesis to solve many doubts, whereof common Philosophy affordeth no solution Now, if you demand my opinion and Metaphysicks of their natures, I confess them very shallow, most of them in a negative way, like that of GOD, or in a comparative, between ourselves and fellow-creatures, for there is in this Universe a Stair, or manifest Scale of creatures, rising not disorderly, or in confusion, but with a comely method and proportion Between creatures of meer existence, and things of life, there is a large disproportion of nature, between plants, and animals or PART I creatures of sense, a wider difference, between them and Man, a far greater and if the proportion hold one, between Man and Angels there should be yet a greater We do not comprehend their natures, who retain the first definition of Porphyry, and distinguish them from our selves by immortality, for before his Fall, 'tis thought, Man also was Immortal, yet must we needs affirm that he had a different essence from the Angels Having therefore no certain knowledge of their Natures, 'tis no bad method of the Schools, whatsoever perfection we find obscurely in our selves, in a more compleat and absolute way to ascribe unto them I believe they have an extemporary knowledge, and upon the first motion of their reason do what we cannot without study or deliberation, that they know things by their forms, and define by specifical difference what we describe by accidents and properties, and therefore probabilities to us may be demonstrations unto them that they have knowledge not onely of the specifical, but numerical forms of individuals, and understand by what reserved difference each single Hypostasis (besides the relation to its species,) becomes its numerical self that, as the Soul hath a power to move the body it informs, so there's a faculty to move any, though inform none ours upon restraint of time, place, and distance, but that invisible hand that conveyed Habakkuk to the Lyons Den, or Philip to Azotus, infringeth this rule, and hath a secret conveyance, wherewith mortality is not acquainted If they have that intuitive knowledge, whereby as in reflexion they behold the thoughts of one another, I cannot peremptorily deny but they know a great part of ours They that, to refute the Invocation of Saints, have denied that they have any knowledge of our affairs below, have proceeded too far, and must pardon my opinion, till I can thoroughly answer that piece of Scripture, At the conversion of a sinner the Angels in Heaven rejoice I cannot, with those in that great Father, securely interpret the work of the first day, Fiat lux, to the creation of Angels, though I confess, there is not any creature that hath so neer a glympse of their nature as light in the Sun and Elements We stile it a bare accident, but, where it subsists alone, 'tis a spiritual Substance. and may be an Angel in brief, conceive light invisible, and that is a Spirit

These are certainly, the Magistral and master-pieces of the Creator, the Flower, or (as we may say,) the best part of nothing, actually existing, what we are but in hopes and probability We are only that amphibious piece between a corporeal and spiritual Essence, that middle form that links those two together, and makes good the Method of GOD and Nature, that jumps not from extreams, but unites the incompatible distances by some middle and participating natures That we are the breath and similitude of GOD, it is indisputable, and upon record of Holy Scripture, but to call ourselves a Microcosm, or little World, I thought it only a pleasant trope of Rhetorick, till my neer judgement and second thoughts told me there was a real truth therein.

For first we are a rude mass, and in the rank of creatures which onely are, and have a dull kind of being, not yet priviledged with life, or preferred to sense or reason, next we live the life of Plants, the life of Animals, the life of Men, and at last the life of Spirits, running on in one mysterious nature those five kinds of existences, which comprehend the creatures, not onely of the World, but of the Universe Thus is Man that great and true Amphibium, whose nature is disposed to live, not onely like other creatures in divers elements, but in divided and distinguished worlds for though there be but one to sense, there are two to reason, the one visible, the other invisible, whereof Moses seems to have left description, and of the other so obscurely, that some parts thereof are yet in controversy And truly, for the first chapters of Genesis, I must confess a great deal of obscurity, though Divines have to the power of humane reason endeavoured to make all go in a literal meaning, yet those allegorical interpretations are also probable, and perhaps the mystical method of Moses bred up in the Hieroglyphical Schools of the Egyptians

Of Creation

Now for that immaterial world, methinks we need not wander so far as beyond the first moveable, for even in this material Fabrick the Spirits walk as freely exempt from the affection of time, place, and motion, as beyond the extreamest circumference Do but extract from the corpulency of bodies, or resolve things beyond their first matter, and you discover the habitation of

PART I

Angels, which if I call the ubiquitary and omnipresent Essence of GOD, I hope I shall not offend Divinity for before the Creation of the World GOD was really all things For the Angels He created no new World, or determinate mansion, and therefore they are everywhere where is His Essence, and do live at a distance even in Himself That GOD made all things for Man, is in some sense true, yet not so far as to subordinate the Creation of those purer Creatures unto ours, though as ministering Spirits they do, and are Heb 1 14 willing to fulfil the will of GOD in these lower and sublunary affairs of Man GOD made all things for Himself, and it is impossible He should make them for any other end than His own Glory, it is all He can receive, and all that is without Himself For, honour being an external adjunct, and in the honouree rather than in the person honoured, it was necessary to make a Creature, from whom He might receive this homage, and that is, in the other world, Angels, in this, Man, which when we neglect, we forget the very end of our Creation, and may justly provoke GOD, not onely to repent that He hath Gen 11 6 made the World, but that He hath sworn He 11 9-17 would not destroy it That there is but one World, is a conclusion of Faith Aristotle with all his Philosophy hath not been able to prove it, and as weakly that the World was eternal I hat See above, dispute much troubled the Pen of the ancient Philosophers, but Moses decided that question, and all is salved with the new term of a Creation, that is, a production of something out of

PART I nothing And what is that ? whatsoever is opposite to something , or more exactly, that which is truly contrary unto GOD for He onely is, all others have an existence with dependency, and are something but by a distinction And herein is Divinity conformant unto Philosophy, and generation not onely founded on contrarieties, but also creation , GOD, being all things, is contrary unto nothing, out of which were made all things, and so nothing became something, and Omneity informed Nullity into an Essence

Man the

of Creation
Gen 1 20—
Gen 11 7

The whole Creation is a Mystery, and particularly that of Man At the blast of His mouth were the rest of the Creatures made and at His bare word they started out of nothing but in the frame of Man (as the Text describes it,) He played the sensible operator, and seemed not so much to create, as make him When He had separated the materials of other creatures, there consequently resulted a form and soul, but, having raised the walls of Man, He was driven to a second and harder creation of a substance like Himself, an incorruptible and immortal Soul For these two affections we have the Philosophy and opinion of the Heathens, the flat affirmative of Plato, and not a negative from Aristotle There is another scruple cast in by Divinity concerning its production, much disputed in the Germane auditories, and with that indifferency and equality of arguments, as leave the controversy undetermined I am not of Paracelsus mind, that boldly delivers a receipt to make a man without conjunction, yet cannot but wonder at the multitude of heads that do deny PART I traduction, having no other argument to confirm their belief then that Rhetorical sentence and Antimetathesis of Augustine, Creando infun- ditur, infundendo creatur Either opinion will consist well enough with Religion yet I should rather incline to this, did not one objection haunt me, (not wrung from speculations and subtilties, but from common scense and observation, not pickt from the leaves of any Author, but bred amongst the weeds and tares of mine own brain,) and this is a conclusion from the equivocal and monstrous productions in the conjunction of Man with Beast for if the Soul of man be not transmitted and transfused in the seed of the Parents, why are not those productions meeily beasts, but have also an impression and tincture of reason in as high a measure as it can evdncce it self in those improper Organs? Nor, truly, can I peremptorily deny that the Soul, in this her sublunary estate, is wholly and in all acceptions inorganical, but that for the performace of her ordinary actions there is required not onely a symmetry and proper disposition of Organs, but a Crasis and temper correspondent to its operations yet is not this mass of flesh and visible structure the instrument and proper corps of the Soul, but rather of Sense, and that the hand of Reason In our study of Anatomy there is a mass of mysterious Philosophy, and such as reduced the very Heathens to Divinity yet, amongst all those rare discoveries and curious pices I find in the PART I Fabrick of Man, I do not so much content my self, as in that I find not, there is no Organ or Instrument for the rational Soul, for in the brain, which we term the seat of Reason, there is not any thing of moment more than I can discover in the crany of a beast and this is a sensible and no inconsiderable argument of the inorganity of the Soul, at least in that sense we usually so receive it Thus we are men. and we know not how there is something in us that can be without us, and will be after us, though it is strange that it hath no history what it was before us, nor cannot tell how it entred in us

Isa xl 6

Now, for these walls of flesh, wherein the Soul doth seem to be immured before the Resurrection, it is nothing but an elemental composition, and a Fabrick that must fall to ashes All flesh is grass, is not onely metaphorically, but litterally, true, for all those creatures we behold are but the herbs of the field, digested into flesh in them, or more remotely carnified in our selves Nay further, we are what we all abhor, Anthrophophagi and Cannibals, devourers not onely of men, but of our selves, and that not in an allegory, but a positive truth for all this mass of flesh which we behold, came in at our mouths, this frame we look upon, hath been upon our trenchers, in brief, we have devour'd our selves I cannot believe the wisdom of Pythagoras did ever positively, and in a literal sense, affirm his Metempsychosis, or impossible transmigration of the Souls of men into beasts Of all Metamorphoses or transmutations, I believe only one that is of Lots wife , for that of Nebuchodonosor proceeded not so far in all others I conceive there is no further verity than is contained in their implicate sense and morality I believe that the whole frame of a beast doth perish, and is left in the same state after death as before it was materialled unto life that the Souls of men know neither contrary nor corruption , that they subsist beyond the body, and outlive death by the privilege of their proper natures, and without a Miracle, that the Souls of the faithful, as they leave Earth, take possession of Heaven that those apparitions and ghosts of departed persons are not the wandering souls of men, but the unquiet walks of Devils, prompting and suggesting us unto mischief, blood, and villany , instilling and stealing into our hearts that the blessed Spirits are not at rest in their graves, but wander solicitous of the affairs of the World But that those phantasms appear often, and do frequent Cœmeteries, Charnel-houses, and Churches, it is because those are the dormitories of the dead, where the Devil, like an insolent Champion, beholds with pride the spoils and Trophies of his Victory over Adam

This is that dismal conquest we all deplore, that makes us so often cry, O Adam, quid fecisti? I thank GOD I have not those strait ligaments, or narrow obligations to the World, as to dote on life, or be convulst and tremble at the name of death Not that I am insensible of the dread and horror thereof , or by raking into the bowels of the deceased, continual sight of PART I Anatomies, Skeletons, or Cadaverous reliques, like Vespilloes or Grave-makers, I am become stupid, or have forgot the apprehension of Mortality, but that, marshalling all the horrors, and contemplating the extremities thereof, I find not any thing therein able to daunt the courage of a man, much less a well resolved Christian, and therefore am not angry at the error of our first Parents, or unwilling to bear a part of this common fate, and like the best of them to dye that is, to cease to breathe, to take a few jewel of the elements, to be a kind of nothing for a moment, to be within one instant of a Spirit. When I take a full view and circle of my self without this reasonable mediator, and equal piece of Justice, Death, I do conceive my self the miserablest person extant. Were there not another life that I hope for all the vanities of this World should not intercept a moments breath from me could the Devil work my belief to imagine I could never dye I would not outlive that very thought. I have so abject a conceit of this common way of existence, thus depending to the Sun and Elements, I cannot think this is to be a Man, or to live according to the dignity of humanity. In expectation of a better, I can with patience embrace this life, yet in my best meditations do often defie death, I honour any man that contemns it, nor can I highly love any that is afraid of it this makes me naturally love a Souldier, and honour those tattered and contemptible Regiments that will die at the command of a Sergeant. For a Pagan there may be some motives to be in love with life , but for a PART I.

 Christian to be amazed at death, I see not how he can escape this Dilemma, that he is too sensible of this life, or hopeless of the life to come

Some Divines count Adam thirty years old at SECT XXXIX

 Death to be ashamed of rather than feared

I am naturally bashful nor hath conversation, age, or travel, been able to effront or en-harden me, yet I have one part of modesty which I have seldom discovered in another, that is, (to speak truly) I am not so much afraid of death, as ashamed thereof 'Tis the very disgrace and ignominy of our natures, that in a moment can so disfigure us, that our nearest friends, Wife, and Children, stand afraid and start at us the Birds and Beasts of the field, that before in a natural fear obeyed us, forgetting all allegiance, begin to prey upon us This very conceit hath in a tempest disposed and left me willing to be swallowed up in the abyss of waters, wherein I had perished unseen, unpityed, without wondering eyes, tears of pity, Lectures of mortality, and none had said,

Not that I am ashamed of the Anatomy of my PART I parts, or can accuse Nature for playing the bungler in any part of me, or my own vitious life for contracting any shameful disease upon me, whereby I might not call my self as wholesome a morsel for the worms as any

Some, upon the courage of a fruitful issue, SECT XII fallacy, unworthy the desires of a man that can but conceive a thought of the next World, who,

in a nobler ambition, should desire to live in his substance in Heaven, rather than his name death I mean to take a total adieu of the World, not caring for a Monument, History, or Epitaph, not so much as the bare memory of my name

PART 1 days of our Fathers before the Flood If there be any truth in Astrology, I may outlive a Jubilee as yet I have not seen one revolution of Saturn, nor hath my pulse beat thirty years, and yet, excepting one, have seen the Ashes and left under ground all the Kings of Europe, have been contemporary to three Emperours, four Grand Signiours, and as many Popes Methinks I have outlived my self, and begin to be weary of the Sun, I have shaken hands with delight, in my warm blood and Canicular day, I perceive I do anticipate the vices of age, the World to me is but a dream or mock show, and we all therein but Pantalones and Anticks, to my severer contemplations

It is not, I confess an unlawful Prayer to desire to surpass the days of our Saviour, or wish to outlive that age wherein He thought fittest to dye, yet if (as Divinity affirms) there shall be no gray hairs in Heaven, but all shall rise in the perfect state of men, we do but outlive those perfections in this World, to be recalled unto them by a greater Miracle in the next, and run on here but to be retrograde hereafter Were there any hopes to outlive vice, or a point to be super-annuated from sin, it were worthy our knees to implore the days of Methuselah But age doth not rectify, but incurate our natures, turning bad dispositions into worse habits, and (like diseases,) brings on incurable vices, for every day as we grow weaker in age, we grow stronger in sin, and the number of our days doth but make our sins innumerable The same

vice committed at sixteen, is not the same, though it agree in all other circumstances, at forty, but swells and doubles from the circumstance of our ages, wherein, besides the constant and inexcusable habit of transgressing, the maturity of our judgement cuts off pretence unto excuse or pardon. Every sin, the oftner it is committed, the more it acquireth in the quality of evil, as it succeeds in time, so it proceeds in degrees of badness, for as they proceed they ever multiply, and, like figures in Arithmetick, the last stands for more than all that went before it. And though I think no man can live well once, but he that could live twice, yet for my own part I would not live over my hours past, or begin again the thread of my days: not upon Cicero's ground, because I have lived them well but for fear I should live them worse I find my growing Judgment daily instruct me how to be better, but my untamed affections and confirmed vitiosity makes me daily do worse I find in my confirmed age the same sins I discovered in my youth, I committed many then, because I was a Child, and because I commit them still, I am yet an infant. Therefore I perceive a man may be twice a Child, before the days of dotage, and stand in need of Æsons Bath before threescore

And truly there goes a great deal of providence to produce a mans life unto threescore there is more required than an able temper for those years, though the radical humour contain in it sufficient oyl for seventy, yet I perceive in

SECT XLIV I am much taken with two verses of Lucan, since I have been able not onely, as we do at School, to construe, but understand Phars iv.

Victurosque Dei celant, ut vivere durent, Felix esse mori

We're all deluded, vainly searching ways
 To make us happy by the length of days
 For cunningly to make's protract this breath,
 The Gods conceal the happiness of Death

PART I

There be many excellent strains in that Poet, ^{Though death is to be desired, yet suicide is unlawful} wherewith his Stoical Genius hath liberally supplied him, and truly there are singular pieces in the Philosophy of Zeno, and doctrine of the Stoicks, which I perceive, delivered in a Pulpit, pass for current Divinity yet herein are they in extrems, that can allow a man to be his own Assassin, and so highly extol the end and suicide of Cato This is indeed not to fear death, but ^{See below P 144} yet to be afraid of life It is a brave act of valour to condemn death, but where life is more terrible than death, it is then the truest valour to dare to live And herein Religion hath taught us a noble example, for all the valiant acts of Curtius, Scevola, or Codrus, do not parallel or match that one of Job, and sure there is no torture to the rack of a disease, nor any Poyards in death it self like those in the way or prologue to it

Enon nolo, sed me esse mortuum nihil cur o

Were I of Cæsar's Religion, I should be of his desires, and wish rather to go off at one blow, then to be sawed in pieces by the grating torture of a disease Men that look no farther than their outsides, think health an appurtenance unto life, and quarrel with their constitutions for being sick, but I, that have examined the parts of man, and know upon what tender filaments

PART I that Fabrick hangs, do wonder that we are not always so, and, considering the thousand doors that lead to death, do thank my GOD that we can die but once 'Tis not onely the mischief of diseases, and the villany of poysons, that make an end of us, we vainly accuse the fury of Guns, and the new inventions of death, it is in the power of every hand to destroy us and we are beholding unto every one we meet, he doth not kill us There is therefore but one comfort left, that, though it be in the power of the weakest arm to take away life, it is not in the strongest to deprive us of death GOD would not exempt Himself from that, the misery of immortality in the flesh, He undertook not that was immortal Certainly there is no happiness within this circle of flesh, nor is it in the Opticks of these eyes to behold felicity The first day of our Jubilee is Death the Devil hath therefore failed of his desires we are happier with death than we should have been without it there is no misery but in himself, where there is no end of misery, and so indeed, in his own sense, the Stoick is in the right He forgets that he can dye who complains of misery, we are in the power of no calamity while death is in our own

SECT. XLV

Now, besides this literal and positive kind of death, there are others whereof Divines make mention, and those, I think, not merely Metaphorical, as mortification, dying unto sin and the World Therefore, I say, every man hath a double Horoscope, one of his humanity, his birth, another of his Christianity, his baptism;

and from this do I compute or calculate my Nativity, not reckoning those Horæ combustæ and odd days, or esteeming my self any thing, before I was my Saviours, and inrolled in the Register of CHRIST Whosoever enjoys not this life, I count him but an apparition, though he wear about him the sensible affections of flesh. In these moral acceptions, the way to be immortal is to dye daily nor can I think I have the true Theory of death, when I contemplate a skull, or behold a Skeleton, with those vulgar imaginations it casts upon us, I have therefore enlarged that common Memento mori, into a more Christian memorandum, Memento quatuor Novissima, those four inevitable points of us all, Death, Judgement, Heaven, and Hell Neither did the contemplations of the Heathens rest in their graves without a further thought of Rhadamanth or some judicial proceeding after death, though in another way, and upon suggestion of their natural reasons I cannot but marvel from what Sibyl or Oracle they stole the Prophesie of the Worlds destruction by fire, or whence Lucan

Now to determine the day and year of this inevitable time, is not only convincible and statute-madness, but also manifest impiety How shall we interpret Elias six thousand years, or imagine the secret communicated to a Rabbi, which GOD hath denyed unto His Angels? It had been an excellent Quære to have posed the Devil of Delphos, and must needs have forced him to some strange amphibology It hath not onely mocked the predictions of sundry

Astrologers in Ages past, but the propheties of many melancholy heads in these present, who, neither understanding reasonably things past or present, pretend a knowledge of things to come heads ordained onely to manifest the incredible effects of melancholy, and to fulfil old propheties rather than be the authors of new In those days there shall come Wars and rumours of Wars, to me seems no prophecy, but a constant truth, in all times verified since it was pronounced There shall be signs in the Moon and Stars, how comes He then like a Thief in the night, when He gives an item of His coming? That common sign drawn from the revelation of Antichrist, is as obscure as any in our common compute He hath been come these many years but for my own part, (to speak freely,) I am half of opinion that Antichrist is the Philosopher's stone in Divinity, for the discovery and invention whereof though there be prescribed rules and probable inductions, yet hath hardly any man attained the perfect discovery thereof That general opinion that the World grows near its end, hath possessed all ages past as nearly as ours I am afraid that the Souls that now depart, cannot escape that lingering expostulation of the Saints under the Altar, Quousque, DOMINE? How long, O LORD? and groan in the expectation of that great Jubilee

This is the day that must make good that great attribute of GOD, His Justice, that must reconcile those unanswerable doubts that torment the wisest understandings, and reduce my Faith, to believe only possibilities, is not true in Divinity, which are neither inducible by reason, nor confirmable by sense, and many things in Philosophy confirmable by sense, yet not inducible by reason. Thus it is impossible by any solid or demonstrative reasons to per-swade a man to believe the conversion of the

Minerals, Plants, Animals, Elements, shall at the Voice of GOD return into their primitive shapes, and joyne again to make up their primary and predestinate forms. As at the Creation there was a separation of that confused mass into its species, so at the destruction thereof there shall be a separation into its distinct individuals. As at the Creation of the World, all the distinct species that we behold lay involved in one mass, till the fruitful Voice of GOD separated this united multitude into its several species, so at the last

What the Art of man can do in these inferior pieces, what blasphemy is it to affirm the finger of GOD cannot do in these more perfect and sensible structures ¹ This is that mystical Philosophy, from whence no true Scholar becomes an Atheist, but from the visible effects of nature grows up a real Divine, and beholds not in a dream, as Ezekiel, but in an ocular and visible object, the types of his resurrection

Now, the necessary Mansions of our restored selves are those two contrary and incompatible places we call Heaven and Hell. To define them, or strictly to determine what and where these are, surpasseth my Divinity. That elegant Apostle, which seemed to have a glimpse of Heaven, hath left but a negative description thereof, which neither eye hath seen, nor ear hath heard, nor can enter into the heart of man. he was translated out of himself to behold it, but, being returned into himself, could not express it. St John's description by Emeralds, Chrysolites, and precious Stones, is too weak to express the material Heaven we behold. Briefly therefore, where the Soul hath the full measure and complement of happiness, where the boundless appetite of that spirit remains completely satisfied, that it can neither desire addition nor alteration, that, I think, is truly Heaven and this can only be in the enjoyment of that essence, whose infinite goodness is able to terminate the desires of it self, and the insatiable wishes of ours wherever GOD will thus manifest Himself, there is Heaven, though within the circle of this sensible world. Thus the Soul of man may be in Heaven any where, even within the limits of his own proper body, and when it ceaseth to live in the body, it may remain in its own soul, that is, its Creator and thus we may say that St Paul, whether in the body, or out of the body, was yet in Heaven. PART I Empyrean, or beyond the tenth sphere, is to forget the world's destruction, for, when this sensible world shall be destroyed, all shall then be here as it is now there in Empyrean Heaven, a quasi vacuity, when to ask where Heaven is, is to demand where the Presence of GOD is, or where we have the glory of that happy vision Moses, that was bred up in all the learning of the Egyptians committed a gross absurdity in Philosophy, when with these eyes of flesh he desired to see GOD, and petitioned his Maker, that is, Truth it self, to a contradiction. Who can that imagine Heaven and Hell neighbours, and conceive a vicinity between those two extremes, upon consequence of the Parable where Dives discoursed with LUTHERUS in Abraham's bosom do too grossly conceive of those glorified creatures, whose eyes shall easily out see the Sun and behold without a perspective the extreme distances for if there shall be in our glorified eyes, the faculty of sight and reception of objects, I could think the visible species there to be in as unlimitable a way as now the intellectual. I grant that two bodies placed beyond the tenth sphere, or in a vacuity, according to Aristotle's Philosophy, could not behold each other, because there wants a body or Medium to hand and transport the visible rays of the object unto the sense, but when there shall be a general defect of either Medium to convey, or light to prepare and dispose that Medium, and yet a perfect vision, we must suspend the rules of our Philosophy, and make all good by a more absolute piece of opticks

I cannot tell how to say that fire is the essence of Hell I know not what to make of Purgatory, or conceive a flame that can either prey upon, or purify the substance of a Soul Those flames of sulphur mentioned in the Scriptures, I take not to be understood of this present Hell, but of that to come, where fire shall make up the complement of our tortures, and have a body or subject wherein to manifest its tyranny Some, who have had the honour to be textuary in Divinity, are of opinion it shall be the same specific fire with ours This is hard to conceive, yet can I make good how even that may prey upon our bodies, and yet not consume us for in this material World there are bodies that persist invincible in the powerfulest flames, and though by the action of fire they fall into ignition and liquation, yet will they never suffer a destruction I would gladly know how Moses with an actual fire calcined or burnt the Golden Calf unto powder for that mystical metal of Gold, whose solitary and celestial nature I admire, exposed unto the violence of fire, grows onely hot, and liquifies, but consumeth not, so, when the consumable and volatile pieces of our bodies shall be refined into a more impregnable and fixed temper like Gold, though they suffer from the action of flames, they shall never perish, but lye immortal in the arms of fire And surely, if this frame must suffer onely by the action of this element, there will many bodies escape, and not onely Heaven, but Earth will not be at an end, but rather a beginning. For at

PART I present it is not earth, but a composition of fire, water, earth, and air, but at that time, spoiled of these ingredients, it shall appear in a substance more like it self, its ashes. Philosophers that opinioned the worlds destruction by fire, did never dream of annihilation, which is beyond the power of sublunary causes, for the last and proper action of that element is but vitification, or a reduction of a body into glass, and therefore some of our Chymicks facetiously affirm, that at the last fire all shall be cristallized and reverberated into glass, which is the utmost action of that element. Nor need we fear this term, annihilation, or wonder that GOD will destroy the works of His Creation for men subsisting, who is, and will then truly appear, a Microcosm the world cannot be said to be destroyed. For the eyes of GOD, and perhaps also of our glorified selves, shall as really behold and contemplate the World in its Epitome or contracted essence, as now it doth at large and in its dilated substance. In the seed of a Plant to the eyes of GOD, and to the understanding of man, there exists, though in an invisible way, the perfect leaves, flowers, and fruit thereof, for things that are in posse to the sense, are actually existent to the understanding. Thus GOD beholds all things, Who contemplates as fully His works in their Epitome, as in their full volume, and beheld as amply the whole world in that little compendium of the sixth day, as in the scattered and dilated pieces of those five before.

by fire, and the extremity of corporal afflictions, and describe Hell in the same method that Mahomet doth Heaven. This indeed makes a noise, and drums in popular ears; but if this be the terrible piece thereof, it is not worthy to stand in diameter with Heaven, whose happiness consists in that part that is best able to comprehend it, that immortal essence, that translated divinity and colony of GOD, the Soul. Surely, though we place Hell under Earth, the Devil's walk and purlue is about it: men speak too popularly who place it in those flaming mountains, which to grosser apprehensions represent Hell. The heart of man is the place the Devils dwell in. I feel sometimes a Hell within my self, Lucifer keeps his Court in my breast, Legion is reviv'd in me. There are as many Hells, as Anavagoras conceited worlds. There was more than one Hell in Magdalene, when there were seven Devils, for every Devil is an Hell unto himself, he holds enough of torture in his own ubi, and needs not the misery of circumstance to afflict him: and thus a distracted Conscience here, is a shadow or introduction unto Hell hereafter. Who can but pity the merciful intention of those hands that do destroy themselves? the Devil, were it in his power, would do the like, which being impossible, his miseries are endless, and he suffers most in that attribute wherein he is impassible, his immortality.

SECT LIII Crosses to be regarded as proofs of GOD's affection

And to be true, and speak my soul, when I survey the occurrences of my life, and call into account the Finger of GOD, I can perceive nothing but an abyss and mass of mercies, either in general to mankind, or in particular to my self And (whether out of the prejudice of my affection, or an inverting and partial conceit of His mercies, I know not, but) those which others term crosses afflictions, judgements, misfortunes. to me, who inquire farther into them than their visible effects, they both appear, and in event have ever proved, the secret and dissembled favours of His affection. It is a singular piece of Wisdom to apprehend truly, and without passion, the Works of GOD, and so well to distinguish His Justice from His Mercy, as not to miscall those noble Attributes. yet it is likewise an honest piece of Logick, so to dispute and argue the proceedings of GOD, as to distinguish even His judgments into mercies. For GOD is merciful unto all, because better to the worst than the best deserve, and to say He punisheth none in this World, though it be a Paradox, is no absurdity. To one that hath committed Murther, if the Judge should only ordain a Fine, it were a madness to call this a punishment, and to repine at the sentence, rather than admire the clemency of the Judge. Thus, our offences being mortal, and deserving not only Death, but Damnation, if the goodness of GOD be content to traverse and pass them over with a loss, misfortune, or disease, what fiensie were it to term this a punishment, rather than an extremity of mercy, and to groan under the rod of His Judgements, rather than admire the Scepter of His Mercies¹. Therefore to adore, honour, and admire Him, is a debt of gratitude due from the obligation of our nature, states, and conditions, and with these thoughts, He that knows them best, will not deny that I adore Him. That I obtain Heaven, and the bliss thereof, is accidental, and not the intended work of my devotion, it being a felicity I can neither think to deserve, nor scarce in modesty

PART I to expect I or these two ends of us all, either as rewards or punishments, are mercifully ordained and disproportionably disposed unto our actions, the one being so far beyond our deserts, the other so infinitely below our demerits

SECT. III.
Salvation through CHRIST alone

There is no Salvation to those that believe not in CHRIST, that is, say some, since His Nativity, and, as Divinity affirmeth before also which makes me much apprehend the ends of those honest Worthies and Philosophers which dyed before His Incarnation. It is hard to place those Souls in Hell, whose worthy lives do teach us Virtue on Earth, methinks, amongst those many subdivisions of Hell, there might have been one Limbo left for these. What a strange vision will it be to see their Poetical fictions converted into Verities, and their imagined and fancied Furies into real Devils! How strange to them will sound the History of Adam, when they shall suffer for him they never heard of! when they who derive their genealogy from the Gods, shall know they are the unhappy issue of sinful man! It is an insolent pretence of reason to controvert the Works of GOD, or question the Justice of His proceedings. Could Humility teach others, as it hath instructed me, to contemplate the infinite and incomprehensible distance betwixt the Creator and the Creature, or did we seriously perpend that one simile of St Paul, Shall the Vessel say to the Potter, "Why hast thou made me thus?" it would prevent these arrogant disputes of reason, nor would we argue the definitive sentence of GOD, either to Heaven or Hell. Men that live according to the right rule and law of reason, live but in their own kind, as beasts do in theirs, who justly obey the prescript of their natures, and therefore cannot reasonably demand a reward of their actions, as onely obeying the natural dictates of their reason. It will, therefore, and must at last appear, that all salvation is through CHRIST, which verity, I fear, these great examples of virtue must confirm, and make it good how the perfectest actions of earth have no title or claim unto Heaven.

Nor truly do I think the lives of these, or of any other, were ever correspondent, or in all points conformable, unto their doctrines. It is evident that Aristotle transgressed the rule of his own Ethics. The Stoicks that condemn passion, and command a man to laugh in Phalaris his Bull, could not endure without a groan a fit of the Stone or Colick. The Scepticks that affirmed they knew nothing, even in that opinion confute themselves, and thought they knew more than all the World beside. Diogenes I hold to be the most vain glorious man of his time, and more ambitious in refusing all Honours, than Alexander in rejecting none. Vice and the Devil put a Fallacy upon our Reasons, and, provoking us too hastily to run from it, entangle and profound us deeper in it. The Duke of Venice, that weds himself unto the Sea by a Ring of Gold, I will not argue of prodigality, because it is a solemnity of good use and consequence in the State: but the Philosopher that threw his money into the Sea to avoid Avarice, was a notorious prodigal.

PART I There is no road or ready way to virtue : it is not an easie point of art to disentangle our selves from this riddle, or web of Sin To perfect virtue, as to Religion, there is requir'd a Panoplia, or compleat armour, that, whilst we lye at close ward against one Vice, we lye not open to the venny of another And indeed wiser discretions that have the thied of reason to conduct them, offend without pardon, whereas under-heads may stumble without dishonour There go so many circumstances to piecc up one good action, that it is a lesson to be good, and we are forced to be virtuous by the book Again, the Practice of men holds not an equal pace, yea, and often runs counter to their Theory we naturally know what is good, but naturally pursue what is evil the Rhetorick wherewith I perswade another, cannot perswade my self There is a depraved appetite in us, that will with patience hear the learned instructions of Reason, but yet perform no farther than agrees to its own irregular humour In brief, we all are monsters, that is, a composition of Man and Beast, wherein we must endeavour to be as the Poets fancy that wise man Chiron, that is, to have the Region of Man above that of Beast, and Sense to sit but at the feet of Reason Lastly, I do desire with GOD that all, but yet affirm with men that few, shall know Salvation, that the bridge is narrow, the passage strait, unto life yet those who do confine the Church of GOD, either to particular Nations, Churches, or Families have made it far narrower than our Saviour ever meant it

The vulgarity of those judgements that wrap the Church of GOD in Strabo's cloak, and restrain it unto Europe, seem to me as bad Geographers as Alexander, who thought he had Conquer'd all the World, when he had not subdued the half of any part thereof For we cannot deny the Church of GOD both in Asia and Africa, if we do not forget the Peregrinations of the Apostles, the deaths of the Martyrs, the Sessions of many and (even in our reformed judgement) lawful Councils, held in those parts in the minority and nonage of ours Nor must a few differences, more remarkable in the eyes of man than perhaps in the judgement of GOD, excommunicate from Heaven one another, much less those Christians who are in a manner all Martyrs, maintaining their Faith in the noble way of persecution, and serving GOD in the Fire, whereas we honour him but in the Sunshine

'Tis true we all hold there is a number of Elect, and many to be saved, yet, take our Opinions together, and from the confusion thereof there will be no such thing as salvation, nor shall any one be saved For first, the Church of Rome condemneth us, we likewise them, the Sub-reformists and Sectaries sentence the Doctrine of our Church as damnable, the Atomist, or Familist, reprobates all these, and all these, them again Thus, whilst the Mercies of GOD do promise us Heaven, our conceits and opinions exclude us from that place There must be, therefore, more than one St Peter particular Churches and Sects usurp the gates of Heaven, upon mine own unworthiness, wherein, according to my humble apprehensions, I am below them all I believe there shall never be an Anarchy in Heaven, but, as there are Hierarchies amongst the Angels, so shall there be degrees of priority amongst the Saints Yet is it (I protest,) beyond my ambition to aspire unto the first ranks, my desires onely are (and I shall be happy therein,) to be but the last man, and bring up the Rere in Heaven

Again, I am confident and fully perswaded, yet dare not take my oath, of my Salvation I am as it were sure, and do believe without all doubt, that there is such a City as Constantinople, yet for me to take my Oath thereon were a kind of Perjury, because I hold no infallible warrant from my own sense to confirm me in the certainty thereof And truly, though many pretend an absolute certainty of their Salvation, yet, when an humble Soul shall contemplate her own unworthiness, she shall meet with many doubts, and suddenly find how little we stand in need of the Precept of St Paul, Work out your salvation with fear and trembling That which is the cause of my Election, I hold to be the cause of my Salvation, which was the mercy and beneplacit of GOD, before I was, or the foundation of the World Before Abraham was, I am, is the saving of CHRIST, yet is it true in some sense, if I say it of my self; for I was not onely before my self, but Adam, that is, in the Idea of GOD, and the decree of that Synod held from all Eternity. Plebeian heads, whose fancy moves with the same wheel as these, men in the same Level with Mechanicks, though their fortunes do somewhat gild their infirmities, and their purses compound for their follies. But as, in casting account, three or four men together come short in account of one man placed by himself below them, so neither are a troop of these ignorant Dorados of that true esteem and value, as many a forlorn person, whose condition doth place him below their feet. Let us speak like Politicians: there is a Nobility without Heraldry, a natural dignity, whereby one man is ranked with another, another filed before him, according to the quality of his Descent, and preheminnence of his good parts. Though the corruption of these times and the bias of present practice wheel another way, thus it was in the first and primitive Commonwealths, and is yet in the integrity and Cradle of well-ordered Politics, till corruption getteth ground, under desires labouring after that which wise considerations condemn, every one having a liberty to amass and heap up riches, and they a licence or faculty to do or purchase any thing.

This general and indifferent temper of mine doth more neerly dispose me to this noble virtue. It is a happiness to be born and framed unto virtue, and to grow up from the seeds of nature, rather than the inoculation and forced grafts of education: yet if we are directed only by our particular Natures, and regulate our inclinations by no higher rule than that of our reasons, we are but Moralists; Divinity will still

PART II call us Heathens Therefore this great work of charity must have other motives ends, and impulses I give no alms only to satisfy the hunger of my Brother, but to fulfil and accomplish the Will and Command of my GOD I draw not my purse for his sake that demands it, but His That enjoyed it I relieve no man upon the Rhetorick of his miseries, nor to content mine own commiserating disposition, for this is still but moral charity, and an act that oweth more to passion than reason He that relieves another upon the bare suggestion and bowels of pity, doth not this, so much for his sake as for his own, for by compassion we make others misery our own, and so, by relieving them we relieve our selves also It is as erroneous a conceit to redress other Mens misfortunes upon the common considerations of merciful natures that it may be one day our own case for this is a sinister and politick kind of charity whereby we seem to bespeak the pities of men in the like occasions And truly I have observed that those professed Eleemosynaries, though in a crowd or multitude, do yet direct and place their petitions on a few and selected persons there is surely a Physiognomy, which those experienced and Master Mendicants observe, whereby they instantly discover a merciful aspect, and will single out a face wherein they spy the signatures and marks of Mercy For there are mystically in our faces certain Characters which carry in them the motto of our Souls, wherein he that cannot read A. I hold not so narrow a conceit of this virtue, as to conceive that to give Alms is only to be Charitable, or think a piece of Liberality can comprehend the Total of Charity Divinity PART II hath wisely divided the act thereof into many charity as their bodies branches, and hath taught us in this narrow way many paths unto goodness, as many ways as we may do good, so many ways we may be charitable. There are infirmities not onely of Body, but of Soul, and Fortunes which do require the merciful hand of our abilities. I can not contemn a man for ignorance, but behold him with as much pity as I do Lazarus. It is no greater Charity to cloath his body, than apparel the nakedness of his Soul. It is an honourable object to see the persons of other men ween our Injuries, and then borrowed understandings do homage to the bounty of ours. It is the cheapest way of beneficence, and like the natural charity of the Sun, illuminates another without obscuring itself. To be reserved and crafty in this part of goodness, is the sordidest piece of covetousness, and more contemptible than pecuniary Avarice. To this (as calling my self a Schollar) I am obliged by the duty of my condition. I make not therefore my head a grave, but a treasure, of knowledge, I intend no Monopoly, but a community, in learning, I study not for my own sake only, but for theirs that study not for themselves. I envy no man that knows more than my self, but pity them that know less. I instruct no man as an exercise of my knowledge, or with an intent rather to nourish and keep it alive in mine own head then

SECT V
Of sympathy

Job viii

There is, I think, no man that apprehends his own miseries less than my self, and no man that so nearly apprehends anothers. I could lose an arm without a tear, and with few groans, methinks, be quartered into pieces, yet can I weep most seriously at a Play, and receive with true passion the counterfeit grief of those known and professed Impostures. It is a barbarous proof of inhumanity to add unto any afflicted parties misery, or endeavour to multiply in any man a passion whose single nature is already above his patience. This was the greatest affliction of Job, and those oblique expostulations of his Friends a deeper injury than the down right blows of the Devil. It is not the tears of our own eyes only, but of our friends also, that do exhaust the current of our sorrows, which, falling into many streams, runs more peaceably, and is contented with a narrower channel. It is an act within the power of charity, to translate a passion out of one breast into another, and to divide a sorrow almost out of it self, for an affliction, like a dimension, may be so divided, as, if not indivisible, at least to become insensible. Now with my friend I desire not to share or participate, but to engross, his sorrows, that, by making them mine own, I may more easily discuss them, for in mine own reason, and within my self, I can command that which I cannot intreat without my self, and within the circle of another I have often thought those noble pairs and examples of friendship not so truly Histories of what had been, as fictions of what should be, but I now perceive nothing in them but possibilities, nor any thing in the Heroick examples of Damon and Pythias, Achilles and Patroclus, which methinks upon some grounds I could not perform within the narrow compass of my self. That a man should lay down his life for his Friend, seems strange to vulgar affections, and such as confine themselves within that Worldly principle, Charity begins at home. For mine own part I could never remember the relations that I held unto my self, nor the respect that I owe unto my own nature, in the cause of GOD, my Country, and my Friends. Next to these three, I do embrace my self. I confess I do not observe that order that the Schools ordain our affections, to love our Parents, Wives, Children, and then our Friends, for, excepting the injunctions of Religion, I do not find in my self such a necessary and indissoluble Sympathy to all those of my blood. I hope I do not break the fifth Commandment, if I conceive I may love my friend before the nearest of my blood, even those to whom I owe the principles of life. I never yet cast a true affection on a woman; but I have loved my PART II friend as I do virtue, my soul, my GOD From hence me thinks I do conceive how GOD loves man, what happiness there is in the love of GOD. Omitting all other, there are three most mystical unions 1 two natures in one person, 2 three persons in one nature, 3 one soul in two bodies, for though indeed they be really divided, yet are they so united, as they seem but one, and make rather a duality, than two distinct souls

The mystery of true
affection

There are wonders in true affection it is a body of Entymes, mysteries, and riddles, wherein two so become one, as they both become two I love my friend before my self, and yet methinks I do not love him enough some few months hence my multiplied affection will make me believe I have not loved him at all When I am from him, I am dead till I be with him when I am with him, I am not satisfied but would still be nearer him United souls are not satisfied with embraces, but desire to be truly each other, which being impossible, then desires are infinite, and must proceed without a possibility of satisfaction Another misery there is in affection, that whom we truly love like our own selves, we forget their looks, nor can our memory retain the Idea of their faces, and it is no wonder, for they are our selves, and our affection makes their looks our own This noble affection falls not on vulgar and common constitutions, but on such as are marked for virtue he that can love his friend with this noble ardour, will in a competent degree affect all Now, if we can bring our affections to look beyond the body, and cast an eye upon the soul, we have found out the true object, not only of friendship, but Charity, and the greatest happiness that we can bequeath the soul, is that wherein we all do place our last felicity, Salvation, which though it be not in our power to bestow, it is in our charity and pious invocations to desire, if not procure and further. I cannot contentedly frame a prayer for my self in particular, without a catalogue for my friends, nor request a happiness, wherein my sociable disposition doth not desire the fellowship of my neighbour. I never hear the Toll of a passing Bell, though in my mirth, without my prayers and best wishes for the departing spirit, I cannot go to cure the body of my patient, but I forget my profession, and call unto GOD for his soul, I cannot see one say his prayers, but, in stead of imitating him, I fall into a supplication for him, who perhaps is no more to me than a common nature. and if GOD hath vouchsafed an ear to my supplications, there are surely many happy that never saw me, and enjoy the blessing of mine unknown devotions. To pray for Enemies, that is, for their salvation, is no harsh precept, but the practice of our daily and ordinary devotions. I cannot believe the story of the Italian. our bad wishes and uncharitable desires proceed no further than this life, it is the Devil, and the uncharitable votes of Hell, that desire our misery in the World to come.

PART II an enemy to the ground of charity, our GOD, wherein we do but imitate our great selves, the world, whose divided Antipathies and contrary faces do yet carry a charitable regard unto the whole, by their particular discords preserving the common harmony, and keeping in fetters those powers, whose rebellions, once Masters, might be the ruine of all

Of pride and conceit

I thank GOD, amongst those millions of Vices I do inherit and hold from Adam, I have escaped one, and that a mortal enemy to Charity, the first and father-sin, not onely of man, but of the devil, Pride a vice whose name is comprehended in a Monosyllable, but in its nature not circumscribed with a Word I have escaped it in a condition that can hardly avoid it Those petty acquisitions and reputed perfections that advance and elevate the conceits of other men, add no feathers unto mine I have seen a Grammarian tower and plume himself over a single line in Horace, and shew more pride in the construction of one Ode, than the Author in the composition of the whole book For my own part, besides the Jargon and Patois of several Provinces, I understand no less than six Languages, yet I protest I have no higher conceit of my self, than had our Fathers before the confusion of Babel, when there was but one Language in the World, and none to boast himself either Linguist or Critick I have not onely seen several Countries, beheld the nature of their Climes, the Chorography of their Provinces, Topography of their Cities, but understood their several Laws, Customs, and Policies;

yet cannot all this persuade the dulness of my spirit unto such an opinion of my self, as I behold in numbler and conceited heads, that never looked a degree beyond their Nests I know the names, and somewhat more, of all the constellations in my Horizon, yet I have seen a prating Mariner, that could onely name the pointers and the North Star, out-talk me, and conceit himself a whole Spherc above me I know most of the Plants of my Countrey, and of those about me, yet methinks I do not know so many as when I did but know a hundred, and had scarcely ever Simplified further than Cheap-side For, indeed, heads of capacity, and such as are not full with a handful or easie measure of knowledge, think they know nothing till they know all, which being impossible, they fall upon the opinion of Sociates, and only know they know not any thing I cannot think that Homer pin'd away upon the riddle of the fishermen, or that Aristotle, who understood the uncertainty of knowledge, and confessed so often the reason of man too weak for the works of nature, did ever drown himself upon the flux and reflux of Euripus We do but learn to-day what our better advanced judgements will unteach to morrow, and Aristotle doth but instruct us, as Plato did him, that is, to confute himself I have run through all sorts, yet find no rest in any, though our first studies and junior endcavours may style us Peripatcticks, Stoicks, or Academicks, yet I perceive the wisest heads prove, at last, almost all Scepticks, and

 I or there is a musick where ever there is a harmony, order, or proportion and thus far we may maintain the music of the Spheres, for those well ordered motions, and regular paces, though they give no sound unto the ear yet to the understanding they strike a note most full of harmony Whosoever is harmonically composed delights in harmony which makes me much distrust the symmetry of those heads which declaim against all Church-Musick For my self, not only from my obedience, but my particular Genius, I do embrace it for even that vulgar and Tavern-Musick, which makes one man merry, another mad, strikes in me a deep fit of devotion, and a profound contemplation of the First Composer There is something in it of Divinity more than the ear discovers it is an Hi-eroglyphical and shadowed lesson of the whole World, and creatures of GOD, such a melody to the PART II ear, as the whole World, well understood, would afford the understanding In brief, it is a sensible fit of that harmony which intellectually sounds in the ears of GOD I will not say, with Plato, the soul is an harmony, but harmonical, and hath its nearest sympathy unto Musick thus some, whose temper of body agrees, and humours the constitution of their souls, are born Poets, though indeed all are naturally inclined unto Rhythme humanity, whose common cause I apprehend as mine own. And to speak more generally, those three Noble Professions which all civil Commonwealths do honour, are raised upon the fall of Adam, and are not any way exempt from their infirmities, there are not only diseases incurable in Physick, but eases indissolvable in Laws, Vices incorrigible in Divinity. If General Councils may err, I do not see why particular Courts should be infallible: their perfectest rules are raised upon the erroneous reasons of Man, and the Laws of one do but condemn the rules of another, as Aristotle oft-times the opinions of his Predecessours, because, though agreeable to reason, yet were not consonant to his own rules, and the Logick of his proper Principles. Again, (to speak nothing of the Sin against the Holy Ghost, whose cure not onely, but whose nature is unknown) I can cure the Gout or Stone in some, sooner than Divinity, Pride or Avarice in others. I can cure Vices by Physick when they remain incurable by Divinity, and shall obey my Pills when they condemn their precepts. I boast nothing, but plainly say, we all labour against our own cure, for death is the cure of all diseases. There is no Catholicum or universal remedy I know, but this, which, though nauseous to queasie stomachs, yet to prepared appetites is Nectar, and a pleasant potion of immortality.

cum solus, though it be the Apothegme of a wise man, is yet true in the mouth of a fool. Indeed, though in a Wilderness, a man is never alone, not only because he is with himself and his own thoughts, but because he is with the Devil, who ever consorts with our solitude, and is that unruely rebel that musters up those disordered motions which accompany our sequestered imaginations. And to speak more narrowly, there is no such thing as solitude, nor any thing that can be said to be alone and by itself, but GOD, Who is His own circle and can subsist by Himself, all others, besides their dissimilary and Heterogeneous parts, which in a manner multiply their natures, cannot subsist without the concurrence of GOD, and the society of that hand which doth uphold their natures. In brief, there can be nothing truly alone and by it self, which is not truly one, and such is only GOD: all others do transcend an unity, and so by consequence are many.

Now for my life, it is a miracle of thirty years, which to relate, were not a History, but a piece of Poetry, and would sound to common ears like a Fable. For the World, I count it not an Inn, but an Hospital, and a place not to live, but to dye in. The world that I regard is my self, it is the Microcosm of my own frame that I cast mine eye on, for the other, I use it but like my Globe, and turn it round sometimes for my recreation. Men that look upon my outside, perusing only my condition and Fortunes, do err in my Altitude, for I am above Atlas his shoulders. The earth think I am within his arms I thank GOD for my happy dreams, as I do for my good rest, for there is a satisfaction in them unto reasonable desires, and such as can be content with a fit of happiness and surely it is not a melancholy conceit to think we are all asleep in this World, and that the conceits of this life are as meer dreams to those of the next, as the Phantasms of the night, to the conceits of the day There is an equal delusion in both and the one doth but seem to be the embleme or picture of the other we are somewhat more than our selves in our sleeps, and the slumber of the body seems to be but the waking of the soul It is the ligation of sense, but the liberty of reason, and our waking conceptions do not match the Fancies of our sleeps At my Nativity my Ascendant was the water sign of Scorpius, I was born in the Planetary hour of Saturn, and I think I have a piece of that Leadn Planet in me I am no way facetious, nor disposed for the mirth and galliardize of company, yet in one dream I can compose a whole Comedy, behold the action, apprehend the jests, and laugh my self awake at the conceits thereof Were my memory as faithful as my reason is then fruitful, I would never study but in my dreams, and this time also would I chuse for my devotions but our grosser memories have then so little hold of our abstracted understandings, that they forget the story, and can only relate to our awaked souls, a confused and broken tale of that that hath passed. Aristotle,

PART II

PART II who hath written a singular Tract Of Sleep, hath not, methinks, thoroughly defined it, nor yet Galen, though he seem to have corrected it, for those Noctambulocs and night-walkers, though in their sleep, do yet enjoy the action of their senses. We must therefore say that there is something in us that is not in the jurisdiction of Morpheus, and that those abstracted and ec-statick souls do walk about in their own corps, as spirits with the bodies they assume, wherein they seem to hear, see, and feel, though indeed the Organs are destitute of sense, and their natures of those faculties that should inform them. Thus it is observed, that men sometimes, upon the hour of their departure do speak and reason above themselves, for then the soul, beginning to be freed from the ligaments of the body, begins to reason like her self, and to discourse in a strain above mortality.

SECT XII
Of sleep

We term sleep a death, and yet it is waking that kills us, and destroys those spirits that are the house of life. 'Tis indeed a part of life that best expiesseth death, for every man truly lives, so long as he acts his nature, or some way makes good the faculties of himself. Themistocles, therefore, that slew his Soldier in his sleep, was a merciful Executioner. 'Tis a kind of punishment the mildness of no laws hath invented. I wonder the fancy of Lucan and Seneca did not discover it. It is that death by which we may be literally said to dye daily, a death which Adam dyed before his mortality, a death whereby we live a middle and moderating death, I dare not trust it without my prayers, and an half adieu unto the World, and take my farewell in a Colloquy with GOD

The night is come, like to the day,
 Depart not I thou, great God, away
 Let not my sins, black as the night,
 Eclipse the lustre of Thy light
 Keep still in my Horizon for to me
 The Sun makes not the day, but Thee
 I thou, Whose nature cannot sleep,
 On my temples Centry keep Guard me 'gainst those watchful foes,
 Whose eyes are open while mine close Let no dreams my head infect,
 But such as Jacob's temples blest
 While I do rest, my Soul advance,
 Make my sleep a holy trance
 That I may, my rest being wrought, Awake into some holy thought
 And with as active vigour run
 My course, as doth the nimble Sun
 Sleep is a death O make me try,
 By sleeping, what it is to die
 And gently lay my head
 On my grave, as now my bed
 Howere I rest, great God, let me
 Awake again at last with Thee,
 And thus assur'd, behold I lie
 Securely, or to awake or die
 These are my drowsie days, in vain
 I do now wake to sleep again
 O come that hour, when I shall never Sleep again, but wake for ever

This is the Dormative I take to bedward, I need no other Laudanum than this to make me sleep, after which I close mine eyes in security, content to take my leave of the Sun, and sleep unto the Resurrection.

Justice

Advance a ridiculous
vice

The method I should use in distributive Justice, I often observe in commutative, and keep a Geometrical proportion in both, whereby becoming equible to others, I become unjust to my self, and supercogate in that common principle, Do unto others as thou wouldst be done unto thy self I was not born unto riches, neither is it, I think, my Star to be wealthy, or, if it were, the freedom of my mind, and frankness of my disposition visible to contradict and cross my fates for to me, a vice seems not so much a vice, as a deplorable piece of madness, to conceive ourselves pipkins, or be persuaded that we are dead, is not so ridiculous, nor so many degrees beyond the power of Hellebore, as this. The opinions of Theorists and positions of men, are not so void of reason as their practised conclusions. Some have held that Snow is black, that the earth moves, that the Soul is air, fire, water, but all this is Philosophy and there is no delirium if we do but speculate the folly and indisputable dotage of a vice to that subterraneous Idol, and God of the Faith. I do confess I am an Atheist. I cannot persuade myself to honour that the World adores, whatsoever virtue its prepared substance may have within my body, it hath no influence nor operation without. I would not entertain a base design, or an action that should call me villain, for the Indies, and for this only do I love and honour my own soul, and have methinks two arms too few to embrace myself. Aristotle is too severe, that will not allow us to be truly liberal without wealth, and the bountiful hand of Fortune If this be true, I must confess I am charitable only in my liberal intentions, and bountiful well-wishes, but if the example of the Mite be not only an act of wonder, but an example of the noblest Charity surely poor men may also build Hospitals, and the rich alone have not erected Cathedrals I have a private method which others observe not, I take the opportunity of my self to do good I borrow occasion of Charity from mine own necessities and supply the wants of others, when I am in most need my self for it is an honest stratagem to take advantage of our selves, and so to husband the acts of vertue, that, where they are defective in one circumstance, they may repay their want and multiply their goodness in another I have not Peru in my desires, but a competence, and ability to perform those good works to which He hath inclined my nature He is rich, who hath enough to be charitable, and it is hard to be so poor, that a noble mind may not find a way to this piece of goodness He that giveth to the poor, lendeth to the LORD there is more Rhetorick in that one sentence, than in a Library of Sermons, and indeed, if those Sentences were understood by the Reader, with the same Emphasis as they are delivered by the Author, we needed not those Volumes of instructions, but might be honest by an Epitome Upon this motive only I cannot behold a Beggar without relieving his Necessities with my Purse, or his Soul with my Prayers, these scenical and acci-

for Gods

Now, there is another part of charity, which is the Basis and Pillar of this, and that is the love of GOD for Whom we love our neighbour, for this I think charity, to love GOD for Himself, and our neighbour for GOD All that is truly amiable is GOD, or is it were a divided piece of Him, that retains a reflex or shadow of Himself Nor is it strange that we should place affection on that which is invisible all that we truly love is thus, what we adore under affection of our senses, deserves not the honour of so pure a title I thus we adore Virtue, though to the eyes of sense she be invisible thus that part of our noble friends that we love, is not that part that we embrace, but that insensible part that our arms cannot embrace GOD, being all goodness, can love nothing but Himself, He loves us but for that part which is as it were Himself, and the traduction of His Holy Spirit Let us call to assize the loves of our parents, the affection of our wives and children, and they are all dumb shows and dreams, without reality, truth, or con-

stancy For first there is a strong bond of affection between us and our Parents, yet how easily dissolved' We betake our selves to a woman, forget our mother in a wife, and the womb that bare us, in that that shall bear our Image This woman blessing us with children, our affection leaves the level it held before, and sinks from our bed unto our issue and picture of Posterity, where affection holds no steady mansion They, growing up in years, desire our ends, or applying themselves to a woman, take a lawful way to love another better than our selves Thus I perceive a man may be buried alive, and behold his grave in his own issue

I conclude therefore, and say, there is no happiness under (or, as Copernicus will have it, above) the Sun, nor any Crambe in that repeated verity and burthen of all the wisdom of Solomon All is vanity and vexation of Spirit There is no felicity in that the World adores Aristotle, whilst he labours to refute the Ideas of Plato, falls upon one himself, for his summum bonum is a Chimera, and there is no such thing as his Felicity That wherein God Himself is happy, the holy Angels are happy, in whose defect the Devils are unhappy, that dare I call happiness whatsoever conduceth unto this, may with an easy Metaphor deserve that name, whatsoever else the World terms Happiness, is to me a story out of Pliny, a tale of Boccaccio or Malizpini, an apparition, or neat delusion, wherein there is no more of Happiness than the name Bless me in this life with but peace of my Con-

LETTER TO A FRIEND,

GIVE me leave to wonder that News of this nature should have such heavy Wings, that you should hear so little concerning your dearest Friend, and that I must make that unwilling Repetition to tell you, SECT I.

Ad postam rigidos calices extendit,

Plinius,
Sat 1 105

that he is Dead and Buried, and by this time no Puny among the mighty Nations of the Dead , for tho he left this World not very many days past, yet every hour you know largely addeth unto that dark Secret , and considering the incessant Mortality of Mankind, you cannot conceive there dieth in the whole Earth so few as a thousand an hour

Altho at this distance you had no early Account or Particular of his Death, yet your Affection may cease to wonder that you had not some secret Sense or Intimation thereof by Dreams, thoughtful Whisperings, Mercurisms, Airy Nuncio's, or sympathetical Insinuations, SECT II

which many seem to have had at the Death of their dearest Friends, for since we find in that famous Story, that Spirits themselves were fain to tell their Fellows at a distance that the great Antonio was dead, we have a sufficient Excuse for our Ignorance in such Particulars, and must rest content with the common Road and Appian Way of Knowledge by Information Tho the uncertainty of the End of this World hath confounded all Humane Predictions, yet they who shall live to see the Sun and Moon darkned, and the Stars to fall from Heaven, will hardly be deceived in the Advent of the last Day, and therefore strange it is, that the common Fallacy of consumptive Persons, who feel not themselves dying, and therefore still hope to live, should also reach their Friends in perfect Health and Judgment—that you should be so little acquainted with Plautus's sick Complexion, or that almost an Hippocratical Face should not alarum you to higher fears, or rather despair of his Continuation in such an emaciated State, wherein medical Predictions fail not, as sometimes in acute Diseases, and wherein 'tis as dangerous to be sentenced by a Physician as a Judge

Upon my first Visit I was bold to tell them who had not let fall all hopes of his Recovery, That in my sad Opinion he was not like to behold a Grashopper, much less to pluck another Fig, and in no long time after, seemed to discover that odd mortal Symptom in him not mention'd by Hippocrates, that is, to lose his own Face, and look like some of his near Relations, for he maintained not his proper Countenance, but looked like his Uncle, the Lines of whose Face lay deep and invisible in his healthful Visage before for as from our beginning we run through variety of Looks, before we come to consistent and settled Faces, so before our End, by sick and languishing Alterations, we put on new Visages, and in our Retreat to Earth, may fall upon such Looks, which from community of seminal Originals, were before latent in us

He was fruitlessly put in hope of advantage by change of Air, and imbibing the pure Aerial Nitric of these Parts, and therefore, being so far spent, he quickly found Sardinia in Tivoli, and the most healthful Air of little effect, where Death had set her Broad Arrow, for he li ed not unto the middle of May, and confirmed the Observation of Hippocrates of that mortal time of the Year when the Leaves of the Fig tree resemble a Dragon's Claw. He is happily seated who lives in Places whose Air, Laith, and Water, promote not the Infirmities of his weaker Parts, or is early removed into Regions that correct them. He that is tabidly inclined were unwise to pass his days in Portugal, Cholical Persons will find little Comfort in Austria or Vienna, He that is Weak legg'd must not be in Love with Rome, nor an infirm Head with Venice or Paris. Death hath not only particular Stars in Heaven, but malevolent Places on Earth, which single out our Infirmities, and strike at our weaker Parts; in which Concern, passenger and migrant Birds have the great Advantages, who are naturally constituted for distant Habitations, whom no Seas nor Places limit, but in their appointed Seasons will visit us from Greenland and Mount Atlas, and as some think, even from the Antipodes

Tho we could not have his Life yet we missed not our desires in his soft Departure, which was scarce an Expiration and his End not unlike his Beginning, when the salient Point scarce affords a sensible motion, and his Departure so like unto Sleep that he scarce needed the civil Ceremony of closing his Eyes contrary unto the common way wherein Death draws up, Sleep lets fall the Eye-lids With what strift and pains we came into the World we know not, but tis commonly no easie matter to get out of it yet, if it could be made out that such who have easie Nativities have commonly hard Deaths and contrarily, his Departure was so easie, that we might justly suspect his Birth was of another nature, and that some Juno sat cross-legg'd at his Nativity

Besides his soft Death, the incurable state of his Disease might somewhat extenuate your Sorrow, who know that Monsters but seldom happen, Miracles more rarely, in Physick Angelus Victorius gives a serious Account of a Consumptive, Hectical, Pthysical Woman, who was suddenly cured by the Intercession of Ignatius We read not of any in Scripture who in this case applied unto our Saviour, tho some may be contained in that large Expression, that He went about Galilee, healing all manner of Sicknesses and all manner of Diseases Amulets, Spells, Sigils, and Incantations, practised in other Diseases, are seldom pretended in this, and we find no Sigil in the Archdoxus of Paracelsus to cure an extreme Consumption or Marasmus, which, if other Diseases fail, will put a period unto long Livers, and at last make dust of all. And therefore the Stoicks could not but think that the fixt Principle would wear out all the rest, and at last make an end of the world, which notwithstanding, without such a lingering period, the Creator may effect at His Pleasure and to make an end of all things on Earth, and our Planetical System of the World, He need but put out the Sun

St. Math
IV 23

I was not so curious to entitle the Stars unto any concern of his Death yet could not but take notice that he died when the Moon was in motion from the Meridian, at which time an old Italian long ago would persuade me that the greatest part of Men died but herein I confess I could never satisfy my Curiosity, altho from the time of Tides in Places upon or near the Sea there may be considerable Deductions, and Pliny hath an odd and remarkable Passage concerning the Death of Men and Animals upon the Recess or Ebb of the Sea. However, certain it is he died in the dead and deep part of the Night, when Nor might be most apprehensibly sud to be the Daughter of Chaos, the Mother of Sleep and Death, according to old

Genealogy, and so went out of this World about that hour when our blessed Saviour entered it, and about what time many conceive He will return again unto it Cardan hath a peculiar and no hard Observation from a Man's Hand, to know whether he was born in the day or night, which I confess holdeth in my own, and Scaliger to that purpose hath another from the tip of the Ear Most Men are begotten in the Night, most Animals in the Day, but whether more Persons have been born in the Night or the Day, were a Curiosity undecidable, tho more have perished by violent Deaths in the Day, yet in natural Dissolutions both Times may hold an Indifference at least but contingent Inequality The whole course of Time runs out in the Nativity and Death of Things, which whether they happen by Succession or Coincidence, are best computed by the natural, not artificial, Day

That Charles the Fifth was Crowned upon the day of his Nativity it being in his own power so to order it, makes no singular Animadversion, but that he should also take King Francis Prisoner upon that day, was an unexpected Coincidence, which made the same remarkable Antipater, who had an Anniversary Fever every Year upon his Birth day, needed no Astiological Revolution to know what day he should dye on When the fixed Stars have made a Revolution unto the points from whence they first set out, some of the Ancients thought the World would have an end, which was a kind of dying upon the day of its Nativity. Now the Disease prevailing and swiftly advancing about the time of his Nativity, some were of Opinion, that he would leave the World on the day he entred into it but this being a lingering Disease, and creeping softly on, nothing critical was found or expected, and he died not before fifteen days after Nothing is more common with Infants than to dye on the day of their Nativity, to behold the worldly Hours and but the Fractions thereof, and even to perish before their Nativity in the hidden World of the Womb, and before their good Angel is conceived to undertake them But in Persons who out-live many Years and when there are no less than three hundred sixty-five days to determine their Lives in every Year,—that the first day should make the last, that the Tail of the Snake should return into its Mouth precisely at that time, and they should wind up upon the day of their Nativity, is indeed a remarkable Coincidence, which the Astrology hath taken with pains to save, yet hath it been very wary in making Predictions of it

In this consumptive Condition and remarkable Extenuation, he came to be almost half himself, and left a great part behind him which he carried not to the Grave And tho that Story of Duke John Ernestus Mansfield be not so easily swallowed, that at his Death his Heart was found not to be so big as a Nut, yet, if the Bones of a good Sceleton weigh little more than twenty pounds, his Inwards and Flesh remaining

Omnibonus Fabricius in mortal Dysenteries of Children looks for a Spot behind the Ear, in consumptive Diseases some eye the complexion of Moals, Cardan eagerly views the Nails, some the lines of the Hand the Thunar or Muscle of the Thumb, some are so curious as to observe the depth of the Throat-pit how the proportion varyeth of the Small of the Legs unto the Calf, or the compass of the Neck unto the Circumference of the Head but all these, with many more, were so drowned in a mortal Visage and last Face of Hippocrates, that a weak physiognomist might say at first eye, This was a Face of Earth, and that Morta had set her Hard-Seal upon his Temples, easily perceiving what Caricatura Diaughts Death makes upon pined Faces, and unto what an unknown degree a Man may live backward

The Egyptian Mummies that I have seen, have had their Mouths open and somewhat gaping which afforded a good opportunity to view and observe their Teeth wherein 'tis not easie to find any wanting or decayed and therefore in Egypt, where one Man practised but one Operation, or the Diseases but of single Parts, it must needs be a barren Profession to confine unto that of drawing of teeth, and little better than to have been Tooth-drawer unto King Pyrrhus, who had but two in his Head How the Bannians of India mount in the Integrity of those Parts I find not particularly observed, who notwithstanding have an Advantage of their Preservation by abstaining from all Flesh, and employing their Teeth in such Food unto which they may seem at first framed, from their Figure and Conformation but sharp and corroding Rheums had so early mouldied those Rocks and hardest parts of his Labrick that a Man might well conceive that his Years were never like to double or twice tell over his Teeth Corruption had dealt more severely with them than sepulchral Fires and smart Flames with those of burnt Bodies of old for in the burnt Fragments of Urns which I have enquired into, altho I seem to find few Incisors or Sheeters, yet the Dog Teeth and Grinders do notably resist those Fires

SECT XIII

In the Years of his Childhood he had languished under the Disease of his Country the Rickets, after which notwithstanding many have been become strong and active Men but whether any have attained unto very great Years the Disease is scarce so old as to afford good Observation. Whether the Children of the English Plantations be subject unto the same Infirmity, may be worth the observing Whether Lameness and Halting do still encrease among the Inhabitants of Rovigno in Istria, I know not, yet scarce twenty Years ago Monsieur du Loir observed, that a third part of that People halted but too certain it is, that the Rickets encreaseth among us, the Small Pox grows more pernicious than the Great the Kings Pulse knows that the Kings Evil grows more common Quartan Agues are become no Strangers in Ireland, more common and mortal in England. and tho the Ancients gave that Disease very good Words, yet now that Bell makes no strange sound which rings out for the Effects thereof

Some think there were few Consumptions in the Old World, when Men lived much upon Milk, and that the ancient Inhabitants of this Island were less troubled with Coughs when they went naked, and slept in Caves and Woods, than Men now in Chambers and Leather beds. Plato will tell us that there was no such Disease as a Catarrh in Homer's time, and that it was but new in Greece in his Age. Polydore Virgil delivereth that Pleurisies were rare in England, who lived but in the days of Henry the Eighth. Some will allow no Diseases to be new, others think that many old ones are ceased and that such which we esteemed new will have but their time. However, the Mercy of GOD hath scattered the great heap of Diseases, and not loaded any one Countrey with all. some may be new in one Countrey which have been old in another. New Discoveries of the Earth discover new Diseases. for besides the common swarm, there are endemial and local Infirmities proper unto certain Regions, which in the whole Earth make no small number. and if Asia, Africa, and America should bring in their List, Pandora's Box would swell, and there must be a strange Pathology.

Most Men expected to find a consumed Kell, empty and bladder-like Guts, livid and marbled Lungs, and a withered Pericardium in this

exuccous Corps but some seemed too much to wonder that two Lobes of his Lungs adhered unto his side , for the like I had often found in Bodies of no suspected Consumptions or difficulty of Respiration And the same more often happenth in Men than other Animals, and some think in Women than in Men but the most remarkable I have met with, was in a Man, after a Cough of almost fifty Years, in whom all the Lobes adhered unto the Pleura, and each Lobe unto another , who having also been much troubled with the Gout, brake the rule of Cardan, and died of the Stone in the Bladder Aristotle makes a Query, Why some Animals cough, as Man , some not as Oxen If coughing be taken as it consisteth of a natural and voluntary motion, including Expectoration and spitting out, it may be as proper unto Man as bleeding at the Nose , otherwise we find that Vegetius and Rural writers have not left so many Medicines in vain against the Coughs of Cattel , and Men who perish by Coughs dye the Death of Sheep, Cats, and Lyons and tho Birds have no Midriff, yet we meet with divers Remedies in Arrianus against the Coughs of Hawks And tho it might be thought that all Animals who have Lungs do cough, yet in cetaceous Fishes, who have large and strong Lungs, the same is not observed , nor yet in oviparous Quadrupeds and in the greatest thereof, the Crocodile, altho we read much of their Tears, we find nothing of that motion.

From the Thoughts of Sleep, when the Soul was conceived nearest unto Divinity, the Ancients erected an Art of Divination, wherein while they too widely expatiated in loose and inconsequent Conjectures, Hippocrates wisely considered Dreams as they presaged Alterations in the Body, and so afforded hints toward the preservation of Health, and prevention of Diseases, and therein was so serious as to advise Alteration of Diet, Exercise, Sweating, Bathing, and Vomiting and also so religious, as to order Prayers and Supplications unto respective Deities, in good Dreams unto Sol, Jupiter caelestis, Jupiter opulentus Minerva, Mercurius, and Apollo, in bad unto Tellus, and the Heroes

'Twas too late to dream of Flying, of Limpid Fountains, smooth Waters white Vestments and fruitful green Trees, which are the Visions of healthful Sleeps, and at good distance from the Grave

And they were also too deeply dejected that he should dream of his dead Friends, inconsequently divining that he would not be long from them, for strange it was not that he should sometimes dream of the dead, whose Thoughts run always upon Death beside, to dream of the dead, so they appear not in dark Habits, and take nothing away from us, in Hippocrates his sense was of good signification, for we live by the dead, and every thing is or must be so before it becomes our Nourishment And Cardan, who dream'd that he discoursed with his dead Father in the Moon, made thereof no mortal Interpretation and even to dream that we are dead, was no condemnable Fantasm in old Oniromanticism, as having a signification of Liberty vacuity from Cares exemption and freedom from Troubles unknown unto the dead

SECT XIV

Some Dreams I confess may admit of easie and feminine Exposition he who dream'd that he could not see his right Shoulder might easily fear to lose the sight of his right Eye, he that before a Journey dream'd that his Feet were cut off, had a plain warning not to undertake his intended Journey But why to dream of Lettuce should presage some ensuing Disease why to eat Figs should signifie foolish Talk, why to eat Eggs great Trouble and to dream of Blindness should be so highly commended, according to the Oniromantic Verses of Astriampsyehus and Nicephorus, I shall leave unto your Divination

SECT XV

He was willing to quit the World alone and altogether, leaving no Earnest behind him for Corruption or Aftergrave, having small content in that common satisfaction to survive or live in another, but amply satisfied that his Disease should dye with himself, not revive in a Posterity to puzzle Physick, and make sad Memento's of their Parent hereditary. Leprosie awakes not sometimes before Forty, the Gout and Stone often later, but consumptive and tabid Roots sprout more early, and at the fairest make seventeen Years of our Life doubtful before that Age. They that enter the World with original Diseases as well as Sin, have not only common Mortality but sick Productions to destroy them, make commonly short Courses and live not at length but in Figures so that a sound Cæsarean Nativity may out last a natural Birth, and a Knife may sometimes make way for a more lasting fruit than a Midwife which makes so few Infants now able to endure the old Test of the River, and many to have feeble Children who could scarce have been married at Sparta and those provident States who studied strong and healthful Generations, which happen but contingently in more pecuniary Matches, or Marriages made by the Candle, wherein notwithstanding there is little redress to be hoped from an Astrologer or a Lawyer, and a good discerning Physician were like to prove the most successful Counsellor.

Julius Scaliger, who in a sleepless Fit of the Gout could make two hundred Verses in a Night, would have but five plain Words upon his Tomb. And this serious Peison, though no minor Wit, left the Poetry of his Epitaph unto others, either unwilling to commend himself, or to be judged by a Distich, and perhaps considering how unhappy great Poets have been in versifying their own Epitaphs, wherein Petrarcha, Dante, and Ariosto have so unhappily failed, that if their Tombs should out-last their Works, Posterity would find so little of Apollon on them, as to mistake them for Ciceronian Poets

SECT XXII

In this deliberate and creeping progress unto the Grave, he was somewhat too young, and of too noble a mind, to fall upon that stupid Symptom observable in divers Persons near their Journeys end, and which may be reckoned among the mortal Symptoms of their last Discase, that is, to become more narrow minded, miserable, and tenacious, unready to part with any thing when they are ready to part with all, and afraid to want when they have no time to spend. Mean while Physicians (who know that many are mad but in a single depraved Imagination, and one prevalent Desipency, and that beside and out of such single Deliriums a Man may meet with sober Actions and good Sense in Bedlums) cannot but smile to see the Heirs and concerned Relations gratulating themselves in the sober deputation of their Friends, and tho they behold such mad covetous Passages, content to think they dye in good Understanding, and in their sober Senses

SECT XXIII

Col iii 5

Avarice, which is not only Infidelity but Idolatry, either from covetous Progeny or questuary Education, had no Root in his Breast, who made good Works the Expression of his Faith, and was big with desires unto publick and lasting Charities, and surely where good Wishes and charitable Intentions exceed Abilities, Theoretical Beneficency may be more than a Dream.

See above,

They build not Castles in the Air who would build Churches on Earth, and tho they leave no such Structures here, may lay good Foundations in Heaven. In brief, his Life and Death were such, that I could not blame them who wished the like, and almost to have been himself almost, I say, for tho we may wish the prosperous appurtenances of others, or to be an other in his happy Accidents, yet so intrinsecal is every Man unto himself, that some doubt may be made, whether any would exchange his Being, or substantially become another Man.

He had wisely seen the World at home and abroad, and thereby observed under what variety Men are deluded in the pursuit of that which is not here to be found. And altho he had no Opinion of reputed Felicities below and apprehended Men widely out in the estimate of such Happiness, yet his sober contempt of the World wrought no Democritism or Cynicism, no laughing or snarling at it, as well understanding there are not Felicities in this World to satisfy a serious Mind, and therefore to soften the stream of our Lives, we are fain to take in the reputed Contentations of this World, to unite with the Crowd in their Beatitudes, and to make our selves happy by Consortion, Opinion, or Co-existimation for strictly to separate from received and customary Felicities, and to confine unto the rigor of Realities, were to contract the Consolation of our Beings unto too uncomfortable Circumscriptions.

SECT XXIV

SECT XXV Not to fear Death, nor desire it, was short of his Resolution to be dissolved, and be with CHRIST, was his dying ditty He conceived his Thred long, in no long course of Years, and when he had scarce out lived the second Life of Lazarus, esteeming it enough to approach the Years of his Saviour, Who so ordered His own humane State, as not to be old upon Earth But to be content with Death may be better than to desire it a miserable Life may make us wish for Death, but a virtuous one to rest in it, which is the Advantage of those resolved Christians, who, looking on Death not only as the sting, but the period and end of Sin the Horizon and Isthmus between this Life and a better, and the Death of this World but as a Nativity of another, do contentedly submit unto the common Necessity, and can not Lnoch or Elias

SECT XXVI Not to be content with Life is the unsatisfactory state of those which destroy themselves, who being afraid to live, run blindly upon their own Death, which no Man fears by Experience and the Stoicks had a notable Doctrine to take away the fear thereof, that is, In such Extremities to desire that which is not to be avoided, and wish what might be feared, and so made Evils voluntary and to suit with their own Desires, which took off the terror of them But the ancient Martyrs were not encouraged by such Fallacies, who, tho they feared not Death, were afraid to be their own Executioners, and therefore thought it more Wisdom to crucifie their Lusts than their Bodies, to circumcise than stab their Hearts, and to mortify than kill themselves

His willingness to leave this World about that SECT XXVII Age when most Men think they may best enjoy it, the paradoxical unto worldly Lais, was not strange unto mine, who have so often observed that many, tho old, oft stick fast unto the World, and seem to be drawn like Cacus's Oxen, backward, with great struggling and reluctancy unto the Grave. The long habit of Living makes meer Men more hardly to part with Life, and all to be nothing but what is to come. To live at the rate of the old World when some could scarce remember themselves young, may afford no better digested Death than a more moderate period. Many would have thought it an Happiness to have had their lot of Life in some notable Conjunctions of Ages past, but the uncertainty of future Times hath tempted few to make a part in Ages to come. And surely he that hath taken the true Altitude of Things, and rightly calculated the degenerate state of this Age, is not like to envy those that shall live in the next, much less three or four hundred years hence, when no Man can comfortably imagine what Face this World will carry and therefore, since every Age makes a step unto the end of all things, and the Scripture Tim iii 1 affords so hard a Character of the last Times, quiet Minds will be content with their Generations, and rather bless Ages past, than be ambitious of those to come.

- SECT XXVIII Tho Age had set no Seal upon his Face, yet a dim Eye might clearly discover Fifty in his Actions, and therefore, since Wisdom is the gray Hair, and an unspotted Life old Age, altho his Years came short, he might have been said to have held up with longer Livers, and to have been Solomon's Old Man. And surely, if we deduct all those days of our Life which we might wish unlived, and which abate the comfort of those we now live, if we reckon up only those days which GOD hath accepted of our Lives, a Life of good Years will hardly be a span long the Son in this sense may out-live the Father, and none be climacterically old. He that early arriveth unto the Parts and Prudence of Age, is happily old without the uncomfortable Attendants of it, and tis superfluous to live unto gray Hairs, when in a peccocious Tempei we anticipate the Virtues of them. In brief, he cannot be accounted young who out-liveth the old Man. He that hath early arrived unto the measure of a perfect Stature in CHRIST, hath already fulfilled the prime and longest Intention of his Being and one day lived after the perfect Rule of Piety, is to be preferred before sinning Immortality.
- Eph iv 13
- SECT XXIX Altho he attained not unto the Years of his Predcessors, yet he wanted not those preserving Virtues which confirm the thread of weaker Constitutions. Cautelous Chastity and crafty Sobriety were far from him, those Jewels were Paragon, without Flaw, Hair, Ice, or Cloud in him, which affords me an hint to proceed in these good Wishes and few Memento's unto you.

Tread softly and circumspectly in this funambulous Track and narrow Path of Goodness pursue Virtue virtuously be sober and temperate, not to preserve your Body in a sufficiency to wanton Ends, not to spare your Purse, not to be free from the Infamy of common Transgressors that way, and thereby to bralance or palliate obscure and closer Vices, nor simply to enjoy Health, (by all which you may leaven good Actions, and render Virtues disputable) but in one Word, that you may truly serve GOD, which every Sickness will tell you you cannot well do without Health The sick man's Sacrifice is but a lame Oblation Pious Treasures laid up in healthful days excuse the defect of sick Non-performances, without which we must needs look back with Anxiety upon the lost opportunities of Health, and may have cause rather to envy than pity the Ends of penitent Malefactors, who go with clear parts unto the last Act of their Lives, and in the integrity of their Faculties return their Spirit unto GOD That gave it

Trust not with some that the Epistle of St James is Apocryphal and so read with less fear that stabbing truth, that in company with this Vice thy Religion is in vain. Moses broke the Tables without breaking of the Law, but where Charity is broke, the Law it self is shattered, which cannot be whole without Love, that is the fulfilling of it. Look humbly upon thy Virtues, and tho thou art rich in some, yet think thy self poor and naked without that crowning Grace, which thinketh no Evil, which envieth not, which beareth, believeth, hopeth, endureth all things. MY LORD,

The Honour you have done our Family obligeth us to make all just Acknowledgments of it, and there is no Form of Acknowledgment in our power more worthy of Your Lordships Acceptance than this Dedication of the Last Work of our Honoured and Learned Father. Encouraged hereunto by the Knowledge we have of Your Lordships Judicious Relish of universal Learning and sublime Virtue, we beg the Favour of Your Acceptance of it, which will very much oblige our Family in general, and her in particular, who is,

THE PREFACE.

IF any One, after he has read Religio Medici and the ensuing Discourse, can make Doubt whether the same Person was the Author of them both, he may be assured by the Testimony of Mrs LITTELTON, Sr THOMAS BROWN's Daughter, who lived with her Father when it was composed by Him, and who at the time read it written by his own Hand, and also by the Testimony of Others, (of whom I am One,) who read the MS of the Author immediately after his Death, and who have since read the same, from which it hath been faithfully and exactly transcribed for the Press. The Reason why it was not printed sooner is, because it was unhappily lost, by being mislay'd among other MSS for which Search was lately made in the Presence of the Lord Arch-Bishop of Canterbury, of which his Grace by Letter informed Mrs LITTELTON, when he sent the MS to her. There is nothing printed in the Discourse, or in the short notes, but what is found in the Original MS of the Author, except only where an Oversight had made the Addition or Transposition of some words necessary.

were ordered more by Stars than Reason, and that things went on rather by Lottery than Election

PART I

If thy Vessel be but small in the Ocean of this World, if Meanness of Possessions be thy allotment upon Earth, forget not those Virtues which the great Disposer of all bids thee to entertain from thy Quality and Condition, that is, Submission, Humility, Content of mind, and Industry. Content may dwell in all Stations To be low, but above contempt, may be high enough to be Happy. But many of low Degree may be higher than computed, and some Cubits above the common Commensuration, for in all States Virtue gives Qualifications and Allowances, which make out defects. Rough Diamonds are sometimes mistaken for Pebbles, and Meanness may be Rich in Accomplishments, which Riches in vain desire. If our merits be above our Stations, if our intrinsic Value be greater than what we go for or our Value than our Valuation, and if we stand higher in GOD'S, than in the Censor's Book, it may make some equitable balance in the inequalities of this World, and there may be no such vast Chasm or Gulph between disparities as common Measures determine. The Divine Eye looks upon high and low differently from that of Man. They who seem to stand upon Olympus, and high mounted unto our eyes, may be but in the Valleys and low Ground unto His, for He looks upon those as highest who nearest approach His Divinity, and upon those as lowest who are farthest from it.

The rapid courses of the heavenly bodies are rather imitable by our Thoughts than our corporeal Motions, yet the solemn motions of our lives amount unto a greater measure than is commonly apprehended. Some few men have surrounded the Globe of the Earth, yet many in the set Locomotions and movements of their days have measured the circuit of it, and twenty thousand miles have been exceeded by them. Ps. CVIII. 1

Since Virtuous Actions have their own Trumpets, and without any noise from thy self will have their resound abroad, busy not thy best Member in the Encomium of thy self. Praise is a debt we owe unto the Virtues of others, and due unto our own from all, whom Malice hath not made Mutes, or Envy struck Dumb. Fall not however into the common prevaricating way of self commendation and boasting, by denoting the imperfections of others He who discommendeth others obliquely commendeth himself. He who whispers their infirmities proclaims his own Exemption from them, and consequently says, I am not as this Publian, or Hic niger, whom I talk of. Open ostentation and loud vainglory is more tolerable than this obliquity, as but containing some froath no Ink, as but consisting of a personal piece of folly, nor complicated with uncharitableness. Superfluously we seek a precarious applause abroad every good Man hath his plaudite within himself, and though his Tongue be silent, is not without loud Cymbals in his Breast. PUNISH not thy self with Pleasure; glut not thy sense with palative Delights, nor revenge the contempt of Temperance by the penalty of Satiety. Were there an Age of delight or any pleasure durable, who would not honour Volupia? but the Race of Delight is short, and Pleasures have mutable faces. The pleasures of one age are not pleasures in another, and their Lives fall short of our own. Even in our sensual days the strength of delight is in its seldomness or rarity, and sting in its satiety. Mediocrity is its Life, and immoderacy its Confusion. The luxurious Emperors of old inconsiderately satiated themselves with the Dainties of Sea and Land, till, wearied through all varieties, their refectations became a study unto them, and they were fain to feed by Invention. Bring candid Lyes unto the perusal of mens works, and let not Zoilism or Detraction blast well intended labours He that endureth no faults in mens writings must only read his own, wherein for the most part all appeareth white Quotation mistakes, inadvertency, expedition and human Lapses, may make not only Moles but Wuts in learned Authors, who notwithstanding, being judged by the capital matter, admit not of disparagement I should unwillingly affirm that Cicero was but slightly versed in Homer, because in his Work De Gloria he ascribed those verses unto Ajax, which were delivered by Hector What if Plautus in the account of Hercules mistaketh nativity for conception? Who would have mean thoughts of Apollinaris Sidonius, who seems to mistake the River Tigris for Luphrates, and, though a good Historian and learned Bishop of Auvergne, had the misfortune to be out in the Story of David, making mention of him when the Ark was sent back by the Philistins upon a Cart, which was before his time? Though I have no great opinion of Machiavel's Learning, yet I shall not presently say, that he was but a Novice in Roman History, because he was mistaken in placing Commodus after the Emperour Severus Capital Truths are to be narrowly eyed, collateral Lapses and circumstantial deliveries not to be too strictly sifted And if the substantial subject be well forged out, we need not examine the sparks which irregularly fly from it

Let well-weighted Considerations, not stiff and peremptory Assumptions, guide thy discourses Pen, and Actions To begin or continue our works like Trismegistus of old, Verum, certe verum, atque verissimum est, would sound awfully unto present Ears in this strict enquiring Age, wherein, for the most part, Probably, and Perhaps, will hardly serve to mollify the Spirit of captious Contradictors If Cardan saith that a Parrot is a beautiful Bird, Scaliger will set his

The Compage of all Physical Truths is not so closely jointed, but opposition may find intrusion, nor always so closely maintained, as not to suffer attrition. Many Positions seem quodlibetically constituted, and like a Delphian Blade will cut on both sides. Some Truths seem almost Falshoods, and some Falshoods almost Truths, wherein Falshood and Truth seem almost æquilibriumously stated, and but a few grains of distinction to bear down the ballance. Some have digged deep, yet glanced by the Royal Vein, and a Man may come unto the Pericardium, but not the Heart of Truth. Besides, many things are known, as some are seen, that is by Parallaxis, or at some distance from their true and proper beings, the superficial regard of things having a different aspect from their true and central Natures. And this moves sober Pens unto suspensory and timorous assertions, nor presently to obtrude them as Sibyls leaves, which after considerations may find to be but folious appearances, and not the central and vital interiors of Truth.

Value the Judicious, and let not mere acquests in minor parts of Learning gain thy preexistimation. 'Tis an unjust way of compute to magnify a weak Head for some Latin abilities, and to undervalue a solid Judgment, because he knows not the genealogy of Hector. PART II Fancy of the Pythagorean metempsychosis, whereby they might hope to enjoy this happiness in their third or fourth selves, and behold that in Pythagoras, which they now but foresee in Euphorbus. The World, which took but six days to make, is like to take six thousand to make out mean while old Truths voted down begin to resume their places, and new ones arise upon us, wherein there is no comfort in the happiness of Tully's Elizium, or any satisfaction from the Ghosts of the Ancients, who knew so little of what is now well known. Men disparage not Antiquity, who prudently exalt new Enquiries, and make not them the Judges of Truth, who were but fellow Enquirers of it. Who can but magnify the Endeavors of Aristotle, and the noble start which Learning had under him, or less than pity the slender progression made upon such advantages, while many Centuries were lost in repetitions and transcriptions scaling up the Book of Knowledge? And therefore, rather than to swell the leaves of Learning by fruitless Repetitions, to sing the same Song in all Ages, nor adventure at Essays beyond the attempt of others, many would be content that some would write like Helmont or Paracelsus, and be willing to endure the monstrosity of some opinions, for divers singular notions requiting such aberrations.

SECT VI Despair not of better

Despair not the obliquities of younger ways, nor despair of better things whereof there is yet no prospect. Who would imagine that Diogenes, who in his younger days was a falsifier of Money, should in the after-course of his Life be so great a contemner of Metal? Some Negros, who believe the Resurrection, think that they shall rise white. Even in this life Regeneration may imitate Resurrection, our black and vitious tinctures may wear off, and goodness cloath us with candour. Good Admonitions knock not always in vain. There will be signal Examples of GOD's mercy, and the Angels must not want their charitable Rejoyces for the conversion of lost Sinners. I figures of most Angles do nearest approach unto Circles, which have no Angles at all. Some may be near unto goodness, who are conceived far from it, and many things happen, not likely to ensue from any promises of Antecedencies. Culpable beginnings have found commendable conclusions, and infamous courses pious retractations. Detestable Sinners have proved exemplary Converts on Earth, and may be glorious in the Apartment of Mary Magdalen in Heaven. Men are not the same through all divisions of their Ages. Time, Experience, self-Reflexions, and GOD's mercies, make in some well-temper'd minds a kind of translation before Death, and Men to differ from themselves as well as from other Persons. Hereof the old World afforded many Examples to the infamy of latter Ages, wherein Men too often live by the rule of their inclinations, so that, without any astral prediction, the first day gives the last. Men are commonly as they were, or rather, as bad dispositions run into worser

Speckled face of honesty in

If the Almighty will not spare us according to His merciful capitulation at Sodom, if His Goodness please not to pass over a great deal of Bad for a small pittance of Good, or to look upon us in the Lump, there is slender hope for Mercy, or sound presumption of fulfilling half his Will, either in Persons or Nations they who excel in some Virtues being so often defective in others, few Men driving at the extent and amplitude of Goodness but computing themselves by their best parts, and others by their worst, are content to rest in those Virtues which others commonly want Which makes this speckled Face of Honesty in the World, and which was the imperfection of the old Philosophers and great pretencers unto Virtue, who, well declining the gaping Vices of Intemperance, Incontinency Violence and Oppression, were yet blindly peccant in iniquities of closer faces, were envious malicious, contentners, scoffers, censurers, and stufft with vizard Vices, no less depraving the Ethereal particle and dimer portion of Man For Envy, Malice, Hatred are the qualities of Satan, close and dark like himself, and where such brands smোক the Soul cannot be white Vice may be had at all prices, expensive and costly iniquities, which make the noise, cannot be every Man's sins, but the soul may be foully iniquated at a very low rate, and a Man may be cheaply vicious, to the perdition of himself.

Opinion rides upon the neck of Reason, and Men are Happy, Wise, or Learned, according as that Empress shall set them down in the Register of Reputation. However, weigh not thy self in the scales of thy own opinion, but let the Judgment of the Judicious be the Standard of thy Merit. Self-estimation is a flatterer too readily intitling us unto Knowledge and Abilities, which others solicitously labour after, and doubtfully think they attain. Surely such confident tempers do pass their days in best tranquillity, who, resting in the opinion of their own abilities, are happily gull'd by such contentation, wherein Pride, Self conceit, Confidence, and Opiniatry will hardly suffer any to complain of imperfection. To think themselves in the right, or all that right or only that, which they do or think, is a fallacy of high content, though others laugh in their sleeves, and look upon them as in a deluded state of Judgment, wherein, notwithstanding, 'twere but a civil piece of complacency to suffice them to sleep who would not wake, to let them rest in their securities, nor by dissent or opposition to stagger their contentments.

Since the Brow speaks often true, since Eyes and Noses have Tongues, and the countenance proclaims the Heart and inclinations, let observation so far instruct thee in Physiognomical lines, as to be some Rule for thy distinction, and Guide for thy affection unto such as look most like Men. Visages which any way participate of Symmetries and Schemes of Look common unto other Animals For as though Man were the extract of the World, in whom all were in coagulato, which in their forms were in soluto and at Extension, we often observe that Men do most act those Creatures, whose constitution, parts, and complexion do most predominate in their mixtures This is a corner stone in Physiognomy, and holds some truth not only in particular Persons but also in whole Nations There are therefore provincial Faces, national Lips and Noses, which testify not only the Natures of those Countries, but of those which have them elsewhere Thus we may make England the whole Lanth, dividing it not only into Europe, Asia, Africa, but the particular Regions thereof, and may in some latitude affirm, that there are Egyptians, Scythians, Indians among us, who though born in England, yet carry the Faces and Air of those Countries, and are also agreeable and correspondent unto their Natures Faces look uniformly unto our Eyes how they appear unto some Animals of a more piercing or differing sight, who are able to discover the inequalities, rubbs, and hairiness of the Skin, is not without good doubt, and therefore in reference unto Man, Cupid is said to be blind. Affection should not be too sharp-Eyed, and Love is not to be made by magnifying Glasses If things were seen as they truly are, the beauty of bodies would be much abridged, and therefore the World, for which they were brought into it whereas Men of years, matured for counsels and designs, seem to be beyond the vigour of their active fortunes, and high exploits of life, providentially ordained unto Ages best agreeable unto them And therefore many brave men, finding their fortune grow faint, and feeling its declination, have timely withdrawn themselves from great attempts, and so escaped the ends of mighty Men, disproportionable to their beginnings But magnanimous Thoughts have so dimmed the Eyes of many, that, forgetting the very essence of Fortune, and the vicissitude of acts of Providence

SECT XI

Carry no careless Eye upon the unexpected scenes of things, but ponder the acts of Providence in the publick ends of great and notable Men, set out unto the view of all for no common memorandums The Tragical Exits and unexpected periods of some eminent Persons cannot but amuse considerate Observators; wherein notwithstanding most Men seem to see by extramission, without reception or self-reflexion, and conceive themselves unconcerned by the fallacy of their own Exemption whereas the Mercy of GOD hath singled out but few to be the signals of His Justice, leaving the generality of Mankind to the pædagogoy of Example But the inadvertency of our Natures not well apprehending this favorable method and merciful decimation, and that He sheweth in some what others also deserve, they entertain no sense of His Hand beyond the stroke of themselves. Whereupon the whole becomes necessarily punished, and the contracted Hand of GOD extended unto universal Judgments, from whence nevertheless the stupidity of our tempers receives but faint impressions, and in the most Tragical state of times holds but starts of good motions. So that to continue us in goodness there must be iterated returns of misery, and a circulation in afflictions is necessary. And since we cannot be wise by warnings, since Plagues are insignificant, except we be personally plagued, since also we cannot be punish'd unto Amendment by proxy or commutation, nor by vicinity, but contactation, there is an unhappy necessity that we must smart in our own Skins, and the provoked arm of the Almighty must fall upon our selves. The capital sufferings of others are rather our monuments than acquittments. There is but One Who dyed salvifically for us, and able to say unto Death, Hitherto shalt thou go, and no farther, only one enlivening Death, which makes Gardens of Graves, and that which was sowed in Corruption to arise and flourish in Glory when Death it self shall dye, and living shall have no Period, when the damned shall mourn at the funeral of Death, when Life not Death shall be the wages of sin, when the second Death shall prove a miserable Life, and destruction shall be courted

Ps cxxvii 5

Although their Thoughts may seem too severe, who think that few ill-natur'd Men go to Heaven, yet it may be acknowledged that good-natur'd Persons are best founded for that place, who enter the World with good Dispositions and natural Graces, more ready to be advanced by impressions from above and christianized unto pieties, who carry about them plain and down-right dealing Minds, Humility, Mercy, Charity, and Virtues acceptable unto GOD and Man. But whatever success they may have as to Heaven, they are the acceptable Men on Earth, and happy is he who hath his quarter full of them for his Friends. These are not the Dens wherein Falshood lurks, and Hypocrisy hides its Head, wherein Frowardness makes its Nest, or where Malice, Hard-heartedness, and Oppression love to dwell, not those by whom the Poor get little, and the Rich some time loose all, Men not of retracted Looks, but who carry their Hearts in their Faces, and need not to be look'd upon with perspectives, not sordidly or mischievously ingrateful, who cannot learn to ride upon the neck of the afflicted, nor load the heavy laden, but who keep the Temple of Janus shut by peaceable and quiet tempers, who make not only the best Friends, but the best Enemies, as easier to forgive than offend, and ready to pass by the second offence before they avenge the first, who make natural Royalists, obedient Subjects, kind and merciful Princes, verified in our own, one of the best-natur'd Kings of this Throne. Of the old Roman

Emperours the best were the best-natur'd, though they made but a small number, and might be writ in a Ring Many of the rest were as bad Men as Princes, Humorists rather than of good humors, and of good natural parts rather than of good natures, which did but arm their bad inclinations, and make them wittily wicked

With what strift and pains we come into the World we remember not, but 'tis commonly found no easy matter to get out of it Many have studied to exasperate the ways of Death, but fewer hours have been spent to soften that necessity That the smoothest way unto the grave is made by bleeding, as common opinion presumeth, beside the sick and fainting Languors which accompany that effusion, the experiment in Lucan and Seneca will make us doubt, under which the noble Stoick so deeply laboured, that, to conceal his affliction, he was fain to retire from the sight of his Wife, and not ashamed to implore the merciful hand of his Physician to shorten his misery therein Ovid, the old Heroes, and the Stoicks, who were so afraid of drowning, (as dreading thereby the extinction of their Soul, which they conceived to be a Fire,) stood probably in fear of an easier way of Death, wherein the Water, entering the possessions of Air, makes a temperate suffocation, and kills as it were without a Fever Surely many, who have had the Spirit to destroy themselves, have not been ingenious in the contrivance thereof 'Twas a dull way practised by Themistocles to overwhelm himself with

The Egyptians were merciful contrivers, who destroyed their malefactors by Asps, charming their senses into an invincible sleep, and killing as it were with Heimes his Rod The Turkish Emperour, odious for other Cruelty, was herein a remarkable Master of Mercy, killing his Favorite in his sleep, and sending him from the shade into the house of darkness He who had been thus destroyed would hardly have bled at the presence of his destroyer, when Men are already dead by metaphor, and pass but from one sleep unto another, wanting herein the eminent part of severity, to feel themselves to dye, and escaping the sharpest attendant of Death, the lively apprehension thereof But to learn to dye is better than to study the ways of dying Death will find some ways to unty or cut the most Gordian Knots of Life, and make men's miseries as mortal as themselves whereas evil Spirits, as undying Substances, are unseparable from their calamities, and therefore they everlastingly struggle under them Angustia's, and bound up with immortality can never get out of themselves

PART III.

'TIS hard to find a whole Age to imitate, or what Century to propose for Example. SECT. I
No one age
exemplary Some have been far more approveable than others but Virtue and Vice, Panegyrics and Satyrs, scatteringly to be found in all History sets down not only things laudable, but abominable, things which should never have been or never have been known so that noble patterns must be fetched here and there from single Persons, rather than whole Nations, and from all Nations, rather than any one. The World was early bad, and the first sin the most deplorable of any. The younger World afforded the oldest Men, and perhaps the Best and the Worst, when length of days made virtuous habits heroical and immoveable, vicious, inveterate and irreclaimable. And since 'tis said that the imaginations of their hearts were evil, only evil, the world early bad. and continually evil, Gen vi 5 it may be feared that their sins held pace with their lives, and their Longevity swelling their Impieties, the Longanimity of GOD would no longer endure such vivacious

PART III abominations Their Impieties were surely of a deep dye, which required the whole Element of Water to wash them away, and overwhelmed their memories with themselves, and so shut up the first Windows of Time, leaving no Histories of those longevous generations, when Men might have been properly Historians, when Adam might have read long Lectures unto Methuselah, and Methuselah unto Noah For had we been happy in just Historical accounts of that unparallel'd World, we might have been acquainted with Wonders, and have understood not a little of the Acts and undertakings of Moses his mighty Men, and Men of renown of old, which might have enlarg'd our Thoughts, and made the World older unto us For the unknown part of time shortens the estimation, if not the compute of it What hath escaped our Knowledge falls not under our Consideration, and what is and will be latent is little better than non-existent

SECT II.

He honours
God who

Him.

Some things are dictated for our Instruction, some acted for our Imitation, wherein 'tis best to ascend unto the highest conformity, and to the honour of the Exemplar He honours GOD who imitates Him For what we virtuously imitate we approve and admire, and since we delight not to imitate Inferiours, we aggrandize and magnify those we imitate, since also we are most apt to imitate those we love, we testify our affection in our imitation of the Inimitable To affect to be like may be no imitation To act, and not to be what we pretend to imitate, is but a mimical conformation, and carrieth no PART III Virtue in it. Lucifer imitated not GOD, when he said he would be like the Highest, and he imitated not Jupiter, who counterfeited Thunder. Where Imitation can go no farther, let Admiration step on, whereof there is no end in the wisest form of Men. Even Angels and Spirits have enough to admire in their sublimer Natures, Admiration being the act of the Creature, and not of GOD, Who doth not admire Himself. Created Natures allow of swelling Hyperboles, nothing can be said hyperbolically of GOD, nor will His Attributes admit of expressions above their own Exuperances. Tris-megistus his Circle, whose center is every where, See above, and circumference no where, was no Hyperbole. P 19

 Words cannot exceed, where they cannot express enough. Even the most winged Thoughts fall at the setting out, and reach not the portal trines let Virtuous considerations state the determination. Look upon Opinions as thou doest upon the Moon, and chuse not the dark hemisphere for thy contemplation. Embrace not the opacous and blind side of Opinions, but Embrace not that which looks most Luciferously or influen- the blind tially unto Goodness. 'Tis better to think that side of

 there are Guardian Spirits, than that there are opinions
 no Spirits to guard us, that vicious Persons are Slaves, than that there is any servitude in Virtue, that times past have been better than times present, than that times were always bad,

PART III and that to be Men it suffiseth to be no better than Men in all Ages, and so promiscuously to swim down the turbid stream, and make up the grand confusion. Sow not thy understanding with Opinions, which make nothing of Iniquities, and fallaciously extenuate Transgressions. Look upon Vices and vicious Objects with hyperbolical Eyes, and rather enlarge their dimensions, that their unseen Deformities may not escape thy sense, and their poysonous parts and stings may appear massy and monstrous unto thee, for the undiscerned Particles and Atoms of Evil deceive us, and we are undone by the Invisibles of seeming Goodness. We are only deceived in what is not discerned, and to err is but to be blind or dim sighted as to some Perceptions.

SECT IV
To be virtuous by Epitome, be firm to the principles of goodness

To be Honest in a right Line, and Virtuous by Epitome, be firm unto such Principles of Goodness, as carry in them Volumes of instruction and may abridge thy Labour. And since instructions are many, hold close unto those whereon the rest depend. So may we have all in a few, and the Law and the Prophets in a Rule, the Sacred Writ in Stenography, and the Scripture in a Nut Shell. To pursue the osseous and solid part of Goodness, which gives Stability and Rectitude to all the rest, to settle on fundamental Virtues, and bid early defiance unto Mother-vices, which carry in their Bowels the seminals of other Iniquities, makes a short cut in Goodness, and strikes not off an Head but the whole Neck of Hydra. For we are carried into the dark Lake, like the Ægyptian River into the Sea, by seven principal Ostiaries. The Mother Sins of that number are the Deadly engins of evil Spirits that undo us, and even evil Spirits themselves, and he who is under the Chains thereof is not without a possession. Mary Magdalene had more than seven Devils, if these with their Imps were in her, and he who is thus possessed may literally be named Legion. Where such Plants grow and prosper, look for no Champian or Region void of Thorns, but productions like the Tree of Goa, and Forests of abomination.

Rake not up envious displacences at things successful unto others, which the wise Disposer of all thinks not fit for thy self. Reconcile the events of things unto both beings, that is, of this World and the next, so will there not seem so many Riddles in Providence, nor various inequalities in the dispensation of things below. The aspects, conjunctions, and configurations of the Stars, which mutually diversify, intend, or qualify their influences, are but the varieties of their nearer or farther conversation with one another, and like the Consortion of Men, whereby they become better or worse, and even Exchange their Natures Since Men live by Examples, and will be imitating

He who hath not early suffered this Shipwreck, and in his younger Days escaped this Charybdis, may make a happy Voyage, and not come in with black Sails into the port Self conversation, or to be alone, is better than such Consolation Some School-men tell us, that he is properly alone, with whom in the same place there is no other of the same species Nabuchodonozor was alone, though among the Beasts of the Field, and a wise Man may be tolerably said to be alone, though with a Rabble of People little better than Beasts about him Unthinking Heads, who have not learn'd to be alone, are in a Prison to themselves, if they be not also with others, whereas on the contrary, they whose thoughts are in a fair and hurry within, are sometimes fain to retire into Company, to be out of the crowd of themselves He who must needs have Company, must needs have sometimes bad Company Be able to be alone Loose not the advantage of Solitude, and the Society of thy self, nor be only content, but delight to be alone and single with Omnipresency He who is thus prepared, the Day is not uneasy nor the Night black unto him Darkness may bound his Eyes, not his Imagination In his

 of sins, nor cominutively iniquous in the valuation of transgressions, but weigh them in the Scales of Heaven, and by the weights of righteous Reason Think that Revenge too high, which is but level with the offence Let thy Arrows of Revenge fly short, or be aimed like those of Jonathan, to fall beside the mark Too many there be to whom a dead Enemy smells well, and who find Musk and Amber in Revenge The scnty of such minds holds no rule in Retaliations, requiring too often a Head for a Tooth, and the supreme revenge for tres passes which a night's rest should obliterate.

But patient Meekness takes injuries like Pills, PART III
 not chewing but swallowing them down, Laconically suffering, and silently passing them over, while angry Pride makes a noise, like Homeric Mars, at every scratch of offences. Since Women take most delight in Revenge, it may seem but feminine manhood to be vindictive. If thou must needs have thy Revenge of thine Enemy, with a soft Tongue break his Bones, heap Coals of Fire on his Head, forgive him, and enjoy it. To forgive our Enemies is a charming way of Revenge, and a short Cæsarian Conquest overcoming without a blow, laying our Enemies at our Feet, under sorrow, shame, and repentance, leaving our Foes our Friends, and solicitously inclined to grateful Retaliations. Thus to return upon our Adversaries is a healing way of Revenge, and to do good for evil a soft and melting ultion, a method taught from Heaven to keep all smooth on Earth. Common forceable ways make not an end of Evil, but leave Hatred and Malice behind them. An Enemy thus reconciled is little to be trusted, as wanting the foundation of Love and Charity, and but for a time restrained by disadvantage or inability. If thou hast not Mercy for others, yet be not Cruel unto thy self. To ruminate upon evils, to make critical notes upon injuries, and be too acute in their apprehensions, is to add unto our own Tortures, to feather the Arrows of our Enemies, to lash our selves with the Scorpions of our Foes, and to resolve to sleep no more. If thou hast the brow to endure the Name of Traytor, Perjur'd, or Oppressor, yet cover thy Face when Ingratitude is thrown at thee If that degenerate Vice possess thee, hide thy self in the shadow of thy shame, and pollute not noble society Grateful Ingeniunities are content to be oblig'd within some compass of Retribution, and being depressed by the weight of iterated favours may so labour under their inabilityes of Requital, as to abate the content from Kindnesses, but narrow self-ended Souls make prescription of good Offices, and oblig'd by often favours think others still due unto them whereas, if they but once fail, they prove so perversely ungrateful, as to make nothing of former courtesies, and to bury all that's past Such tempers pervert the generous course of things, for they discourage the inclinations of noble minds, and make Beneficency cool unto acts of obligation, whereby the grateful World should subsist, and have their consolation Common gratitude must be kept alive by the additional fewel of new courtesies, but generous Gratiitudes, though but once well obliged, without quickening repetitions or expectation of new Favours, have thankful minds for ever, for they write not their obligations in sandy but marble memories, which wear not out but with themselves

Personate

Though the World be histrionical, and most Men live ironically, yet be thou what thou singly art, and personate only thy self. Swim smoothly in the stream of thy Nature, and live but one Man. To single Hearts doubling is discrediting: such tempers must sweat to dissemble, and prove but hypocritical Hypocrites. Simulation must be short. Men do not easily continue a counterfeiting Life, or dissemble unto Death. He who counterfeiteth, acts a part, and is as it were out of himself: which, if long, proves so irksome, that Men are glad to pull off their Vizards, and resume themselves again, no practice being able to naturalize such unnaturals, or make a Man rest content not to be himself. And therefore since Sincerity is thy Temper, let veracity be thy Virtue in Words, Manners, and Actions.  Such a latitude of years may hold a considerable corner in the general Map of Time , and a Man may have a curt Epitome of the whole course thereof in the days of his own Life, may clearly see he hath but acted over his Fore fathers, what it was to live in Ages past, and what living will be in all ages to come.

PART III He is like to be the best judge of Time who hath lived to see about the sixtieth part thereof Persons of short times may know what tis to live, but not the life of Man, who, having little behind them, are but Januses of one Face, and know not singularities enough to raise Axioms of this World but such a compass of Years will show new Examples of old Things, Parallisms of occurrences through the whole course of Time, and nothing be monstrous unto him, who may in that time understand not only the varieties of Men, but the variation of himself, and how many Men he hath been in that extent of time

He may have a close apprehension what it is to be forgotten, while he hath lived to find none who could remember his Father, or scarce the friends of his youth and may sensibly see with what a face in no long time oblivion will look upon himself His Piety may never be his Posterity, he may go out of the World less related than he came into it and considering the frequent mortality in Friends and Relations, in such a Term of Time, he may pass away divers years in sorrow and black habits, and leave none to mourn for himself, Orbits may be his inheritance, and Riches his Repentance

In such a thred of Time and long observation of Men he may acquire a physiognomical intuitive Knowledge, judge the interiors by the outside, and raise conjectures at first sight, and, knowing what Men have been, what they are, what Children probably will be, may in the present Age behold a good part, and the temper of the next, and, since so many live by the Rules of Constitution, and so few overcome their temperamental Inclinations, make no improbable predictions

Such a portion of Time will afford a large prospect backward, and authentick Reflections how far he hath performed the great intention of his Being, in the Honour of his Maker, whether he hath made good the Principles of his Nature and what he was made to be, what Characteristick and special Mark he hath left, to be observable in his Generation, whether he hath lived to purpose or in vain, and what he hath added, acted, or performed, that might considerably speak him a Man

In such an Age Delights will be undelightful and Pleasures grow stale unto him, antiquated Theorems will revive, and Solomon's Maxims be Demonstrations unto him, Hopes or presumptions be over, and despair grow up of any satisfaction below. And having been long tossed in the Ocean of this World, he will by that time feel the In-draught of another, unto which this seems but preparatory, and without it of no high value. He will experimentally find the Emptiness of all things, and the nothing of what is past, and wisely grounding upon true Christian Expectations, finding so much past will wholly fix upon what is to come. He will long for Perpetuity, and live as though he made haste to be happy. The last may prove the

it, he spoke too meanly of that state of being which placeth us in the form of Men. It more depreciates the value of this life, that Men would not live it over again, for although they would still live on, yet few or none can endure to think of being twice the same Men upon Earth, and some had rather never have lived than to tread over their days once more. Cicero in a prosperous state had not the patience to think of beginning in a cradle again. Job would not only curse the day of his Nativity, but also of his Renascency, if he were to act over his disasters, and the miseries of the Dunghil. But the greatest underweening of this Life is to undervalue that, unto which this is but exordial, or a Passage leading unto it. The great advantage of this mean life is thereby to stand in a capacity of a better, for the Colonies of Heaven must be drawn from Earth, and the Sons of the first Adam are only heirs unto the second. Thus Adam came into this World with the power also of another, nor only to replenish the Earth, but the everlasting Mansions of Heaven. Where we were when the foundations of the Earth were lay'd, when the morning Stars sang together and all the Sons of GOD shouted for Joy, He must answer who asked it, who understands Entities of preordination, and beings yet unbeing; who hath in his Intellect the ideal Existences of things, and Entities before their Extances. Though it looks but like an imaginary kind of existency to be before we are, yet since we are under the decree or prescience of a

Though good Men are often taken away from the Evil to come, though some in evil days have been glad that they were old, nor long to behold the iniquities of a wicked World, or Judgments threatened by them, yet is it no small satisfaction unto honest minds to leave the World in virtuous well temper'd times, under a prospect of good to come, and continuation of worthy ways acceptable unto GOD and Man Men who dye in deplorable days, which they regretfully behold, have not their Eyes closed PART III with the like content, while they cannot avoid the thoughts of proceeding or growing enormities, displeasing unto that Spirit unto whom they are then going, whose honour they desire in all times and throughout all generations. If Lucifer could be freed from his dismal place, he would little care though the rest were left behind. Too many there may be of Nero's mind, who, if their own turn were served, would not regard what became of others, and, when they dye themselves, care not if all perish. But good Mens wishes extend beyond their lives, for the happiness of times to come, and never to be known unto them. And therefore while so many question prayers for the dead, they charitably pray for those who are not yet alive, they are not so enviously ambitious to go to Heaven by themselves, they cannot but humbly wish, that the little Flock might be St Luke xii

 Parallelisms in different ages

Ecc 1 9, 10

Think not thy time short in this World since the World it self is not long The created World is but a small Parenthesis in Eternity and a short interposition for a time between such a state of duration, as was before it and may be after it And if we should allow of the old Tradition that the World should last six thousand years, it could scarce have the name of old, since the first Man lived near a sixth part thereof, and seven Methuselas would exceed its whole duration However to palliate the shortness of our Lives, and somewhat to compensate our brief term in this World, it's good to know as much as we can of it and also so far as possibly in us lieth to hold such a Theory of times past, as though we had seen the same He who hath thus considered the World, as also how therein things long past have been answered by things present, how matters in one Age have been acted over in another, and how there is nothing new under the Sun, may conceive himself in some manner to have lived from the beginning, and to be as old as the World, and if he should still live on, 'twould be but the same thing.

NOTES

CRITICAL AND EXPLANATORY.

THE two following letters, and also the admonition from "A B," To such as have or shall peruse, &c, are found in C (1643) and in most of the old editions, and also in several modern ones.

A Letter sent upon the Information of Animadversions to come forth, upon the imperfect and surreptitious Copy of Religio Medici, whilst this true one was going to the Press †*

Honourable‡ Sir,

Give your Servant, who hath ever honoured you, leave to take notice of a Book at present in the Press intituled (as I am informed) Animadversions upon a Treatise lately printed under the Name of "Religio Medici," hercof I am advertised you have descended to be the Author. Worthy Sir, permit your Servant to affirme there is contain'd therein nothing that can deserve the Reason of your Contradictions, much less the Candor of your Animadversions and to certifie the truth thereof, that Book (whereof I do acknowledge my selfe the Author) was penn'd many yeares past, and (what cannot escape your apprehension) with no intention for the Press, or the least desire to oblige the Faith of any man to its assertions. But what hath more especially emboldened my Pen unto you at present, is, that the same Piece, contrived in my private Study, and as an exercise unto my self, rather than *Excitation for any other, having past from my hand under a broken and imperfect Copy, by frequent transcription it still run forward in corruption,† and after the addition of some things, omission of others, and transposition of many, without my assent or privacy, the liberty of these times committed it unto the Press, from whence‡ it issued so disguised, the Author without distinction could not acknowledge it. Having thus misnamed, within a few weeks I shall, God willing, deliver unto the Press the true and intended Original (whereof in the mean time your Worthy Self may command a view) otherwise when ever that Copy shall be extant, it will most clearly appear how far the Text hath been mistaken, and all Observations, Glosses, or Excitations thereon will in a great part impugn the Printer or Transcriber, rather than the Author. If, after that, you shall esteem it worth your vacant hours to discourse thereon, you shall but take that liberty which I assume my self, that is, freely to abound in your sense, as I have done in my own. However you shall determine, you shall sufficiently honour me in the Vouchsafe of your Refute, and I oblige the whole World in the occasion of your Pen.

Your Servant,

Worthy Sir,

Speedily upon the Receipt of your Letter of the third Current, I sent to find out the Printer that Mr Crooke§ (who delivered me yours) told me was printing something under my name, concerning your Treatise of Religio Medici, and to forbid him any further proceeding therein, but my Servant could not meet with him, whereupon I have left with Mr Crooke a Note to that purpose, entreating him to deliver it to the Printer I verily believe there is some mistake in the information given you, and that what is printing must be from some other Pen than mine, for such reflections as I made upon your learn'd and ingenious Discourse, are so far from meriting the Press, as they can tempt no body to a serious reading of them. They were Notes hastily set down, as I suddenly ran over your excellent Piece, which is of so weighty subject, and so strongly penned, as requirith much time and sharp attention but to comprehend it, whereas what I writ was the employment but of one sitting, and there was not twenty-four hours between my receiving my Lord of Dorset's Letter that occasioned what I said, and the finishing my Answer to him, and yet part of that time was taken up in procuring your Book, which he desired me to read, and give him an account of, for till then I was so unhappy as never to have heard of that worthy Discourse. If that Letter ever come to your view, you will see the high value I set upon your great pains, and if it should be thought I have been something too bold in differing from your sense, I hope I shall easily obtain pardon when it shall be considered, that his Lordship assigned it me as an Exercitation to oppose in it, for entertainment, such passages as I might judge capable thereof, wherein what liberty I took, is to be attributed to the security of a private Letter, and to my not knowing (nor my Lord's) the person whom it concerned.

But, Sir, now that I am so happy as to have that knowledge, I dare assure you, that nothing shall ever issue from me, but savouring of all honesty, esteem, and reverence both to your self, and that worthy Production of yours. If I had the vanity to give my self reputation by cnting the Lists in publique with so eminent and learned a Man as you are, yet I know right well, I am no ways able to do it, it would be a very unequal congress I pretend not to Learning, those slender notions I have are but disjointed pieces I have by chance gleaned up here and there To encounter such a sinewy Opposite, or make Animadversions upon so smart a piece as yours is, requireth a solid † Stock and Exercise in School Learning My superficial besprinkling will serve onely for a private Letter, or familiar‡ discourse with Lay § auditors With longing I expect the coming abroad of the true Copy of that Book, whose false and stolen one hath already given me so much delight And so assuring you I shall deem it a great good fortune to deserve your favour and friendship, I kiss your hand, and rest

Your most humble Servant,

Winchester House, the 20 of March, 1642

To such as have, or shall peruse the Observations upon a former corrupt Copy || of this Booke.

There are some men that Politian speakes of,

Cui quam iuxta manus, tam fuit et facilis, and it seemes the Author to the Observations upon this booke, would arrogate as much to himself, for they were, by his owne confession, but the conceptions of one night, a hasty birth, and so it proves for what is really controllable, he generally omitteth and what is false upon the error of the Copy, he doth not always take notice of, and wherein he would contradict, he mistaketh or misseeth the intention, and (besides a parenthesis sometimes upon the Author,) only meddling with those points from whence he takes a hint to deliver his prepared conceptions. But the grosse of his Booke is made out by discourses collaterall, and discussions of his own, not at all emergent from this Discourse which is easily perceptible unto the intelligent Reader. Thus much I thought good to let thee understand, without the Author's knowledge, who, slighting the refuse, hath enforcedly published (as a sufficient confutation) his owne Booke and in this I shall not make so bold with him, as the Observer hath done with that noble Knight, who came he hath wrongfully pickt (as I am informed) to slight Annimadversions, but I leave him to repentance and thee to thy satisfaction.

Yours, A P

P 1, l 6 Annotatus] These are supposed by Wilkin (and with great probability) to have been written by a Mr Thomas Keck of the Temple in 1644. They appear to have been first published in 1 (1656) and are to be found in all the authorized old editions. They have also been used more or less freely by several modern editors. In the present edition they have been much curtailed.

P 1, l 10 Observations by Sir A. H. M. D. l. 1] These were first published in 1643, and were afterwards (1659) appended to the Religio Medici. They have been frequently reprinted, but are omitted in this edition.

P 3. This address "To the Reader" first appeared in C.

P 3, l 1 gradatim of life, &c] Alluding (as Keck points out) to Seneca, Thy. t. v. 882 —

Vixit et vidit, quisquis non vult
Mundo securi percussus mori

P 4, l 3 the comparison, &c, D to I omit th, perhaps by mistake.

P 4, l 8 about seven years past] Hence as this address "To the Reader" was first published in 1643 it appears that the Religio Medici was written about the year 1636. See the note on p 66, l 4, and on p 115, l 22 Wilkin, in his notes on Johnson's Life of Sir I B, 'thinks it very possible that the true reading is 'about [not about] seven years,' which would justify Dr Johnson's date" of the writing of the Hel Med but the conjecture is quite unnecessary, besides being entirely unsupported by external authority

P 4, l 16 particularitas, C to H, particularis, I to I

P 5, l 2 conceptionis, C to H (compare p 4, l 23) on ception, I to L

P 5, ll 6, 7 there are C to G, K, I, therefore are, H, I, J

P 5, l 14 shall] Will in (1) and Perce (1) have I shall, — an improvement to the sentence, but unauthorized

P 5, l 15 fathus th m] In this place no edition has fa ou th m See below, p 90, l penult

P 5, l 15 lest in l l m et] Wilkin (1) has best and most learned This also is an improvement, but is not absolutely necessary, and is without authority, at p 90, l penult, it is learned and lest Moreover in the Latin version has de tiori morum in both places

P 5 l 18 the f, C to J th e, K, I

P 5 l 20 Brown] G has Brown and this is the way in which the name is printed during the Author's life in at least one edition of the Juliar Lives (1672), and also after his death, in the first editions of the Letter to a Friend and the Christian Morals

P 7 The marginal analyses of the different sections are taken with a few alterations and additions from Grudine's edition (W)

P 7, l 3 as an ill of my profession] Physicians do commonly hear ill in this behalf It is a common speech (but only amongst the unlearned sort,) "Ubi tres medici, duo atheni" The reason why those of that profession may be thought to deserve that censure the Author rendereth, Sec 19 (Keck, abridged)

In one of his Common Place Books (vol iv p 416, ed Wilkin) Browne says, "I though in point of devotion and piety physicians do meet with common obloquy, yet in the Roman calendar we find no less than twenty-nine saints and martyrs of that profession in a small piece expressly described by Brevius, in his Nomenclator Sanctorum Professione Medicorum" [Small 8vo. Colon Agripp., 1623]

P 7, l 12 chune, C to I, the chune, A, η, which reading is adopted by Wilkin (1)

P 7, l 14 un (ai), omitted (probably by accident) in K, L

P 7, l 16 but having] Wilkin (T) reads but that having

P 8, l 4 The following lines, which are found in this place in two MSS, were first inserted in the text by Wilkin (1), and afterwards (without observation) by Gardiner (W), and Fields (3) —

Quousque patiēte tunc JESU?
Fuder Iesum! exoscepi cunctis
Illi in Asia, et in Britannia, Galleis, Germania
Hunc JESU miserere mei tunc JESU tunc

P 8, l 7 religious, A to I, religion, J to I, which is followed by most modern editions, probably by mistake

P 8, l 8 distinguished] Chapman (1), and Gardiner (W), read being distinguished

P 8, l 8 distinguished not only] Wilkin (T) reads not only distinguished

P 8, l 9 then la s then dictums] Chapman (K) has its own, and Will in (1) has its, in both places

P 8, l 12 I dislike nothing but the name] i.e. Lutheran Calvinist, Zwinglian, &c. (Keck), or more probably (as suggested in Q) "Prot. stult, i.e. confusing with it an innovation of enmity and discord, inconsistent with the peace and harmony prescribed by the Gospel

P 8, l 16 prelates] It appears from A, R, and two MSS that Browne originally wrote prelates

P 8, l 21 hereticon, I to I, hereticon, A to D

P 8, l 23 the person, &c] No doubt, I rather Keck and some others give here an account of the origin of the Reformation, which it is not necessary to repeat

P 8, l 24 beg] Chapman (R) reads beg, which is followed by Gardiner (W)

P 8, l 28 haz I] I have, M, which is followed by Wilkin (1)

P 8, l 28 shaken hands with] The Latin manibus commiscere in this place, but below (p 66, l 10) by valere missi, which latter version is the correct one

P 8, l 29 resolutions] A, B, have resolucens, but C, and almost all subsequent editions have resolutions, though O, P, and Chapman (R) have restored resolucens. Keck says, in his "Annotations," "resolucens it should be, without doubt," and probably at first sight most persons would be inclined to say the same, so forced and unnatural does the expression in the text appear. The evidence, however, both external and internal, in favour of resolutions, is quite conclusive. The external evidence could scarcely be stronger than it is, the obvious word resolucens appears in the two spurious editions (A, B), but was altered for the singular expression resolutus in the first authorized edition (C), which latter word maintained its place in every edition published during the Author's life. The internal evidence is not much less convincing as this use of the abstract for the concrete in the plural number occurs so frequently in the course of the book as to constitute one of the characteristic peculiarities of the Author's style. Many instances are noticed in the Glossarial Index: some of the most singular perhaps are ambitions, honors, intelligences, pictures, zeals.

P 9, l 4 improperations] A word which puzzled the translators of the work while still in MS (see Williams' note), and which in C has been changed into impropiation. It means reproachful or taunting language, and was perhaps coined by Browne himself who found impropro and impropiation used not infrequently in the Vulgate as the translation of ὀνειδισμός and ονειδισμός (Heb viii 13, St James v 5).

P 10, l 1 I should solat C- J A I and two MSS have this sentence thus:—"I should cut off my arm rather than violate a church window, than deface or demolish the memory of a saint or martyr."

P 10, l 2 deface the name] The author seems first to have written deface or demolish the memory (as in A and B, and two MSS) then to have omitted or demolish (as in C to I), leaving deface the memory, which hardly makes sense, and lastly to have substituted name for memory, reading deface the name (as in J to I). This is the reading of all subsequent editions, except Gardiner's (W), which has deface the memory.

P 10, l 7 or contenten] Chapman (R) has not contenten, which is followed by (C) and (W).

P 10, l 10 the Ave Mary bell] "A Church Bell that tolls

every day at 6, and 12, of the clock, at the hearing whereof, every one in what place soever, either of house or street, betakes him to his prayer, which is commonly directed to the Virgin." This and a few other short notes are all that are given in Sn T B's authorized editions.

P 10, l 14 directed, v to 1, G, direct, r, 11 to 1

P 10, l 16 rectified, v to 1, rectify, 1, K, 1

P 10, l 20 access, B, 1 to 1, which is also found in an old handwriting as a correction in the margin of Willm's copy of D, the Latin translation has immediatus, v, c to 11, have access, which is adopted by Peace (v), and Gaidner (w), and (in the sense of a fit) is, perhaps, almost as likely to be the true reading. The "cess of laughter" may, however, be meant as a verbal opposition to the "abundant weeping" in l 18. The same variety of reading is found below, p 33, l 2.

P 10, l 23 zeals] Q reads zealots both here and below, p 90, l 7, but Bacon uses the word zeals in the plural (Essay 58, p 232, ed 1863), and Jeremy Taylor has the expression "over-forward zeals," Holy Dying, iv 3, § 2. See also the note on resolutions above, p 8, l 29.

P 10, l 25 consist, v to 1, assist, K, 1

P 11, l 13 an union] Wilkin (1) reads a union, as also, a history, p 16, l 2, a history, p 16 l 17, p 17, l 21, and a history, p 31, l 21, but in all these cases it seems probable that an is the right reading though Sn 1 B may have used a and an in such cases without uniformity.

P 11, l 23 Constitutions] v, B, and three MSS add the following clause — "No man shall teach [reveh, ueh,] my faith unto another Article, or command my obedience to a Canon more."

P 11, l 28 on dispröwing] non disapprobo ms, one MS and Chapman (K), and other later editors. Wilkin (1) says dispröwing is, without doubt, an incorrect reading, but the word is used in the sense of disapproving by Hooker, Laws Polity, bk 11, c 8, § 2.

P 11, l antep. where the Scripture is silent, &c.] Illustrum, as noticed by Mr Willis Bund (1), quotes this passage (Cont. Hist of Engl ch 8, vol 11, p 102, ed 1832), and remarks upon it, "That Jesuit must have been a disgrace to his order, who would have asked more than such a concession to secure a proselyte—the right of interpreting whatever was written, and of supplying whatever was not.” This meaning can certainly be extracted from our Author’s words, but it may be doubted whether he would have accepted it as a fair representation of what he intended to say.

P 12, l 6 Henry VIII . . refused not the faith of Rome] For confirmation of this assertion Keck refers to the “Statute of the Six Articles (31 Henry VIII c 14), relating to, 1 transubstantiation, 2 communion in both kinds, 3 the marriage of priests, 4 vows of chastity, 5 private masses, and 6 auricular confession

P 12, l 10 the State of France] In 1606 there was a dispute between Pope Paul V and the Republic of Venice, which was settled in the following year by the mediation of France. See Ranke’s Hist. of the Popes, part II book 6

P 12, l 15 cause, A to I, a cause, J, K, I

P 12, l 19 returned him, I to I, returned to him, A to H

P 12, l 27 patron’d, C, E, patronized, A, B, which is adopted in Q, prison’d, D, I to L, pleaded, N, O

P 12, l 32 perhaps within, A to I, within, I, K, I

P 14, l 3 heresies, A to D, heresies, L to I. This is one of the very few places where the reading of D is better than that of I

P 14, l 3 heresies, A to H, heresies, I to L

P 14, l 4 I hope I shall not I shall, A, B, and thence MSS. This alteration of the reading is interesting, as showing that about 1635, when Browne was thirty years old, and wrote the Religio Medici, he could not, without injury to truth, say that he had no taint or tincture of heresies, schisms, or errors, but that eight years later, when the first authorized edition was published, his opinions had so far changed, that he hoped he should not injure truth in saying that he had no longer any such taint or tincture in him

P 14, l 19 a Metemps, A to I, Metemps, J, K, L

P 14, l 19 Metempsuchosis] So the word is spelt in B to L; A has Metempsuchosis. See below, p 60, l 31

P 14, l 23 Plato’s year] “A revolution of certain thousand years, when all things should return unto their former estate, and he be teaching again in his school, as when he delivered this opinion” (Note by Sir T. B.) See Plato’s

Timaeus, p. 39 (Jowett's Plato, vol. III, pp. 536, 579, 622), Cicero, De Nat. Deor., II 20.

P 14, l. 24 there hath been] there have been, adopted by Wilkin (T), on the authority of A, I, but Sir T. B. not unfrequently uses a singular verb with a plural nominative. See p. 17 l. 17, p. 21, l. 30, p. 34, l. 21.

P 14, l. 29 and is, as it were] is, omitted in I to II.

P 14, l. antep. that of the Arabians] p. 15, l. 14 that of Orion] In the original Forty-two "Articles of the Church of England" (1552) the fortieth and forty-second Articles (which were afterwards omitted,) were directed respectively against these two opinions. See Burnet's Hist. of the Reformation, pt. II, bk. I "Collection of Records."

P 15, l. 6 of the both, A to H, for the lord, I to I.

P 15, l. 6 should rise] shall rise, A, I. This is one of the Errata in C, which was first corrected in D, the previous edd. having omitted should.

P 15, l. 8 alarm, A, C to II (See below, p. 128, l. 21 p. 181 l. 29), alarm, I, I to I.

P 15, l. 14 Orion] A, I have the Christ three MSS. the Christs one MS. th Orionists and Christs.

P 15, l. 29 from some charitable, &c.] Instead of this clause, A, B, and three MSS. have the following words:—"by an excess of charity, whereby I thought the number of the living too small an object of devotion, I could scarce, &c."

P 16, l. 2 an history] a history, A, B, which is adopted by Chapman (r) and other later editors. See above, p. 11, l. 13.

P 16, l. 3 peritancy, A, D, I, K, I peritancy, C to I. Blowne would perhaps prefer perstinacy, as being nearer to the Latin perstinacia. "Perstinacy," says Bishop Hall (Christian Moderation, bk. II ch. 5), "is the only thing that makes a heretic let the error be heinous, yet, if there be not perverse stiffness in the maintenance of it, it amounts not to the crime of heresy." (Quoted in Richardson's Diet.)

P 16, l. 17 an huesu, J, K, L, a hesu, A to I, which is followed by Wilkin (T). See above, p. 11, l. 13.

P 16, l. 22. of spirits, omitted (possibly by accident) in K, L.

P 16, l. 27. Sect. VIII was first added in C.

P 16, l. 31 doctrines, C to H; the doctrines, I to L.

P 16, l ult their Church, C to I, the Church, M, which reading is followed by Wilkin (1) and others

P 17, l 2 complecionaily, C, M, complecionably, D to I, perhaps by a mere typographical error, for complecional and complecionally are found elsewhere in Sir T. B.'s works (see Index), complecionable and complecionably probably nowhere

P 17, l 3 indisposid] This is one of the Errata in C, which was first corrected by Chapman (in R), the previous editions having disposid

P 17, l 13 hiv ou i, C to I, thin own, M, which reading is followed by Wilkin (1) and others

P 17, l 17 there is ist, C to I, there are ist, M, which reading is adopted by Wilkin (1) and St John (1) See above, p 14, l 24

P 17, l 18 the School, C to II, Schools, I to I

P 17, l 22 those wongre, C to I, the wongre, A, B

P 17, l 25 Me thinks there be not impossibilites enough, &c] This paragraph is alluded to by Tillotson in a passage (vol III Simon 140) in which he presses too hardly on the use of the word "impossibilities," whereby of course (as Fortin observes, Tracts Philosophical, &c, vol I, p 373) Sir Thomas Browne, as well as Tertullian, meant seeming not real impossibilities, and the expression should be looked upon as a verbum ardens, a rhetorical flourish (Wilkin, abridged)

P 17, l 31 to an, C to I, to my, A, B

P 17, l 31. O altitudo, I, K, I, Oh altitudo, A to I Bacon has a similar reference to the Vulgate translation of Romans vi 33 — "In Divinity many things must be left abrupt and concluded with this, O altitudo, &c" (Advancement of Learning, II 24, II)

P 17, l 33, p 18, l 1 with Incarnation, C to I, A, B omit with

P 18, l 4 Tertullian] "Yea, but if, because it is wonderful, it be therefore not believed, it ought on that account the rather to be believed" Such is doubtless the meaning of the saying (De Bapt II), credo, quia impossibile est, i.e., with man, and in man's sight, and to man's reason Tertullian speaks just below of 'impossibilia,' as the materials of the Divine working" (Pusey's Tertullian, vol I p 256, ed 1842)

P 19, l 3 we knew, A to L Some copies of G appear to have we know, as this reading is corrected in a short list of Errata at the beginning of the volume

P 19, l 7 [That ill, and description of Illness] "Sphæra, ejus centrum ubique circumferentia nullibi" (Note by S. T. B.) It is not known where the Author found this very striking sentence, to which he alludes again in the Christian Morals, pt. iii § 2, p. 203, and in the Garden of Cyrus, ch. 5, vol. ii, p. 559, Bohn's ed. He himself attributes it to Hermes Trismegistus, but it is not to be found among the writings that go under this name nor among the fragments of Parmenides, Empedocles, Zeno, or Pythagoras, to each of whom it has been attributed. Paseri is sometimes considered to be the author of the sentence because it is found in his 'Lenses' (At 1 § 101 viii § 1) applied to Nature but he merely quoted it from some earlier writer just as S. T. B. does here. The subject of the authorship of the sentence is discussed in Notes and Queries, 1870.

P 19, l 8 Metaphysical definitions of Divinity Perhaps if S. T. B. had lived in the present day he might have been tempted to quote the two following, among his definitions of the Deity — 1 "The stream of tendency by which all things fulfil the law of their being," and 2 "The Eternal [or, the enduring power,] not ourselves which makes for righteousness." The former of these (or rather a mixture of the two) is considered by some persons to 'have the merit not only of "originality," but also of "simplicity" (Spectator, Jan. 13, 77, p. 57). In reference to the second definition and to the Contemporary Literature (Nov. 76, p. 67) enquires, "but an abstraction of the understanding crowned with a negative particle, and robed with the Eternal Name — 'the Eternal not ourselves which makes for righteousness' does it not impose upon us with the illusory definiteness of an empty formula from which the contents of the religious consciousness have been scudulously excluded? is it more substantial than the enunciation of Mr. Dombey's elegant and languid mother-in-law, who never could remember names — 'There is no What's his name but Thingummy, and What you may call it is his prophet'?" (Dielens & Dombey and Son, ch. xxvii.)

P 19, l 11 I had as live, &c. When Aristotle says (De Anima, ii, 1, § 6) that the Soul is entelechia this definition tells us not what is its essence, origin or nature, and therefore signifies no more than if he had said that it is Angelus hominis, or Corpus Dei — and again it no more satisfies our Author to tell him that Light is Actus perspicui ενεργεια του διαφανους (Id ibid ii 7, § 4), than if you should say that it is Umbra Dei [Heck, abridged]

P 19, l 12 entelechia] the actual form, of a thing, is opposed to simple capability (δυναμις), a philosophic word formed by Aristotle who calls the soul the εντελεχεια of the body, th it by which it is fully though it had a δυναμις or capacity of existing before De homin ii 1 [Liddell and Scott] An amusing instance of the obscurity of the word (which Cicero, Use Di p i 10, confounds with επιτελεχεια) and also of the great importance attached to it is given by Sir I B, who says that 'Hieronymus Iulianus was scarce in his wits, when upon conference with a spirit he would demand no other question than an explanation of Aristotle's Entelechia' (Miscellan Tracts, xi vol iii p 258, ed L n)

P 19, l 12 entelechia] Chapman (R) and others print the word in Greek characters, εντελεχεια. In , it, these Latin phrases are translated into English

P 19, l 12 Ita stimula Dei] Iowne uses this expression in the Gen Interpret (ch 4 vol ii p 551, ed John) 'Light is but the shadow of Col

P 19, l 25 the full v 1, c and so Gen ii 5, of the fields, v to 1

P 19, l 25 th plant f th full v n t v n] Sir Thomas Iowne appears to have written from memory, for the creation of fruit trees is distinctly mentioned Gen ii 9, previous to the prohibition in Gen ii 17 (St John, abridged)

P 19, l 27 Script] See Pseudodox Epidem v 4 vii 1

P 20, ll 10, 11 porticus aut me, Lectulus accept] In Horace it is Lectulus aut me Porticus accept

P 20, l 20 et] Q, Chapman (R) and others read olide. See p 63 l 10

P 20 l 23 f v ards, ll to L, forward, A to G

P 20, l 23 to conceive] It omits to, G corrects in Errata

P 20, l 23 St Paul's Sanctuary] As only one of the English editors notices this expression, it would seem that none of the others found in it any difficulty, and yet (judging from the different ways in which it has been explained by different competent persons consulted by the present Editor), though the general sense of the passage is plain enough, the allusion contained in these words cannot be considered perfectly evident and simple. The following passages in St Paul's writings have been supposed (by different persons) to have been in the Author's mind — 1, "The foolishness of God is wiser than men," &c (1 Cor i 25), 2, "Lye hath not seen, nor ear heard," &c (1 Cor ii 9), 3, "Caught up to the third heaven into paradise" (2 Cor xii 2, 4), which Sir I B calls "that ineffable place of Paul, that proper ubi of spirits" (p 64, l 2). Again, as the word "sanctuary" nowhere occurs in St Paul's writings, it has been suggested with great ingenuity and apparent plausibility that there may have been a Sanctuary connected with St Paul's Cathedral, and that from this material refuge the metaphorical and religious idea in the text may be derived. Probably, however, the reader will be rather inclined to think that the Dutch translator is right in quoting Rom xi 33, "O the depth of the riches," &c, as the passage alluded to, especially as Sir I B himself referred to it a few pages back (p 17, l 31). If this be so, the train of the Author's thoughts will have been something of this sort — In Philosophy there is no sanctum sanctorum, nor is there anything to hinder our exploring the secrets of Nature to the utmost (p 24, l 2), but the Essence of GOD is a subject at once so awful in itself, and so utterly beyond the grasp of human reason, that I take refuge with St Paul in the incomprehensibility of GOD, as in an inviolable sanctuary, and can only cry out in his words, O altitudo (p 17, l 31).

P 21, l 5 states] Chapman (K), and others, have states

P 21, l 8 and all together, I to L, and altogether, C to H, omitted in A, B

P 21, ll 23, 25 Aristotle could make two deities] that is, that God and the world both, were eternal (Keck)

P 21, l 28 for there is in us not three souls] The Peripatetics held that men had three distinct souls, which opinion was adopted by certain heretics, and gave rise to great disputes in the thirteenth century (Keck, abridged). Henry More tells us (Enthusiasmus Triumphatus, Scholia on Sect 44) that the Jews also held a plurality of souls in one man, viz, Animal, Angelical, and Divine.

P 21, l pen so united, A to I, thus united, J, K, I

P 22, l 2 a pretty Trinity] A, n have a pretty Trinity, no doubt by mistake, but it is not a mere typographical error, as the same reading is found in one MS

P 22, l 6 Pythagoras, and the secret magic of numbers] Alluding to the mystical importance attached to numbers by the Pythagoreans and the Cabalistical writers, a curious subject fully discussed by Sir I B s contemporary, Henry More, in his Conjectura Cabalistica, &c, but too extensive to be entered upon here

P 22, l 8 he laid a s n s] A, I, and three MSS have, a narrow sense

P 22, l 16 The secret Schools] Sir Kenelm Digby seems to have read secret in his copy of the first edition of the Rel Med (see his Observations, vol II p 459, ed Bohn), and the Latin translation has a errorum

P 22, l 21 more real, A to I, more is omitted in I, K, I, perhaps by mistake

P 22, l 31 Wisdom, &c I know him, p 23, l 10] wanting in A, I

P 23, l 8 as he did at Delphi] "Ἐνῶπι σεαυτὸν, Nosce teipsum" (Note by Sir Thomas Brown) This was one of the sentences inscribed in letters of gold on the walls of the temple (πρόναος) at Delphi The ancient oracles were attributed by Sir Thomas Brown to Satanic agency (See below, § 46, p 72, P u l t I p t e m, bk I ch 10 vol I, p 81, bk VII ch 12, 'Of the cessation of oracles,' and Miscell Tracts, § 11, "Of the answers of the Delphian oracle," &c, vol III, Bohn's ed)

P 23, l 18 an ds] After this word one MS adds the following clause — "there is no thread or line to guide us in that labyrinth"

P 23, l 19 Senators] serrators, A, n, probably a mere typographical error

P 23, l 28 actions, A to J (see also above, l 23), action, K, I, perhaps by mistake

P 24, l 1 to profound] to propound, A, n, which is not a mere typographical error, as the same reading is found in four MSS.

P 24, l 3 The world, &c] In one MS this clause is read thus — "The world was made not so much to be inhabited by men, as to be contemplated, studied, and known, by man"

P 24, l 4 is the debt, &c] The meaning is perhaps plain in the Latin translation — 'Debitum hoc rationis nostrae eiga DEUM officium est'

P 24, l 5 of our reason = for our reason So in Bacon's Essays, vi, p 19, l 10 (ed 1863) — "A name of certainty and veracity," for "A name for certainty," &c, and vii p 69, l 21, "Reverence of traditions," for "Reverence for traditions"

P 24, l 16 thence, search &c] The rest of this section is wanting in A, I

P 24, l 23 damm'd, c to H, dem'd, I to I, which spoils the metre, but which is nevertheless adopted by Chapman (A) and others

P 24, l 29 to soar, c to G so to seat, H to L, which spoils the metre

P 25, l 5 his Father, D to I, the Father, c

P 25, l 11 there is but one first cause] In opposition to the Manichees, who held there were two principes, one from whom came all good, and the other from whom came all evil (Heck)

P 25, l 11 one first cause, A to I, our first cause, I, h, I no doubt a typographical error

P 25, l 11 four second cause] Meaning (as appears from the following lines) the efficient, the materal, the formal and the final Gaudin (W) quotes Aristotle's Physics i. ult. n 3 § 2

P 25, l 22 treasure, I to I, treasury, A to H see below, p 97, l 24

P 25, l 25 most excellent speculation] One MS adds and most sweet philosophy

P 25, l 32 Galen his, A to W, Galen's first appears in A (1736)

P 26, l 5 age't, A to H, age't, I to I, perhaps by mistake

P 26, l 5 Natura, &c] Ματην μιν γὰρ οὐδεν ἡ φύσις ἐργάζεται (Galen, De Usu Part vii 2, tom iv p 78) This "only in disputed axiom in philosophy" is perhaps originally due to

Aristotle, who says, 'Ο δὲ Θεὸς καὶ ἡ φύσις οὐδὲν μάρτην ποιῶσιν (De Caelo, i 4, in fine)

P 26, l 5 undisputed, κ ι undisputable, A to J, a more common word, and one therefore which is perhaps hardly likely to have been changed into undisputed without some authority

P 26, l 6 there are no grotesques] there is no grotesco, A, B

P 26, l 16 thus, &c] In ΠΙΟΝ vi 8, there is no mention of huc in the Hebrew text, but Sir T B may perhaps have been thinking of the following addition, which is found in the LXX — "Go to the bee and learn how active she is, and how honourable is the work that she doeth whose labours kings and private men use for their health, and she is desired by all and of good repute, albeit in strength she is but weak, yet as she honoureth wisdom she is advanced"

P 26, l 25 Regio Montium, &c.] John Muller of Königsberg (Latinised into Regio Montanus) [1436 75] constructed an iron fly and a wooden eagle both of which were able to fly Keck and others give an extract from Du Bartas, in which mention is made of both the curious pieces of mechanism (La Semaine de la Creation, translated by Sylvester London, 1641)

P 26, l 25 Regio Montanus hi.] The earliest edition which has Regio Montanus is O (1736)

P 26, l 27 two oaks, &c] Meaning the sensitive and vegetative in insects and only the vegetative in trees and plants (Note in O)

P 26, l 31 Nile] Chapman (κ) and others have the Nile

P 27, l 2 cosmography of man's life] Alluding to man being called a microcosm, or little world See below, p 55, l 30

P 27, l 12 expos'd, c to L, exposed, A, B, and one MS

P 27, l 18 the children of Israel] One of the MSS has the very singular reading, the wild Israelites

P 27, l 18 effect, ι to L, effect, A to H

P 27, l 26 Nature the principle of motion and rest] See Aristotle, Phys Ausc ii i § 3 ὡς οὐσης τῆς φύσεως ἀρχῆς τινος καὶ αἰτίας τοῦ κινεῖσθαι καὶ ἡρεμεῖν, κ τ λ

P 28 l 1 perpetrated by] This is one of the Errata in C, which was first noticed by Wilkin (in the "Add. and Corr." to T), all previous editions having omitted but Chapman (R) and Wilkin (T) transposed the clauses of the sentence, in order to restore sense, which the omission of but destroyed

P 28, l 1 a faculty from that voice] the faculty of the voice, A, B

P 28, l 8 wood, A to I, word, J, K, I, probably by mistake

P 28, l 10 God is like a stultif Gnomonion] Alluding to the words attributed to Plato but not found in any of his works 'Ο Θεός γεωμετρει' (See Plutarch, Sympos viii 2) These words are prefixed by Isaac Barrow to a Latin prayer or divine ejaculation, written at the beginning of his MS of Apollonius, now preserved in the Library of the Royal Society

P 28, l 26 our writing, A, B, C, which perhaps agrees better with our Ioues in l 25 D to I have our writing

P 28, l 28 or speaks, A to I, of speech, I, K, L, probably by mistake

P 28, l 29 of creation, A, C to I of creation, P creation, A, D, I which is adopted by Wilkin (1), the words are omitted by Cradine (W), perhaps by accident

P 28, l 29 I cannot II, &c] This criterion of true beauty viz the adaptation of the structure of a part (or of an animal) to its functions, is enlarged upon by Cradine (De Use Part 1 9, tom iii p 24, &c ed Kuhn), and he refers to Socrates, who is represented by Xenophon (Critias v § 2) as paradoxically proving his own personal beauty Perhaps, however, the reader will be inclined to think that the paradox both of Socrates and of Sir Thomas Browne has been surpassed by "a remark recently made to a writer in the Lancet (July 7, 1877 p 12) by one of 'the most profound morphologists of the day 'No creature on earth,' he said, 'is in my opinion so perfectly beautiful as a toad except' (he added parenthetically) 'a beautiful man,'—the last remark being clearly only made in deference to popular prejudice"

P 28, l 32 the actions, A, B, C, those actions, D to L

P 28, l 33 past, A to M, Chapman (R) and others have, passed

P 29, l 12 impegnant, L to I, impegnate, C, D

P 29, l 15 servants, I, K, I, the servant, A to I

P 29, l 19 Nature is the art of God] Wilkin (1) refers to the opening words of Hobbes's Leviathan, "Nature, the art whereby GOD hath made and governs the world, &c

P 29, l 30 individuals, A to L, individual, M, and also Keck in his Annotations, which is followed by Wilkin (1) and others

P 30, l 4 of dangers, A to L, or dangers, M, which is followed by Wilkin (1)

P 30, l 16 'Twas not, &c] In A, B, and two MSS this sentence stands thus 'Twas not a mere chance to discover the [blank] of Poole's reason by a miscarriage of the letter

P 30, l 18 a miscarriage in the letter] The Latin translator has 'in reddendis literis error accident', which at first sight would appear to be the meaning of the words. But the letter to Lord Montagu did not miscarry, and the change from 'the letter' to 'in the letter' (see the previous note) proves that Sir T. B. did not make this historical mistake. It is an awkward sentence, but means (as Wilkin (1) and Smith (A.A.) have pointed out) "continued a miscarriage of the Plot in (or, by means of) the letter"

P 30, l 24 armistice] Wilkin (1) and others have the more usual form of the word, viz armistice

P 31, l 10 disposeth] dispenseth is found in three MSS (the Latin translator also has dispensat), and is adopted by Wilkin (1), and Pierce (1) "It is" (as Wilkin says) "evidently the better reading," but rests on insufficient authority, and disposeth gives a good sense

P 31, l 10 his factum] his factum is found in two MSS and is adopted by Wilkin (1)

P 31, l 12 bein] One MS has besides that

P 31, ll 14, 15 and they must] rich must, Pierce (1) on the authority of one MS and they must, Chapman (K) and others, without authority or necessity

P 31, l 21 an helix] A to K, M, a helix, I (perhaps by mistake), which is followed by Wilkin (1) and others, Chapman (K) has an helix. See above, p 11, l 13

P 31, l ult 'tis] here, and six times in the next page, some read 'tis, and others it is in each case the reading of I has been followed

P 31, l ult a ridiculous] A, B omit a

P 32, l 2 sutilegries, B to I, sutilegries, J, K, I, probably by mistake, sutle as A, which is adopted by Wilkin (1) and others.

P 32, l 9 Fools only are fortunate] "Fortunata stultitia" is the title of one of the sections of Adagia (p 265, ed 1629)

P 33, l 2 of one] A, B have of the one

P 33, l 2 excess, A, I, C, M, which reading is adopted by the editor of Q, and others, access, D to L, St John (U), and Peirce (V) The same variety of reading is found above, p 10, l 20 In this place if (A seems probable) in opposition to defect is intended, excess is the better reading, though access (in the sense of addition) would be admissible

P 33, l 15 h ill A, J, K, I, h ill , V to I, Peirce (V) reads h ill , but without authority for held, except that the Latin translation has consuetud

P 33, l 23 Heaven] Wilkin (I) and others read a heaven, on the authority of V

P 33, l ult the firsts and causes] ut Nature, §§ 15, 16, and I continue, §§ 17, 18

P 34, l 10 that of his] Alluding probably to the second Triumvirate, that of Octavius Antony, and Lepidus

P 34, l 15 it is not a reason] There appears to be some error here, but we have not the means of connecting it with certainty There is no difference of reading in any of the early editions, nor in the Latin translation, but St John (C) has both not a fault, Peirce (V) has both [it is not a reason] unto [fault], Gardiner (W) has it is not in the text, but in a foot note says, "Reason So in all the editions quite it is not and in the new edition which he was preparing at the time of his death, he had marked it is not to be introduced into the text which would have been done in the present edition, if there had been any authority for the correction Other modern editors retain reason, without any observation or explanation The C is a somewhat similar passage below (p 106, l 22), but it does not help to correct this

P 34, l 15 It is] it is is one of the It is in C, which is found in D, but was corrected in I and the following edd, and yet (singularly enough) it was reproduced in M, and also by Wilkin (T), though noticed in his Add and Cor

P 34, l 21 There is] Chapman (K) and other modern editors read there are, but without authority or necessity (See above, p. 14, l 24) The same construction of two or more nominatives with a singular verb is found in other writers. See Dean Church's Note on Hooker, Book i ch 4 § 1.

P 34, l 27 For our endeavours, &c] The remainder of this section is wanting in A, B.

P. 34, l 28. but always] Q has but likewise, to answer to not only in the line above, the Latin translation has cum ipso diabolo. If any alteration were absolutely required, we should read but also, which would give the same sense as Q's reading (but likewise), with much less change of letters.

P 34, l ult. Archidoxis, C 10 ff (see also below, p 131, l 6), Archidoxes, 1 to L. The work in question seems to be called indiscriminately Archidoxa (-orum), or Archidoxis (-os). See the Works of Paracelsus, tom vi and tom xi ed Francof 1603 sq, and Haller Biblioth Medic Pract, tom ii pp 6, 8, 11. It was translated into English under the name Archidoxis by "J II" and published in 1662, 8vo London—partly, perhaps, in consequence of this mention of it by Sir Thomas Browne.

P. 34, l ult. the secret sympathies of things] Alluding perhaps especially to the cures supposed to be wrought by the Arm Salve (Unguentum Asmarum) and Sir Kenelm Digby's Sympathetic Powder, which latter nostrum had probably at this time (1635) obtained a certain degree of notoriety (as it had been exhibited to King James and Prince Charles), though his "Discourse on the Cure of Wounds by the Powder of Sympathy" was not published till many years later.

P 35, l 21 but that in his time] Q has in his time but what, Chapman (R) and other modern edd have but that in his time which.

P 35, l 23 the devil played at chess with me] Is it possible that Retsch may have taken from this passage the idea of the "Chessplayers," one of the finest and most popular of his outline etchings?

P. 36, l 17 three impostors] The Emperor Frederic II was accused by Pope Gregory IX. of maintaining that the world had been deceived by three impostors, Jesus Christ, Moses, and Mahomet. Milman mentions (Latin Christianity, vol. iv p. 396) that "a book was said to have existed at this time [1238], with this title, it has never been discovered. I have seen a vulgar production with the title, of modern manufacture." This is the book here mentioned by Sir I. B. Sir Kenelm Digby seems to take it for granted that he attributes it to Bernardino Ochinus (Observations on Rel Med vol. II p. 463, ed. Bohn), with which opinion he himself agrees, as does also Keck in his Annotations. There is however no sufficient ground for this belief, and the author of the work in question (which has been the occasion of more discussion than it is worth) is entirely unknown. Bayle in his Dictionary refers to Placcin Theat. Anonym. vol. I p. 184, ed. 1698. Wilkin (T) refers to Barbier, Dict. des Ouvrages Anon., 1824, tome III p. 648, Alt 21612, Renouard, Cat. de la Biblioth. d'un Amateur, 1819, tome I p. 116.

P 36, l 30 doctor in physick, of Italy, C to I, doctor of physick in Italy, A, B

P 36, l 30 could not I to L omit not, probably by mistake

P 37, l 3 this line of Samia] Sir J. B. alludes to the following lines, which he quotes in a note, but not quite correctly —

"An toti morimur, nullaque pars inuenit Nostrum
Post mortem nihil est, ipsaque mors nihil
Mors individua est novus corpori
Nec parcens animæ." (Iroul 57) &c)

P 37, l 20 but from, A to H, from, I to I

P 38, l 10 That she was, &c.] This clause was first added in C

P 38, l 26 successive, C to J, successively, A, B, K, L

P 38, l 30 not worthy our vacant hours, &c.] And yet some of these very questions are discussed more or less fully in the Pseudod. Epid. See in 17, vi 2; vii 2

P 38, l penult Pantagruel's Library] "In Rabelius" [Pantagr liv II ch 7,] (Note by Sir T. B.) Bacon also mentions this fictitious library in his Essays.—"There is a master of scoffing, that in his catalogue of books of a feigned library sets down this title of a book," &c (Essay 3)

P 38, l ult Tartaretus, &c] The title of the imaginary book here mentioned is only one of the dirty jests of Rabelais, but Tartaretus (or Tataratus) was a real person, and a writer of some celebrity in the 15th and 16th centuries, though his name does not occur in any (ordinary) Biographical Dictionary, and is probably only preserved from oblivion (at least in England) by this mention of him by Su F B He was a Doctor of the Sorbonne, and brought upon himself the "everlasting fame" conferred by the ridicule of this "master of scoffing" by his refinements on the metaphysical subtleties of Duns Scotus His works were reprinted as late as 1611 See note on Rabelais, quoted by Wilkin (1)

P 39, l 5 deron A to H, deron, I to F, which is adopted by Chapman (K) and others, though it would appear to be a mere typographical error

P 39, l 14 very feasible] on the contrary, A and B read very difficult, and two MSS have diffuse

P 39, l 16 the honest Father] viz St Augustine, "who delivers his opinion, that it might have been miraculously done (De Civ Dei, vii 7) . but St Aug saith not, that it could not be done without a miracle" (Keck)

P 39, l 30 to save] Q, and some modern edd, read to save See below, p 48, l 19

P 40, l 3 passen hundred years, &c] See Pseudod Epd vi 6

P 40, l 7 tenants] Q, and other modern edd, have adopted the more usual form tenets

P 40, l 11 a postulate] This is one of the Liasis in C, which was first corrected by Wilkin (1), all previous editions having a privator

P 40, l 11 Methusalem, C to L, Methusalah, A, B. See below, p 66, l 27

P 40, l 11 Methusalem, &c] The meaning is, that the years of Methusalah may have been exceeded in number by those of some patriarch whose age is not recorded See Pseud. Epd. vi. 6 . vii. 3, pp. 143, 216, ed. Bohn.

P 40, ll 11, 22 Mithusalim, Bibel, &c] Several of these points are discussed by Sir Thomas Browne in his P's and Q's books 6 and 7

P 40, l 31 concludid, A, C to G conclude, B, II to I

P 40, l 32 consequuntur] In A, B and two MSS the following clause is added — 'as, to prove the Trinity from the speech of GOD, in the plural number, 'I et unus hominem, I et Us make men' [Gen i 26],—which is but the common style of princes and men of eminence,—he that shall read one of His Majesty's proclamations, may with the same logick conclude there be two kings in England

P 41, l 14 singularist, A to I most singular A

P 41, l 15 Ptolomy] So spelled in all the old edd

P 41 l 15 Ptolomy] Not (as some suppose) the geographer and astronomer, but the King of Egypt, who (according to the commonly received tradition) caused the Jewish Scriptures to be translated into Greek, and placed them in his newly established library at Alexandria

P 41, l 19 not it] These words are omitted by mistake in A B, as also in two of the MSS, in one of which there is a blank. It was one of these imperfect editions that was used by Sir Kenneth Digby, and which caused him to say in his Observations — 'I doubt he mistakes in his chronologie, or the printer in the name when he miseth Ptolomy condemn the Alchoran (p 316 el 1682)

P 41, l 26 that] that - hich See the following note

P 41, ll 26, 27 that—this] Wilkin (1) has transposed these two words, without authority, "because (says he) "the sense evidently required it," and has placed a period after harming. Both he, however, and the later editors who have adopted his alteration, have mistaken the construction of the sentence, in which there is no opposition between that and this and which is more plainly indicated in Q by substituting he for that, and in the Latin Version, viz. "Alcoranum armis autum et violentiâ propagatum Hæc vero (se Sacra Scriptura), sine ullorum armorum beneficio," &c

P 41, l 32 Common weals] Q and some modern edd read Commonwealths.

P 42, l 3 it is] Wilkin (T) and others read divers others, on the authority of M

P 42, l 14 the combustion of the library at Alexandria] The c were in fact two great libraries at Alexandria, which were more than once destroyed by fire. To which of these combustions Sir T B alludes, is uncertain and immaterial. See art Alexandria in Smith's Dict of Gr and Rom Geogr p 97, and especially Gibbons's Decline and Fall, and the Editor's Notes, vol iii pp 417, 419, and vol iv pp 337, 338, ed 1862

P 42 l 19 Lu ch s Pilli] Josephus does not mention Enoch but says that the descendants of Seth erected two pillars, on which were engraved all the inventions and discoveries then known to man in Israel. Walton mentions these Pillars (Compluta Angl pt i ch i) as having (according to some persons) the list of things engraved on them. See Notes and Queries, 1st Series vols v and vi

P 42 l 23 Pine li] "Pine li in his Monachus Ecclesiasticus quote one thousand and forty authors" (Note by Sir F B)

P 42 l 25 the great inventions c c] Guns printing, and the manner's comparison relating to one M's quoted by Wilkin Keel think's the third invention was logs, while the Latin Annotator is in doubt between cl and organs

P 42 ll 27 28 in tis commotio s, omitted in J, M, and also by Clapmarn (1) and other but probably by mistake

L 43 l 5 with hit acption J to M with what exceptions, A to I. The exact meaning of the c w is not quite clear, though not one of the former editor has thought it necessary to explain them. Several widely different interpretations have been suggested to the present Editor, of which the two following are the most plausible viz, (1) I wonder what exception they could make in favour of the Pentateuch more than the other books, — or more probably (2) I wonder what exc ption they could take against the other books more than the Pentateuch

P 43 l 24 it is] Q has not only, and the Lat Transl non tantum but without necessity

L 43, l 28 contescend] descend, J, M, and some modern editions

P 43 l interp one flock] It should be noticed that Browne does not say one fold (as in the Authorized Version of 1611, and also in all the other old translations except Tyndale's, but "one flock," which is the proper translation of the Greek, μία ποιμήν

P 43, l ult. those four members of Religion] Pagans, Mahometans, Jews, and Christians

P 44, l 10 he is beyond, α το ε, κ 1, is beyond, F to J

P 45, ll 1, 2 Alexander futurus Caesar] He probably means to imply that they did not observe the due mean between richness and poverty

P 45, l 10 that full, ε το 1, th full, α το 10 This is one of the Imata in C, which was immediately corrected (in 1), and yet (singularly enough) was reproduced in 11, and also by Wilkin (1), who however notices it in his Act and Conn

P 45, l 16 in the α 1] α, B, have in α 1, which is adopted in Q

P 45, l 20 an heretic] Wilkin (1) and others have a heretic, as below, p. 50, l 9, both old and modern eds have a heretic. See above, p. 11, l 13

P 45, l 21 he must that says] α, B, and one MS read It is false to say if I say another MS has I do false, &c. In this passage (as in some others) the author seems to have modified his opinions in preparing them to meet the public eye. Originally he expressed a doubt as to Huss being a Martyr. He now presents us with this nomism, viz that he who differs in opinion from both parties, agrees with neither (Wilkin, abridged)

I 45, l 21 must not, ε το 1 must not, ε το 1

P 45, l 28 it is] Whether Scrites was, or was not, a Martyr, is a matter of opinion, about which (as in the case of John Huss) men may fairly differ, but to say that he "suffered on a fundamental point of Religion, the Unity of God," is utterly misleading and incorrect. He was accused in the indictment, not only of disowning the gods recognized by the state, but also of introducing other new deities of his own (See Plato, Apol cap 11, Xenophon, Mem, lib 1 cap 1)

P 45, l 30 the miserable Bishop] Chapman (1) and others read that miserable Bishop, on the authority of J. The Bishop alluded to is Virgilius, Bishop of Salzburg in the 8th century, who is said by some persons (see Disraeli, Curios of Liter vol. 1, p. 39, ed. 1834), to have been burnt for heretically asserting the existence of Antipodes. The story does not appear to be authentic, but it is probable that Sir T. B. had seen it, and believed it, as he originally wrote list, not living, three lines below, and also uses the same word suffered, both in the case of Virgilius and of Sociates. There are other mistakes connected with this story, but it is sufficient to state here that Boniface, Archbishop of Mainz, misunderstood what Virgilius had written, and accused him to Pope Zachary of teaching that there was another world with another sun and moon, and that the Pope called upon Virgilius to explain the charge. As he was afterwards ruled to the see of Salzburg, it may be presumed that his explanation was considered satisfactory. (See Milner's Hist. of the Church of Christ, vol. II p. 481, ed. 1834, Whewell's Hist. of the Inductive Sciences, vol. I p. 256.) It is curious that both the accused, and the accuser, and the judge, have been canonized by the Church of Rome.

P 45, l ult. [latin] A, B have life, which is adopted by Q. The Latin translator has sacerdotium amicum.

P 46, l 21. [the record], D to I, record, A, V, C.

P 47, l 3. [do] Q and some modern edd. read do but without good reason.

P 47, l 8. [effects], I to I, effect, A to II.

P 47, l 16. [can do all things] cannot do all things but sin, A, II, which seems to be a mistake for the reading of two of the MSS. viz. can do all things but in.

P 47, sect. XXXIII is wanting in A, B.

P 48 l 5. [Helena] For the history of the Cross, &c., found by the Impious Helena, see Smith and Cheetham, Dict. of Christian Antiq., art. Cross, Finding of, p. 503.

P 48, l 9. [those nails] It is said that out of one of the two nails given by Helena to Constantine has been formed the inner ring in the famous historical "Iron Crown of Lombardy." (See Dict. of Christian Antiq., art. Crown, p. 508.)

P 48, l 11. [per Pœfrades], C to J, K, I omit per.

P 48, l 12. [consecrated sword] "Ejusmodi gladios donant Pontifices, et magnos Principes, cum bellum gerant contra Ecclesie hostes. Illum gladium, quem Leo X. ad Henricum VIII. Anglie Regem misit, cum titulo Defensoris Fidei, vidi Londini in propugnaculo quod appellatur De Taw," [i.e. The Tower]. (Molike.)

P 48, l 14 Genuose] Q and some modern edd read Genuose

P 48, l 19 salve] Q, and some modern edd, read solve, as above, p. 39, l 30, and in several other places. See Glossarial Index.

P 48, l 33 cessation of Oracle] See Pseudod Iphid bk. vii, ch 12

P 49, l 7 Phaan confessed]. Molit e refers to Iusebius, Chron ad An vi Tiben, Origen, a z Celsum, lib ii, Tertullian, Ipol cap 21, Augustine, De Ci Dei, iii 15

P 49, l 8 the Devil himself confessed it] "In his Oracle to Inustus" (Note by Sn l B) The Greek verses in a corrupt state may be seen in Suda, art Αδγουστος

P 49, l 12 Chronicle] Chapman (κ) and Gaidner (w) read chronology, on the authority of J

P 49, l 13 Magasthenes, A, B, and this is of course the right way of spelling the name, but it is somewhat singular that all the authorized edd have Magasthenes

P 49, l 20 countessful] Chapman (κ), and others read countessfuling, on the authority of J, w

P 49, l 21 times present represent, l to l, time (or the time) represent's, v to D This is one of the Littera in c

P 49, l 27 as some ill have it, wanting in A, B, and two MSS. Sn l B probably here alludes to Philo, who (De Vita Mosi, in fine,) expressly says that Moses wrote the account of his death and burial prophetically

P 49, l 29 that doubtful comat, G] that is, all doubt as to the reality of Spirits and Witches

P 49, l pen the ladders and scale of creatures] This is explained below, pp 53, 4, and p 56

P 50, l 1 For my own part, I do not know that there are Witches] What supposed proof of the existence of Witches Sn l B here refers to, is not known, but his belief on this subject (which, it must be remembered, he held in common with some of the wisest of his contemporaries) was not so harmless in practice as some of his other credulous fancies, inasmuch as it led to his being indirectly (though no doubt most unwillingly) connected with the burning of the two poor women at Bury St Edmund's, by order of Sir Matthew Hale, in 1664 (See Bp Francis Hutchinson's Lsary on Witchcraft, or the Reports of the Trial mentioned by Lowndes, Bibliogr Manual, art Witchcraft, p 2961 } Sir Kenelm Digby (as Mr. W P Smith remarks, in A A) "takes up an advanced position for his age, when he says, 'Neither do I deny there are Witches, I only reserve my assent, till I meet with stronger motives to carry it'" (Observations, &c, p 464, ed. Bohn)

P 50, l 16 a poet, C to L, the poet, A, B

P 50, l 16 transpate, C to L, transplant, A, B, and one MS

P 50, l 26 that Antichrist should be born of the tribe of Dan

This singular opinion prevailed in the ancient Church, and was founded partly upon the omission of his name from the list of the tribes of Israel "sealed" in the Apocalypse (ch vii), and partly upon Jacob's last prophetic blessing of his sons (Gen xlix 17), wherein he is spoken of as an "adder" and a "serpent" (See art Antichrist, in Smith and Wace's Dut of Christian Biography)

P 51, l 1 detaction] As nothing is known of this "Maid of Germany," except that she is said in one of the MSS to have "lived without meat on the smell of a rose," it is impossible to say what is meant here by the word detaction. All the MSS have detaction, which reading is adopted by Peace (A), and which reading is so very obvious and plausible, that it seems impossible to believe that it would not have appeared in some of the editions published in the Author's life time, if it had been true.

P 51, l 9 they both, A to H, I to I omit both. The Latin Transl has utique, i.e. both the devil and his scholars.

P 51, l 13 a great part, A to I, K, I omit great

P 51, l 20 that sentence of Paracelsus] The Latin Annotator refers to his work De Imaginibus

P 51, l 22 Ascendens constellationum, &c] "Thereby is meant our good Angel appointed us from our nativity" (Note by Sir T B)

P 51, l 23 magalia] animalia A, B, and all the MSS (Wilkin)

P 51, l 28 natures, A, B, C, M, nature, D to L

P 52, l 2 an universal] Wilkin (i) has a universal. See above, p 11, l 13

P 52, l 4 It was the opinion of Plato, &c] See the Timæus, p. 36, and in other places.

P. 52, l 10. of us, A to H; in us, I to L.

P 52, l 21 Whosoever, C to H, whatsoever, A, B, & to L.

P 52, l penult ουι, A to I, K, I, ο'ις, J, M

P 53, l 4 After this line A, B and two MSS have the two following, which are found below, p 119, l 9 —

"Keepe still in my horizon for to mee
It is not the Sunne that makes the day but Thee.

P 53, l 6 humble] A, I and two MSS have humbly

P 53, l 20 Plato] In the Phaedon, pp 107, 108, and elsewhere

P 53, l 22 yet is it, C to I, yet is, A, B, K, I, yet it is, G to J

P 54, l 3 hold on, I to L, hold on, A to D

P 54, l 5 definition of Porphyry] "I essentia rationalis immortalis" (Note in one of the MSS) Sir I B perhaps quotes from memory the Latin translation by Mars Ficinus (in Iamblichus, De Mystis, p 285, Lugd 1570) of the following words in Porphyry, (De Abstinentia p 225, Cantab 1655) ἡ ψυχὴ οὐσία ἀμεγέθης, αἰολος, ἀφθαρτος

P 54, l 7 'tis thou hit, K, I wanting in A to J — but the words could hardly have been inserted in the text, during Sir I B's life, without some authority See below, p 56, l 27

P 54, l 11 naturae] natur, J, M

P 54, l 25 numerical self] A, I have natural self Wilkin (1) refers this variation to l 22, numerical forms

P 54, l 25 that as thou art, &c.] The Latin translation here is plainer than the original — 'sicut unum facultas inest corporis a se informari movendi, sic illos [sc Angulos] movendi quidem cujusvis, nullius vero informandi, potentiam habere Nos temporibus, locis, et distinctis alligamur, invisibilis vero minus illa." &c

P 55, l 7 thoroughly, E to I, thoroughly, C, D, truly, A, B

P 55, l 8 the conversion of a sinner] Sir I B here follows the Geneva Bible of 1560, which has "one sinner that converteth," but the Greek μετανοοῦντι is more accurately rendered by repenteth in the Authorized Version of 1611 See above, p 43, l antep

P 55, l 9. with those in that Great Father] A, B omit those in

P 55, l 10 that Great Father] Probably St Chrysostom, Homil in Genes, though the same idea is also mentioned by St Augustine, De Civit. Dei, xi. 9. (Keck, abridged.)

P 55, l 20 actually existing, &c.] Here again the Latin translation is plainer than the English original — "Illud jam sunt, quod nos ipsos aliquando futuros speramus tantum adhuc et opinamur"

P 55, l 22, a corporal] corporal, J

P 56, l 7 fi i i n d r, A, B, C, I, K, L, fi i i n d, D to H, J

P 56, l 13 on] O, Wilkin (1), and Gudimer (iv), improve the sentence by reading one - or'd, on the authority of the MSS and the Latin translation

P 56 l 15 h i e f and of] f the one but of, Q without authority, but improving the sentence the Latin Version has, Alterum uetus Manus descriptisse videtur, alterum uetus, &c.

P 56 l 16 first chapter, C to I, K, I, first chapter, I, M, last chapter, A, I

P 56, l 25 po tible and perhaps &c.] The Latin translation makes the sense plainer — ' i b r b i l e s et h u d s c i o an forte mystica M s i s m e t h d i m a s e n o n u r

P 56, l 27 l i e n d, K, I, omitted in A to J — the word does not seem to be wanted, and yet it could hardly have been inserted in the text during Sir I B's life, without some authority. See p 54, l 7, and p 94 l 3

P 56, l 31 Do but ab tract from the compulency of l i d s] One of the MSS has al t r a c t, and the Latin Translator compulcentum si p i l u s d m i s so that we might almost suppose that Sir I B wrote, Do but ab tract in (or th n) compulency from l i d s

P 57, l 20 this hom i e, A to I, his huma e, K, L

P 57, l 30 ancient, omitted in I to I, perhaps by mistake

P 58, l 5 a distinction] The rest of the section is wanting in A, I

P 58, l 7 generation not only] Wilkin (1) reads not only generation, an unauthorized improvement

P 58, l 21 was d i e n, A to H, has d i e n, I to L

P 58, l 24 t o affection] In the sense of prop i t u s, qual i t e s, 'proprietates' in the Latin Translation. The two qualities alluded to are incorruptibility and immortality (Wilkin)

P 58 l 26 Plat] In the Phaedon, and other places

P 58, l 27 There is another scripture, &c.] viz whether the soul is produced by traduction from the parents, or creation by God Information and references concerning this and other speculations about the soul may be found in Moltke's Notes on this section, or in the treatise of Sir I B's contemporary, Henry More, On the Immortality of the Soul, bk. II. chaps. 12, 13, &c.

P 58, l 31 Paracelsus] Sir Matthew Hale mentions this matter in his Primitive Origination of Mankind, &c. in § 7, p. 288. "But never was any so mad, except Paracelsus, that could ever pretend to make up a sensible being, much less the human nature. Paracelsus vainly and falsely pretended to the raising of an homunculus, wherein notwithstanding he lyed, as he did in many things else, which he never could effect, notwithstanding his vain boasting of his skill."

P 58, l 31 Paracelsus, A to I, Paracelsus's, V, which is followed by Q, and other modern edd. See Index, art. Gentile Case.

P 59, l 4 autumathesis, C to V, autanaclasis, A, B, transposition of words, V, O.

P 59, l 4 Cicero insinuat, &c.] Delitzsch says (Bibl Psychol. II § 7, p. 130, Leinb. 1867) that these words of Peter Lombard, representing the opinion of St. Augustine, became an authentic formula in the Roman Catholic Church. See St. August., De Gen. ad Lit. lib. VII. c. 26, Peter Lomb., Sent., lib. II. dist. VII. p. 356, ed. 1609.

P 59, l 8 αἰνῶν] (αἰνῶν) (αιων) αιωνος, no doubt by mistake, which however is repeated by Fields (V), and therefore requires to be noticed.

P 59, l 10 any author] A and b have any other.

P 59, l 14 of man with beast] A to E, of a man with beast, F, G, H, of a man with a beast, I to L.

P 59, l 22 and in all acceptations, wanting in A, B, and the MSS., and in all acceptations, Q, and also below, p. 71, l 8.

P 59, l 23 there is, K, L, is, A to J.

P 59, l 29 the hand] the water ubi, V, B, and the MSS. See below, p. 64, l 2, and p. 81, l 22.

P 59, l 31 reduced the very Heathens to Divinity] Alluding probably to Plato (Timæus, p. 69, &c.), Xenophon (Memor. Scr. I. 4), Cicero (De Nat. Deor. II. 54, &c.), and especially (as Keck points out) to Galen, who, in a well known passage of eloquent and exalted piety, professes to have composed his great work De Usu Partium (which has before been mentioned by Sir T B, p 25) as a true hymn to the Creator, in order to shew forth His wisdom, power, and goodness (in 10, tom iii p 237, &c., ed Kuhn)

P 59, l ult discovers, A to H, discourses, I to I

P 60, l 2 as organ] In this clause there is found much variety of reading A, b, have as in that I find not any proper organ, C, D, have as in that I find not, that is no organ, in L to I, K, L, it is given as in the text (which is adopted solely because the readings of I are almost always to be preferred to those of D), and J reads as in that I find there is no organ. The sense of the whole passage is perhaps more plainly expressed in the Latin Translation than in the original — ne tamen inter plurima uita et insignia documenta, quæ in humanæ fabricæ aptum, quicquam mihi perinde placet, ac quod nullum organum, nullum instrumentum animæ rationalis apparat

P. 60, ll 6—9 and this . revere it, wanting in A, D, and the MSS

P 60, l 9 revere, C to J, concern, K, I

P 60, l 31 Metempsychosis, C to G, metempsychosis, H to L, probably by mistake, metempsychosis, A, D See p 14, l 19

P 61, l 1 Nibuchodonosor, D, L, I, H, I, K, I, Nibuchodonosor, C, Nibuchadonosor, G, J, Nibuchadnosor, A, B See p 209, l 15

P 61, l 17 hearts] After this word a colon or semicolon is found in A, B, D, I, I, H to V, and this punctuation is adopted in Q, and some other modern edd, thus making the following clause (that the blessed, &c) to depend grammatically on I believe, in l 4, and contradicting the sense of ll 11, 12 In C, and some copies of G, a comma only is found after hearts, thus making the clause (that the blessed, &c) to be a suggestion of evil spirits, depending grammatically on instilling, &c, and this is the sense expressed in the Latin Version — dæmonum . nos ad maleficia incitantium, suggerentiumque incantis animis, spiritus illos beatos, &c

P 61, l 20 But that those, E to I, but those, C, D; that those, A, H This is one of the Errata in C

P. 61, l 25. over Adam, K, L; in Adam, A to J

P. 62, l 13 to be within one instant of a spirit] A, B, and one of the MSS have to be in one instant a spirit

P 62, l 24 this is to be, C to I, K, I, this to be, A, B, J

P 62, l 28 defie death] A, I, some copies of G, and all the MSS have defie death, which agrees better with the following sentence found in two MSS, and inserted by Wilkin (1) in the text — It is a symptom of melancholy to be afraid of death yet sometimes to desire it, this latter I have often discovered in myself, and think no man can dispute but, is I have sometimes death

P 63, l 6 some Dreams] Molike refers to St Augustine, De Genesi ad Litera, vi 13. See above, p 40, l 11

P 63, l 11 for I, m, or] In accordance with this opinion Sir T B amused himself with the whimsical conceit of "A dialogue betwixt a tortoise in the womb, concerning the world they were to come into" Lucian and others have written dialogues of the dead, Sir I. B is probably the only person who has imagined a dialogue of the unborn. Whether this dialogue was ever actually written, is uncertain, but Mr. B Dockray edited (Lond 1855) a "Conjectural Restoration of the lost Dialogue between two Twins, by Sir Thomas Browne" See I attributes from Common Place Books, vol iv p 379 (Wilkin's ed), and Uranian, ch 4, p 38 (Bohn's ed.)

P 63, l 20 gratulations] Q and Wilkin (1) read gratulations, on the authority of A, B

P 63, l 20 and tomb] Wilkin (1) reads the tomb, on the improvement of the text, (see above, l 14,) but without any authority except the Latin Translation

P 63, l 24 not yet without life] The word yet seems to spoil the sense of the passage, but there is no authority for omitting it, if it is retained, it must be used for even then

P 63, l 28 arise] rise, J, M

P 64, l 2 that proper ubi] A, B omit proper

P 64, l 4 something more then] nothing else but, A, B.

P 64, l 5 perfect] A, B have perfectest

P 64 l 8 sleep a while] A, B omit a while.

P 64, l 25. start at us] A, B have start at us

P 65, l 19 late, A to H, omitted in I to I, perhaps by mistake, replaced in M.

P 65, l 22 the Testament of Diogenes] "Who willed his friend not to bury him, but to hang him up with a staffe in his hand to fright away the crows" (Note by Sir T B) See Cicero, Tusc Quest i 43

P 65, l 22 nor do I] A, B, J omit I

P 65, l 23 allowe, A, B, C, K, L, followe, D to J, M

P 65, l 30 nearest way, C, D, K, L, nearest way, A, B, F to I, nearest, J This is almost the only place in which the reading of D is superior to that of E See above, p 14, l 3, and below, p 109, l 27

P 65, l penult I do not curye, Etc] As Theophrastus did, who dying, accused Nature for giving them, to whom it could not be of any concernment, so huge a life, and to man, whom it much concerned, so short a one Cicero, Tusc Quest iii. 69 (Keck)

P 65, l ult Cervus and Dons] See Pseul. Epul. iii 9, where Sir T B quotes Pliny's words - "Hesiodus . . . cornici novem nostras attribuit etates, quadruplini ejus cervis, id triplicatum cervis" (Hist Nat. vii 48 [49])

P 66, l 2. a Jubilee] "The Jewish computation for fifty years" (Note in one of the MSS)

P 66, l 3 one revolution of Saturn] "The planet Saturn maketh his revolution once in thuty years." (Note in one of the MSS)

P 66, l 4 nor hath my pulse beat thuty years] Hence, as Browne was born in Oct 1605, it would appear that the Religio Medici was written about the year 1635 See the note on p 4, l 8, and on p 115, l 22

P 66, l 5 excepting one] Christian IV, King of Denmark, who began to reign in 1588, seventeen years before Browne's birth, and who was still alive when this sentence was written

P 66, l 5 ashes] Q, and other modern cdd, insert of

P 66, l 7 three Emperors, Etc] See Chronology of Sir T B's life prefixed to this ed

P 66, l 7 four Popes] viz Leo XI, Paul V, Gregory XV, and Urban VIII But (as Wilkin observes) in reckoning himself contemporary with Leo, Sir T B must have proceeded on his own fanciful principle of computation, that "every man is some months elder than he bethinks him" (p 63, l 10), for in fact Leo died nearly six months before Sir T. B was born.

P 66, l 10 shaken, A, B, F to I, and so above, p 8, l 28, shaked, C, D, E

P 66, l 11 in my . . . days] In K, I, these words are connected with what follows, in A to J, M, they are connected with what precedes — the punctuation in the text will suit either construction, both giving an equally good sense

P 66, l 27 Mithusalah] There is no variation in the spelling here. See p 40, l 11

P 66, l 29 rouse] Q reads rouse, but rouser occurs again below, p 191, l ult

P 67, l 2 agie, A to H, agi, I to L

P 67, l 3 at forty, A, I, C, M, as at forty, D to J

P 67, l 3 the circumstance, A, B, C, M, that circumstance, D to J

P 67, l 9 proceeds] D has precedes, connected in F to proceeds.

P 67, l 13 And though, &c] In A, B and the MSS the remainder of this section, and the whole of the next, are wanting, and the following passage occurs — 'The course and order of my life would be a very death to others. I use my selfe to all dyets, humours, wies, hunger, thirst, cold, heat, want, plenty, necessity, dangers, hurrids, when I am cold, I come not in selfe by heat, when sick, not by physicke, those that know how I live, may justly say, I regard not life, nor stand in feare of death

P 67, l 17 Creatus mundi] Referring probably to De Sancto c 23. Neque me vivens paenitet, quoniam illi vivam, ut non frustra me ritum existimem

P 67, l 21. male] Some modern edd. read make, without authority or necessity. See note above, p 34 l 21

P 68, l 6 gloom] O, Q have gloom, which is adopted by Wilkin (1), and also by some modern editors. Although Grindiner (W) has explained the word gloom in his Glossary

P 68 l 6 gloom or bottom of our day] See below p 102, l 2, "the thread of his own days" George Herbert in a letter to his mother quoted in Walton's Life (p 299 ed 1825), says, "I have always observed the thread of life to be like other threads or skeins of sill, full of snarles and incumbrances. Happy is he, whose bottom is wound up, and laid ready for work in the New Jerusalem"

P 68, l 19 55 thousand (years)] See below p 72, l 27.

P 69, l 3 this breath, C to J, the breath, A, B, his breath, K, L

P 69, l 23 to it, D to L, unto it, V, B, C

P 69, l 24 *Emori, &c.] A line of Epicharmus, quoted (and probably translated) by Cicero, Tusc. Quaes. 1 8*

P 69, l 24 *emere] Gardiner (V), without authority, reads, estimo which, however, is the reading of Cicero, and is rejected by the metre*

P 69, l 26 *C. ar.] Suetonius represents Julius Caesar as preferring a sudden and unexpected death Jul. C. ar., c 87*

P 69, l 29 his.] The remainder of the section is wanting in V, I and the MSS

P 70, l 9 l'holden, I

P 70, l 11 tion, h' l in the f' r, &c.] Alluding to the lines of Seneca —

*I ripere vitam non o non h' minus
At n' i' mortem — (I l 15)*

P 70, l 13 *G' t' oult not, &c.] In this obscure sentence the simplest punctuation has been followed, in order that the reader may put his own interpretation on the words. Per (V) and others place a semicolon after pl, and thereby connect the clause the mis with what precedes, while these same words are by the editor of O Wilkin (1), and others who place a semicolon after that referred to the clause that follows. According to Wilkin that in l 14 refers to death, according to Perce it refers to the mis, &c. and again that in l 15 means according to Perce not according to Wilkin it means is. In both cases Wilkin's view is probably the more correct. The Latin Translation appears to be right in the first part of the sentence, but wrong in the end — "Ilinc Deus Ipse Sc non exemit, nec enim in eum immortalis esse, nec quod in ea immortale erat suscipere voluit*

P 70, l 15 that as K I that as in it C to I, what as in it, O

P 70, l 24 th' Stoc is in the r's, h'] in holding death to be an evil

P 70 l 27 this literal, A to H the literal, I to I

P 71 l 2 *For combust.] "That time when the moon is in conjunction, and obscured by the sun, the astrologers call ahoi combusta" (Note in one of the MSS)*

P 71, l 30 nor shall L, L, nor all, A to J.

P 71, l penult so is its, C, M, so its A, B, D to L

P 72, l 5 Some believe, &c] Moltke refers to St Augustine De Genesi ad Liter, iv 22, &c et De Civitate Dei, xi 7

P 72, ll 5 8 Some them] A, B, and all the MSS have I. me (Wilkin)

P 72, l 10 the great evil of the intellect] Will in (1) and others read the great evil in the intellect, on the authority of the MSS — an improvement of the text, but not absolutely necessary. The Latin version has, magnum illius periculum in intellectu intellectus

P 72, l 27 Elias A to L, Elias M which is adopted by Q and most modern editors, Pease (A) has Elias. See above p 58 l 31 and below, p 99 l 3

P 72, l 27 six thousand years] Alluding to a tradition that the world would last so long contained in the following passage in the Talmud — "It is a tradition of the house (school) of Elijah. The world exists 6000 years 2000 confusion, 2000 Torah (Mosiac law), 2000, the days of Messiah" (Quoted by Delitzsch in his Commentary on the II Kings vol 1 p 383 Engl Transl 1868 Willm also refers to mundi Perpetua Fidelis, ii 10 § 1, p 394, ed 1657) and l 1 mentions this "prophecy of Elias in other places (see Perpetua Fidelis vol ii p 109, Urbis Universalis ch 5, vol iii p 43 ed Lohm), and also refers to the period of six thousand years without naming Elias (see above p 68, l 19 and below p 190, l 6 230 15) Beck notices that the same opinion as to the duration of the world was held also by Irenaeus (see De Institutionibus, vii, 14)

P 72, l inter the Devil of Delphos] "The circle of Apollo" (Note in one of the MSS)

P 73, l 3 or present] Wilkin (1) reads not present, on the authority of A, B

P 73, l 6 to fulfil old prophecies] "In these days there shall come liars and false prophets" (Note 13 See T B)

P 73, l 7 the authors C to L, K, L, authors A 1 author J

P 73, ll 15 18 is as antichrist is wanting in A B

P 73, l 17 to speak falsely, &c] Will in on the authority of the MSS, reads the following clause thus et per hoc [omittuntur] those ridiculous anagrams, I am half of [I am useless] opinion.

[and think] that antichrist, &c., with the following note on "anagrams" — Wherby men labour to prove the Pope antichrist, from their name making up the number of the Beast

P 73, l 22 hardly any man] no man, A, B, and the MSS

P 73, l 29 that great, D to I, the great, A, B, C The Latin version (though made not from D, but from C), also has illum

P 74, l 8 hath only power, &c.] The Latin version is plainer, Ille dñs solus efficit et alit, &c.

P 74, l 11 sui] In the Errata to this word is directed to be changed into me but we may suppose that it was soon discovered that sui was right, and accordingly me did not appear in the text till Peace (v) and Gardiner (w) introduced it. The printed edd. of Claudian have quidem. The words appear to be borrowed from Silius Italicus —

' Ip̄ a quidem virt̄ is v̄bitur fulcherima merces '

— (Pun̄ xiii 663)

P 74, l 15 that honest artifi. of Seneca] or more correctly, of I p̄tinus, quoted with approbation by Seneca, I p̄st II, § 6 "Aliquis vñ bonus nobis eligendus est, ac semper ante oculos habendus, ut sic inquam illo spectante vivamus, et omnia inquam illo vidente faciamus." (See also Ep̄st 25, § 4) "Which," says Keek (in a note thought by Wilkin (r) and Gardiner (w) worthy of being preserved), "though (as the Authour saith) it be an honest attitude, yet cannot I but commend the pritty and prefer the duction of him, (who ever he were,) who in the margin of my Seneca, over against those words [inquam illo vidente] wrote these 'Quin Deo potius, Qui semper omnibus omnia agentibus non inquam sed re ipsa adest et videt, ac etiam ut testis, vindex et punitor est male agentis.'" The same idea is beautifully expressed by Philo, Leat ad Carum, c I, vol ii p 546, ed. Mang

P 74, l 23 at the last, C to I, A, I at the last day, A, B and one MS, at last, J, w

P 74, l 24 that great resolution of his] Keek refers to a passage from Seneca quoted by Thomas Aquinas in his Commentary on Boethius De Consol. Philos. — "Si scirem deos peccata ignorareturos, et homines ignoraturos, adhuc propter vilitatem peccati peccare erubescerem." (Sign. A fol. [111 vers., ed. Colon. 1497])

P 74, l 30 an ease, A to E, G, ease, K, L, any ease, F, H, I, J.

P 75 l 3 Julian, wanting in A, B, and the MSS

P 75, l 26 specus] I to L have pieces

P 75, l penult those, A, B, C, I to I, these, D to H

P 76, l 6 millions] The following passage is found in A, F, and the MSS — "What is made to be immortal, Nature cannot, nor will the voice of God, destroy Those bodies that wee be hold to perish, were in their created natures immortal, and liable unto death but accidentally and upon forsake, and therefore they owe not that naturall homige unto death as other bodies do, but may be restored to immortality with a lesser miracle, and by a bare and easie revocation of course retaine immortal I have often, &c

P 76, l 12. Philosophers] Some modern edd. put a colon or a full stop after this word, but the sentence runs on without a break, and the words Let us speak are equivalent to If we speak. The Latin translation has, "Si enim physicorum more philosophandum est," &c

P. 76, l 18 to a contimplative A to D, M, by a contemplative, E to L. This is one of the very few places where the reading of D is better than that of I

P 76, l 24 This is made good which can] This I make good . and can, A, I, and the MSS "Stuff! This was, I believe, some lying boast of Paracelsus, which the good Sir Thomas Browne has swallowed for a fact" (S T Coleridge's Lectures Remains, vol 1 p 244)

P 76, l 25 which can from the ashes of a plant i. e. revive the plant, &c.] Sir Matthew Hale mentions this subject in his Primitive Origination of Mankind, &c, in § 7, p 288 "The Chymists tell us, that, by re union of separate principles of vegetables, they will in a glass, revive a vegetable of the same species at least in figure and effigies, this hath been pretended, but I could never hear any man speak it that saw it done" Wilkin gives some extracts on this subject from different writers There is a paper on "Palingenesis," by Prof Henry Moiley, in the Fortnightly Review, Oct 1868

P. 77, l 8. That elegant Apostle] The Latin translation has Epistolarium illi eloquentissimum, which is probably correct

P. 77, l. 24. is able to terminate. &c.] The Latin translation is somewhat plainer — non suis ipsius tantum desideris, sed etiam votis nostris inextinguibilibus satiandis sufficit

P 78, l 19 a perspective] I, J, M, omit a

P 79, ll 3, 4 either . . . or, E to L, neither . . . nor, A, B, either . . . nor, C, D

P 79, l 9 wheron] Some modern edd have whereon

P 79, l 20 with an actual fire, &c] It is not stated that the golden calf was reduced to powder by the action of fire, but that Moses "burnt it with fire, and stamped it," [perhaps, as this is gold leaf] "and ground it very small, even until it was as small as dust" (Deuter ix 21). The Hebrew word applied to the pulverisation of the golden calf in Lx xxxii 20, and Deuter ix 21, is applied in the same way to "molten images" in 2 Chron xxxiv 4

P 79, l 28 in action of flames, C to G, the action of the flame A B the actions of flames, H to L

P 80, l 8 last and proper action] K, I omit and proper, probably by mistake

P 80, l 10 affirm] A, B, and the MSS add yea, and urge Scripture for it

P 80, l 11 crystallized] so spelled in I to I, for crystalized

P 80, l 22 seed] seem (i e seem), A, B

P 80, l 31 that little compendium of the sixth day] "quod est Homo" (Moltke)

P 81, l 9 Surely, &c] The remainder of this section is wanting in A, B, and the MSS

P 81, l 12 those flaming mountains] Atna and Vesuvius, which in the popular superstition of the country have been supposed the mouths of hell. (Note in O)

P 81, l 14 de-ils dwell, D to L, de-ill dells, C

P 81, l 18 Anaxagoras] Chipman (K) and Gaidiner (W) read Anaxarchus, without authority, but in accordance with Keck's suggestion that Anaxagoras is false printed, and should be Anaxarchus, inasmuch as it was not the former philosopher, but the latter, who held that there were infinite worlds. However, there is no evidence, nor any strong reason for believing, that Sir T. B. did not write Anaxagoras

P 81, l penult that with joy, L to L, and with joy, v to D, M

P 81, l ult nor nece] Some modern editors read nor ever

P 83, l 5 to miscall] This is one of the Llata in C, which was corrected in J, and by Wilkin (1) in his Add and Corr, the other edd omit to

P 83, l 14 should, E to M, should say, A to D This is one of the Llata in C

P 84, l 9 ends, D to I, K, I, end, A, B, C, J

P 84, l 12 whose worthy lies do] whose life doth, A, B, and the MSS

P 84, l 13 those many subdivisions of Hell, &c] Dante describes nine circles of Hell, some of which are subdivided. In Limbo, which is the first circle, he finds the souls of those who, although they have lived virtuously and have not to suffer for great sins, nevertheless, through lack of baptism, merit not the bliss of Paradise" (Cary's Argument to Canto iv) This was the Limbus Patum, he did not visit the Limbus Infantum, the abode of unbaptized infants

P 84, l 20 they who desire, I, I, they that desire, A, B, and the MSS, they desire, C to J, M This is one of the very few cases in which the reading of C is inferior to that of A, B See below, p 104, l 25

P 85, l 16 the Stouls, &c] Grindin refers to Shakespeare,—

' For there was never yet philosopher
That could endure the toothache patiently Much Ado about Nothing, v 1

P 85, l 17 Phalaris his, A to M, Phalaris s, O, Q, and several modern editions

P 85, l 19 the Scepticks, &c] Keck quotes Lucretius (iv. 471) —

' Denique nihil sciri si quis putat id quoque nescit,
An sciri possit, quoniam nihil scire fatetur "

P 85, l 28 The Duke of Venice, &c] An ancient ceremony formerly performed by the Doge every year, in token of the sovereignty of the state of Venice over the Adriatic

P 85, l 28. weds . by a ring] Wilkin (1) reads yearly

weds by casting therewith a ring, on the authority of A, B, and the MSS

P 85, l 30 argue] Q, and some modern edd. read accuse, on the authority of J, M

P 85, l pen the Philosopher, &c.] Alluding either to Antisthenes (St Jerome, in Matth xix. 28 tom iv par 1. col. 89, quoted by Jer. Favlor, Life of Christ, i 5 § 2 vol ii p 107, ed Eden), or Aristippus (Diog. Laert. Vit. Philos ii 8 § 77), or Crates (id. vi 5 § 87), for the story is told of each of these philosophers. Keck and other modern editors say that Apollo-mus of Lyana is meant,—but this is doubtful

P 85, l 6, 7 to the enemy of another] to another, A, B, which is followed by Q

P 86, l 7 enemy, I to M ennie C to H. Chapman (R) and Gardiner (W) write enry, Wilkin (T) and St John (L) eney, Pierce (V) enny

P 86, l 9 without pardon, I to L, without a pardon, A to H

P 87, l 1 This section is wanting in A, B and the MSS

P 87, l 2 Strabo's cloak] Strabo (ii 5, p 184, ed Tauchn.) compared, not Europe, but the then known world to a cloak. χλαυδοειδής

P 87, l 16 who are in a manner all Martyr.] "Christum enim in A-ri, ut et in finibus Abyssinorum, gravissima Mahometanus patiuntur" (Moltke)

P 87, l 27 the Atomist, or Familist] The present Editor has been unable to discover who the Atomists were. One very competent person whom he consulted suggested that the word should be Admitts, another that it should be Anabaptist, but there is no reason for thinking that the name is, not what Sir T. B. wrote, as there is no variation in any of the edd or MSS. The Latin translation has Atomiste et Familiste. Keck, the English commentator, passes over the words without notice, as does also Sir Kenelm Digby in his "Observations," presumably because they were too familiar to require explanation.

Moltke, the foreign commentator, says of them, "Novæ (ut puto,) in Angha sectæ" Wilkin "suspects the two names refer to but one sect," which opinion is followed by other modern editors, Mr Smith (A A) says, "The atomists seemingly because they were a unitary family"—It is at any rate a singular coincidence that has been pointed out, viz, that in Thomas Edwards's Gangrena, &c, 1646, (p 87) there is mention of a Mrs Honey, who preached in 1644 or '45 before an audience of some fifty persons, and maintained universalism, but it is hardly probable that she should have been sufficiently eminent to found a sect bearing her own name, which in 1636 (the date of the composition of Rel Med) was as well known as the Unitarists. This latter sect (called also the 'Family of Love') appeared about 1575, and is mentioned in the Church histories of the period, (Hiller, Musden, Neal,) and very frequently by Rogers, On the 39 Articles

P 87, l antep There must be more than one St Peter] having in their possession the keys of the gates of Heaven

P 88, l 14 can hardly] A, b, and the MSS have cannot

P 88, l 17 Those who sentence Solomon, &c] Keck refers to St Augustine upon Psalm 126, and in many other places, and also to Lysia, in 2 Luc c 7, and Bellarmine, tom 1 lib 1 Contræ c 5

P 89, l 21 his own, A to H, M, one own, l to l

P. 89, l 22 how little] This is the reading, not only of all the authorized edd, but also of all the existing MSS. It seems probable therefore that the reading found in A, R (how much), arose from the editor's not understanding the words he found in his MS., and treating them as a mere clerical error. By how little Sir T B 'meant to observe that it is impossible for 'an humble soul' to 'contemplate her own unworthiness' without 'fear and trembling', so that St Paul needed not to have enjoined those feelings." (Wilkin)

P 89, l 30 in some sense, om A, B, and the MSS

P 90, ll 3—6 and thus can, wanting in A, B, and the MSS

P 90, l 7 zeals] Q reads zealots, as also above, p 10, l 23

P 90, l 20 And if our Saviour could object, &c] The word object here has been supposed to be used in the sense of "presenting or proposing as the object for which the Disciples were to strive," but probably the sentence is rather to be regarded as elliptical, and relating to our Saviour's throwing out against, or reproaching them with (like the Latin objecto,) their lack of faith, ἀπιστίας. So that the argument would seem to be,—If (as our Saviour implies,) even His own Disciples and Favourites had not so much as one grain of Faith, surely we (who are so much inferior to them,) can hardly be supposed to have any at all. And this is the sense given by the Latin Translator — "Si autem Discipuli ipsi, familiares illi Servatoris nostri, fidem, quantum est inapigianum, non habuerit, quod adeo ipsis objectavit, quantum tamen movendis montibus sufficisset illam ecrie," &c. &c.

P 90, l 29 mature judgments] At p 5, l 14 it is mature discernments, thus avoiding the repetition of the word judgments, which occurs again in this sentence.

P 90, l penult father, v, l c, and the MSS. and so at p 5, l 15. This reading is adopted in Q, and by Peace (v), all the other edd. have father.

P 93, l 5 as in casting account, &c] S T Coleridge (Literary Remains, vol II p 403) says, "Thu, 1, 965 But why is the 1 said to be placed below the 965?"—The only editor who has noticed the passage is Mr W. P Smith, whose note (in A A) is, "A, in the συννομιαι at Athens —Though the general sense of the passage is intelligible, the exact terms of the comparison are very obscurely expressed, and are not satisfactorily explained by either of the preceding notes. The Latin translation is equally obscure —"Sicut autem in suppurationibus, nonnunquam accidit ut aliquis insensibilis nota in solo loco positus reliquos superet, id, &c, &c No explanation has occurred or been suggested to the present Editor that is quite satisfactory and free from objection

P 93, l 19 in the integrity, &c] re in those well ordered states, which are still uncorrupted become still in their infirmity

P 93, l 30 graffs] Chapman (1) and most modern edd read graffs I add (v) l 30 a singular typographical error (only noticed here in order to prevent its being perpetuated on the other side of the Atlantic) has gras

P 94, l 3 only K, L, omitted in v to J but (as has been said before) we have no right to suppose that an important word like this was inserted in the author's lifetime without his authority See above p 56, l 27, and below, p 123, l 30

P 94, l 14 others] Q and some modern edd read another's, on the authority of C, M In v, B, we have others, which was changed in C (no doubt by the Author) into another's, thus making a grammatical mistake (viz them in the next line), and this being noticed at once caused others to be restored in D to I

P 94, l ult cannot] This is one of the Levata in C which was first corrected in Q, all previous edd having can

P 95, l 5. bushes] Alluding to the buhs or tufts of ivy, which were formerly hung by vintners at their doors Will in (1) quotes Shakespeare (Epil to As You Like It) "If it be true that good wine needs no bush," &c

P 95, l 23 hath made no mention] A, B, om no

P 95, l 23. Chiromancy] There is a short chapter on this subject among the Extracts from Browne's Common-Place Books, in Wilkin's ed of his Works, vol iv p 451 See also Pseud Epid v 24 (23), § 1

P 95, l 25 never] never, A, ever, B

P 95, l 27 those ragabond and counterfeit Egyptians] viz. the Gipsies

P 95, l 27 did after] do yet, A, B, and the MSS

P 95, l 8 portraict] so spelled in A to L, portraict, M

P 96, l 9 carelessly] carefully, A, B

P 96, l 9 humb] so spelled (not limu) in A to M

P 96 ll 11, 12 yet . . . yet, om A, B

P 96, ll 13, 14. for find] from the fatten n of every-thing in the perjeses of that kin A, B

P 96, l 17 the copy, I to I, it's copy, A to II

P 97, ll 18, 19 and cattiff, om A, B, and the MSS

P 97, l 21 pecuniary, K, L, the pecuniary, A to J

P 97, l 24. treasure, C to L treasury, A, B, and the MSS, which is adopted by Wilkin (I) with a special note, and by Gardiner (W) But treasure here is used in the sense of a receptacle for treasure as in St Math ii 11, and other places, and as θησαυρός in Greek and thesaurus in Latin See also above, p 25, l 22

P 98, l 3 fall out or condemn] Wilkin (I) reads fall out [with] or condemni

P 98, l 5 an affliction] our afflictions, A, B, and the MSS

P 98, l 13 And this] Chapman (R) and Gardiner (W) read And in this, on the authority of J

P 98, l 16 so swell] A, B, and the MSS. have so wander.

P 98, l 22 there remains not many controversies] A, B, and the MSS have there remains not one controversy The Author, in preparing C for publication, altered one controversy into many controversies, but forgot, or did not think it necessary, to alter the verb at the same time, so that remains is found in all the authorized editions, being first changed into remain in M See above, p 14, l 24.

P 98, l 22 worth, C to I, K, L, worthy, J, M, that is worth, A, B

P 98, l 23 disputed] Some modern edd have dispute, Wilkin (r) has dispute it,

P 98, l 24 inferious] A, I have in inferious

P 98, l 26 S and I in Iudium] His Judicium Locutum is an amusing speech by Sigma before the Vowels (the judges in a mock trial), complaining of Iau for interfering with other consonants "This has been very happily imitated by the [old] Spectator (Nos 78 and 80) in the persons of Who, Which, and That" (Note in Q)

P 98, l 26 How do, I to I, he doth, C to H so doth, A, I

P 98, l 27 Genitive case in Jupiter] "Whether Jovis or Jupiteris" (Note by Sn I B in ed 1643, afterwards omitted) "Secundum Priscian (lib vi p 695, ed Putch) Jupiter habet genitivum proprium Jupiteris vel Jupitris, nam genit Jovis est ab antiquo nomine Jovis" (Isidellum [vulgo Iacio lati] Lat)

P 98, l 27 Jupiter] A, P and the MSS add — "How many Synods have been assembled and angelly broke up argue about a line in Propria quæ Maribus" — Perhaps most of the readers of this book will require to be informed that "Propria quæ maribus," is the beginning of some (formerly) well-known lines in the old Eton Latin Grammar.

P 98, l 25 as this] they do, J, V

P 98, l 28 to save] to save, Q See p 48, l 19

P 98, l pen slain] A, I, have shamed, the MSS have stained

P 99, l 3 Actus his, A to I, V, and Gardiner (W), Actus his, K, I, and Pease (V), I thus, J, Actus, Q, and most modern editors (see above, p 72, l 27)

P 99, l 5 the not K, I, in the shoe, C to J, in the stroke, A, B, and the MSS

P 99, l 6 the fury, K L, in the fury, A to J

P 99, l 18 there is no reproach to the scandal of a story] meaning, perhaps, that the writer of a history escapes censure because people too readily believe the scandalous tales that he relates — or perhaps, that there is no possibility of finding fault with and refuting the scandalous tales mentioned in hist iv The Latin Version has, "indelebilis enim labes nominum adhuc et, quam historici calamus asperit"

P 99, l 30 These verses are omitted by Gardiner (W), and Fields (7), and also in one at least of the Italian edd (1644) — half of the second line is omitted in this ed.

P. 100, l 1 theu son foul] alluding to the hexameter quoted by St Paul (Tit 1 12) from Epimenides —

ῥῆγες αει ψεύσται, καὶ θηρία, γαστέρες ἀνῆμι

P. 100, l 3 Neio's] Keek supposes that the allusion is to the passage in Suetonius (which is referred to in Christian Morals, pt iii § 27, p 229) Dicente quodam in sermone communi, ἰμὲν θείῃ τῇ γαίᾳ μὲν χθρησόμενοι

'Immo', inquit, 'Ἐμοῦ ζῶντος' (Nelson c 3b) Wilkin (1), however, suggests (from the words "one blow" in the next line) that Sui L B had confounded Neio with Caligula, and was thinking of the exclamation of this latter Imperior, 'Utinam populus Romanus unum eumdem haberet' (Sueton Calig c 30)

P. 100, l 14 prophan d] common, A, B

P. 100 l 15 the life] This is one of the Frata in C, which was noticed by Wilkin (1) in his Add and Corr, but was first corrected in the text by Perce (1), all previous edd having read in life, or in the life

P. 100, l 25 prophets, I O I, p, susts A to H. Either word makes good sense, one referring to others, the other to virtue. A very similar expression occurs below p 114, ll 9, 13, and seems to be in favour of prophets in this place

P. 100, l 29 are talked] A, B and the MSS read are not talked, and omit that might power of vice

P. 100, l 10 Who looks not on us, &c.] i.e. God looks on the substance itelf, not on a visible or sensible representation emitted or projected by that substance. (Wilkin)

P. 101, l 12 helps, A to I, K, I, help, J, M

P. 101, l 24 manifest] magnify, A, B

P. 102, l 2 his own] her own, C, D. This is one of the Frata in C

P. 102, l 9 I think, wanting in A, B, and the MSS

P. 102, l 9 that apprehends, A to I, K, L, that apprehendeth, J, M

P. 102, l 15 true passion, I to I, a true passion, A to H

P. 102, l 15 is, K, I, is, A to J

P. 102, l 26 thus . . . is, I to L, thus all, A, B, thus . . . is, C to H.

P 103, l 12 multitudo . grounds, wanting in A, B, and the MSS

P 103, l 18 mine own part] my own part, L

P 103, l 20 my own nature & to L, mine own nature, A to 1. (?)

P 103, l 30 if I conceive I may love] if I confess I love, A, B, and the MSS

P 103, l pen I never yet, &c.] Sir T B was married in 1641, after he wrote this sentence, but before it was published

P 104, ll 5, 6 The figures 1, 2, 3 are found in A, B only

P 104, l 5. two natures in one person] "In Christo divina natura ac humana" (Moltke)

P 104, l 6 three persons in one nature] "In Deo, Deus Pater, Deus Filius, et Deus Spiritus Sanctus" (Id)

P 104, l 6 one soul in two bodies] In the case of intimate friends, Moltke quotes St Augustine's words in reference to one of his friends "I go sensu animam unum et animam illius unam fuisse animam in duobus corporibus" (Confess iv [6] 11)

P 104, ll 18—20 when I am with him . nearer him] omitted by Wilkin (1), and some modern edd, probably by mistake

P 104, l 25 one own selves] In A, B, it is our own selves, in C to I, K, L, the word selves was omitted by mistake and was restored to the text in J, V, when the error was detected, in the meantime the Latin translator (who made use of C, not A or B) had considered the reading our own to be faulty, and had corrected it accordingly. This is one of the very few passages in which the reading of C is inferior to A, P

P 104, l antep he that can love . . . will] he cannot love . . . that will, A, B, and the MSS

P 105, l 9 continually, om A, B, and the MSS

P 105, l 13 I never hear, &c.] The following extracts from one of Sir T B's Common Place Books (vol iv p 420 ed Wilkin) illustrate this passage, and may be taken as his practical commentary on the Apostle's precept, "pray without ceasing" (1 Thess v 17) —

"To be sure that no day pass without calling upon God in a solemn formed prayer, seven times within the compass thereof, that is, in the morning, and at night, and five times between, taken up long ago from the example of David [Ps cxxx 164] and Daniel [vi 10], and a compunction and shame that I had omitted it so long, when I heedfully read of the custom of the Mahometans to pray five times in the day

"To pray and magnify GOD in the night, and my dark bed, when I could not sleep to have short ejaculations whenever I awaked, and when the four o'clock bell¹ woke me, or my first discovery of the light, to say the collect of our liturgy, Eternal GOD, Who hast awfully brought me to the beginning of this day, &c

"To pray in all places where privacy inviteth, in any house, highway or street and to know no street or passage in this city which may not witness that I have not forgot GOD and my Saviour in it and that no parish or town, where I have been, may not say the like "To take occasion of praying upon the sight of any church, which I see or pass by, as I usually do

Since the necessity of the world, an unavoidable diversion of my profession, keep me often from church yet to take all possible care that I might never miss Sacraments upon their accustomed days

"To journey and particularly for sick patients and in general for others, where ever whatsoever, under whose care I ever and at the entrance into the house of the sick, to say, The peace and mercy of God be in this place

"After a sermon, to make a thankful giving, and deduce a blessing, and to pray for the minister

"In tempestuous weather, lightning and thunder, either night or day to pray for GOD's merciful protection upon all men, and His mercy upon their souls, bodies and goods

"Upon sight of beautiful persons, to bless GOD in His creatures, to pray for the beauty of their souls, and to enrich them with inward graces to be answerable unto the outward, upon sight of deformed persons, to send them inward grace, and enrich their souls and give them the beauty of the resurrection "

¹ A bell which toll in pursuance of the will of a person who having lost his way in a labyrinth and wandered about for a considerable time in Middle Heath near Norwich was at length directed to the city by the tolling of a bell in the Church of St Peter, Mancroft, near Sir T B's house

P. 105, l 14 though in my mouth] A, B, and the MSS add, and at a tavern

P. 105, l 15 departing spirit] A has departed spirit

P. 105, l 28 the story of the Italian] "who, after he had inveigled his enemy to disclaim his faith for the redemption of his life, did presently paymald him, to prevent repentance, and assure his eternal death" (Pseud. I. p. vii 19, § 3) The story is to be found in Bodin, De Republica v 6, p 608 B., ed Paris, 1586

P. 106, l 3 severer] reurer, A, B, and the MSS

P. 106, l 4 I can hold] A, B, and the MSS omit can

P. 106, l 13 I am one, &c.] plamet in the Latin translation, "Unus mihi videor, haud aliter ac mundus unus est"

P. 106, l 22 passion against passion] passion against passion, A to D This is one of the Errata in C

P. 106, l 25 that's angry with me, not found in A, B

P. 106, l 28 so soft] This is one of the Errata in C, which was first corrected in Q, all previous edd having too soft

P. 107, l 3 general, om A to D This is one of the Errata in C

P. 107, ll 9—22 For there are any of these, not found in A, B, and the MSS

P. 107, l 13 the temper of that lake] The story is told by Pliny, Hist. Nat. viii 4, § 5

P. 107, l 14 And] viz the Emperor Tiberius See Tacitus, Annal. vi 1

P. 107, l 25 of myself, om A to D This is one of the Errata in C

P. 107, l 26 Mortality] A, B, and the MSS add, "that I detest mine own nature, and in my retired imaginations cannot withhold my hands from violence on myself"

P. 108, l 2 our great selves, the world] the whole visible world or macrocosm, opposed to man the microcosm See Index in Microcosm

P. 108, l 5 by their particular discord] Most of the edd connect this clause with what precedes, but the Latin translator has et privatis suis inimicis pacem publicam tuent v, which seems to be the better sense

P. 108, l 12 not only of man, but of the devil] A, B, and the MSS have, not of man, but of devils

P 108, l 14 not circumscript] A to D om not This is one of the Errata in C

P 109, l 14 Chapsite] This was the great herb market in Browne's day (MS Note by Gudimer)

P 109, l 18 the opinion of Socrates] Moltke refers to Plato, Apel p 21, and Diogenes Laertius, in Vita Socr sect 16, § 32

P 109, l 20 Homer pin la way, &c] The story is found in the lives of Homer attributed to Herodotus (§ 35) and Plutarch (§ 4) and is noticed by Sir I B in Pseud Iphid vii 13

l 109 l 20 fishermen] some edd have fisherman

l 109 l 21 Aristotle Enripus] In Pseud Iphid vii 13 Sir I B treats at length of the cause and manner of Aristotle's death, and also of the tides of the Eurypus or Negro pont

P 109, l 26 untail] A I and the MSS have teach

P 109 l 27 doth but] I and some later edd have doth not This is one of the few cases in which the reading in L is inferior to that in D

P 110 l 15 and your at] This is one of the Errata in C, that was first collected in K, the previous edd having endeavour all

l 110 l 22 one] Wilm (T) and other modern edd add [married] in order to render the sentence grammatical

P 110, l 22 commend] C, D, have commend not This is one of the Errata in C

P 110, l 22, 23 and commend t ice] A, B, and the MSS have and am resolved never to be married t ice

P 110, l 25 some times and, om A, I, and the MSS

P 110, l antep I could be content] I could wish, A, B, and the MSS

l 111, l 4. cold imagination] cold imagination, A, B, imagination cold, C, D This is one of the Errata in C

P 111, l 14 sound] A, B, and the MSS have total sound

P 111, l 26 I do embrace it] A, B, and the MSS have I am bound to maintain it

l 111, l 30 the First Composer] A, B, and the MSS have my Maker

l 112, l 4. God] A, B, and the MSS. add the following sentence, which Gardiner (w) has introduced into his text — "It unties the ligaments of my frame, takes me to pieces, dilates me out of myself, and by degrees, methinks, resolves me into Heaven"

P. 112, l 9 all are naturally inclined into Rhythme] Wilkin refers to several persons who have collected instances of verses being written unconsciously, to which may be added Fabricius, Biblioth. Lat lib u c 21, § 3 The two following instances deserve a place in any similar collection that may hereafter be made In the 1st ed of Whewell's Mechanics (Cambr 1819) we find at p 44 — "Hence no force however great | can stretch a cord however fine | into an horizontal line | which is accurately straight" And Charles Lamb writing to Charles Cowden Clark (Feb 25, 1828) says — "If I get out, | I shall get stout, | and then something will out —you see I rhyme insensibly"

P. 112, l 10 Tautus] "Uicem Romam in principio reges habuere" (Note by Sir I B)

P. 112, l 11 Cicero] "In quâ me non inficio mediocriter esse" (Note by Sir I B)

P. 112, l 23 put out of temper, E, J, L (and probably the intermediate edd), out of temper, D (and perhaps A, B, C)

P. 113, l 5 any way, om L, and some other edd, Q has any of them

P. 113, l 13 as Aristotle oft-times the opinions of his predecessors] A, B, and the MSS have as Aristotle the fourth figure [in Logic], and this is the reading criticized by Sir Kenelm Digby in his Observations, p 484 (ed Bohn)

P. 113, ll, 15, 23 were not shall obey] Wilkin (1) and some others read they were not they shall obey

P. 113, l antep the Sun's] the Sun, v, B, and the MSS, Suns, J

P. 113, l antep. with all men] without all men, v, b, and the MSS

P. 114, l 15 in nature] J has in natures and the Latin translation in rerum aliarum naturis

P. 114, l 23 not the contagion] A, B, and the MSS have and the contagion

P. 114, l 26 the man without a navel] "Adam, whom I conceive to want a navel, because he was not born of a woman" (Note in one of the MSS.) See Pseud. Epul bk. v. ch 5.

P 114, l 26 yet lives in me] "Adhuc, pro dolor! vivit in me vetus homo" (De Imit Xti iii 34 § 3)

P 114, l 28. Defenda, &c] Jci Taylor says, (Serm 6, vol. iv p 418, ed. Lden) "Custodi, libera me de meipso, Deus, it was St Augustine's prayer, 'Lord, I cepe me, Lord, deliver me from myself'"

P 115, l 15 thir naturis] the natures, A, B, C This is one of the Errata in C

P 115 l 22 thirty years] Hence as Sir T B was born in 1605 the Alibi alibi was written about 1635 See p 4, l 8, and p 66, l 4

P 115, l ult I am also Atlas his shuldris] Meroving, I am a - olt in myself The following sentences ending with alphabet of man (p 116, l 18) are wanting in A, B, and the MSS

P 116, l 6 I live in the world] "hoc est, ambitio et concupiscentia totius terreni mundi non continet illam enim continet CCCC gradum (M lile)

P 116 l 19 I am as happy as am] A B, and the MSS have, I am the happy temerale, with the following addition — "I have that in me that can convert poverty into riches, adversity into prosperity I am more invulnerable than Achilles, Fortune hath not one place to hit me"

P 116 l 27 earthly] Only the other modern edd. have earthly, but earthly is a genuine word, used by Henry More See Hebraica Johns n

P 116, l 29 and] A B and the MSS add here, "with this I can be living without a crown, rich without royalty, in heaven though on earth enjoy my friend and embrace him at a distance without which I cannot behold him" There is an interesting paper on Dreams by Sir T. B, vol iii p 342, ed Bohn

P 117, l 18 it is] This is one of the Errata in C, that was first corrected in K, the earlier edd having earthly, and the Latin translation terrenus

P 117, l ult Aristotle . . . hath not thoroughly defined it] referring perhaps to De Somno, c i p 131, ed Tauchn, where he calls sleep ακίνησις, a certain immobility or quiescence.

P 118, l 3 God seems to have corrected it] viz Aristotle's definition, alluding perhaps to a passage pointed out by Moltke (De Moltke Mus ul, ii 4, vol iv p 435 sq) where he says that the muscles are not always at rest during sleep.

P 118, l 14 it is observed] I observe, A, B, and the MSS

P 118, l 20 We term sleep a death] And again, p 119, l. 23, sleep is a death, but A, B, and the MSS have, we term death a sleep

P 118, ll 22-30 'Tis indeed . . . discover it, wanting in A, B, and the MSS.

P 118, l 25 Themistocles] The story is told by Dionysius (Strateg iii 12) of Iphicrates and also of Pamphila.

P 118, l 29 Lucan and Seneca] who were allowed by Nero to choose the manner of their deaths

P 119, l 3 and take my farewell] A, B, and the MSS have "It is a fit time for devotion, I cannot therefore lay me down in my bed without an oration, and without taking my farewell"

P 119, l 5 The night is come, &c] "Compare this with the beautiful and well-known 'Evening Hymn' of Pp Ken and the e again with several of the Hymni Ecclesie especially that beginning, 'Salvator mundi, Domine,' with which Ken and Browne, both Wykehamists, must have been familiar See Bowles's Life of Ken" (Gardiner in W)

The following translation of this hymn by the late Rev Dr Kynaston appeared in the Guardian, Jan 31, 1877 —

P 120, ll 18, 19 Some have held that the earth moves
 Sir T B did not accept the Copernican system see below, p 123, l 16 In Pseud Epist i 5, p 35, ed Bohu, he says, “If any thing the earth doth move, and will not believe, with us, it standeth still, ’ &c

P 120, l 20 there is no delirium, &c] meaning, there is nothing deserving the name of delirium, when compared with the folly of avarice (Wilkin m 1)

P 120, l 22 undisputable] disputable, 1

P 120, ll 22, 23 avarice earth] The punctuation in the text is that of all the old edd, but the Italian translator evidently thought it erroneous, and (putting a full stop at “avarice,” and a comma or no stop at all at “earth,”) rendered the passage as follows — “Stygium est subterraneum idoli respectu atheum esse fateor.” And this punctuation has been adopted by Wilkin (1) and all (?) succeeding editors, but without sufficient authority or any absolute necessity. The meaning of the passage is not essentially affected by either mode of punctuation, (for of course, when Sir T B confesses that he is an atheist, no one is deceived by the paradoxical expression,) and if “delirium to that subterraneous idol” &c, is an unusual and awkward phrase “an atheist to that subterraneous idol,” &c is scarcely better

P 120 l 26 its prepared substance] The medicinal value of different preparations of gold is discussed in Pseud Epist, bk ii ch 5, § 3. The Aurum potibile was “accounted an universal remedy against all diseases” (Salmon’s New London Dis- pen ii, bk ii ch 1, § 10, 1678)

l 120, l pen Aristotle is too severe, &c] “There is an error here. Aristotle distinctly says (Eth Nicom iv 1, § 19) that true liberality consists not in the magnitude of the gift, but in the disposition of the giver, but he says (ibid iv 2, § 3) that a man with slender means cannot be munificent” (Gardiner in w)

P 121, l 6 surely poor men, &c.] A, B, and the MSS have, "I can justly boast I am as charitable as some who have built hospitals, or erected cathedrals."

P 121, l 10 I borrow occasion of charity, &c.] This is illustrated by the following extract from one of Sir T. B.'s Common Place Books (vol iv p 379, ed Wilkin) 'Question—Why do you give so much unto the poor? Answer—I have no less for what I give unto the poor, and I am also still indebted to them.'

P 121, l 12 misery] A, B, and the MSS add, "when I am reduced to the last necessity, I love to divide it with the poor."

P 121, l 14 acts of civility] act of civility, C to H

P 121, l 19 He] A, B, and the MSS have, the Almighty, which is also adopted by Will in (1) and (rindmet) (W)

P 122, ll 3—5 there is ally] A, B, and the MSS have, the soul being of the same ally

P 122, l 5 whole creation is God as well as men] meaning, who can trace their genealogy up to God, as well as we C, D, L, (and no doubt come of the other older edd) have God, as in the text, but J, I, have Gods (i.e. God's), which is adopted in Q, and in some modern edd

P 122, l 11 the prophesy of Christ] "The promise shall be fulfilled with you" (Note in one of the MSS) But it is incorrectly quoted, and should be ye have, not you shall have, so that it cannot be strictly called a "prophecy."

P 122, l antep. for s] Ir-s, A, B, C This is one of the Errata in C

P 123, l 16 Copernicus] "Who holds that the sun is the centre of the world" (Note in one of the MSS) See above p 120, ll 18, 19

P 123, l 17, nor any crumbe] om A, B, and the MSS * Wilkin (T) reads, nor any crumbe.

P 123, l 20 Aristotle] Moltke refers to Eth Eudem, i, ii, Lth Nicom., Metaph.

P. 123, l 30 out of Phrygia] om A, B, and the MSS

P 123, l 30. a tale of Boccaccio or Malispini] These words are first found in K, I, some modern edd insert them, others omit them. They are retained in this ed because (as has been said before) it is unlikely that an addition of this kind should have been made during the Author's life time without some authority. See p 94, l 3

P 124, l 2 Thyself and my dearest friends] A, B, and the MSS omit Thyself and

P 124, ll 4, 5 the humble distress . . . dance all] om A, B, and the MSS

P 124, l 12 in mine own undoing] A, B, and one MS have, in mine own damnation

P 125, l 5 Autemo] There is no doubt that this should be Pan, for the reference is to Plutarch who mentions the story of a voice being heard by some mariners at sea, crying, "The great Pan is dead" (De Defectu Orac cap 17) See l B mentions the story (with the correct name) in Pauli Epist vii 12.

P 128, l 19 Phaulus sick and pleurisy] referring to the following passage in Caesar, iii 4, 113 —

"Hic Sed qui et facies et tuus sed his Philochares,
— hic ph Dicitur tibi

"Maculento ore, nigro acuto corpore albo et oculis nigris, Subrufus, aliquantum crispus et nannus"

P. 128, l 20 an Hippocritical Face] The following is the passage which contains the description of the celebrated "Facies Hippocritical" — εἰθ' δ' ἂν τὸ τοιόνδε [δεινότατον] ῥις δέξῃα, ὀφθαλμοὶ κύβοι, κρυταροὶ ξυμπεπτωκότες, ὥτα ψυχρὰ καὶ ξυνοσταλεια, καὶ οἱ λοβοὶ τῶν ὠτων ἀπεσταμμένοι, καὶ τὸ δερμα τὸ περὶ τὸ μέτωπον σκληρόν τε καὶ περιτεταμένον καὶ καρφολέον ἔδν, καὶ τὸ χρῶμα τοῦ ξιπαντος προσώπου χλωρόν τε καὶ μέλαν ἔδν, καὶ πελὶον, ἥ μο' ἰδῶδες (Phrygiast § 2 tome ii p 112 ed. Iittic) The passage has been almost literally translated by Celsius, and closely imitated by Lucetius — "Ad ultimum vero jam ventum esse testantur nives acutæ, collapsa tempora, oculi concavi, frigida languidaque aures, et imis partibus leniter versæ, cutis enerv frontem duræ et intenter, color aut niger aut perpalidus"—(De Medic 11 6)

item, ad supremum denique tempus, Compressas nives, nixque moris incunæ
lenue cuncti cuncti tempore frigidi pellis
Duraque inhierebat iectum, frons tentabat

(De Her Nat vi 1191)

P. 128, ll. 30, 31. gratshoppes h,] is ed symbolically for summer and autumn, in allusion perhaps to Juvenal Sat. ix 69, Horace, Ep i 7 5

P. 129, l. 16. Sardium in Fi li] The unwholesome atmosphere of Sardium was as proverbial as the salubry of Proch

"Nullo fita loco possis excludere cum mors Venient in medio litura Sardinia est"

Martial, Epig iv. 60 5 (Note in w, from Γ)

P. 129, l. 16. his broad arrow] Wilkin (1) reads his, on the authority of the MS, but Browne speaks below (p. 134, l. 25) of Mont setting her seal.

P. 129, l. 18. broad arrow] In the King's forests they set the figure of a broad arrow upon trees that are to be cut down (Note in Γ)

P. 129, l. 22. resemble] The Greek word is μετα, which says Lattin in his note on the passage, "significat semblable non pour la forme, mais pour la longueur, comme le prouvent les vers d'Hésiode, (Op. et P 677-9,) auxquels l'auteur Hippocratique fait continuellement allusion"

P. 130, ll. 13, 16. sleep . . . sleep lets fall] Γ, Δ have sleep . . . sleep let fall, which is followed by Crossley (Θ) and Wilkin (1); but in what may be considered his second edition (A) Crossley reads sleep . . . sleep lets fall, which is adopted by Gardiner (w) and in the reprint of Wilkin's edition (x), and which is of course the true reading. The phrase is omitted altogether in the MS

P. 130, l. 15. death draws up, &c] This is explained by a passage from Aristotle (Probl iv. 1), in Browne's Common Places Books (vol. iv p. 361 ed Wilkin) — "Mortuus culos sursum vertit, dormiens deorsum"

P. 130, l. 16. the eyelids Γ, w, x, thus eyelids Δ, Θ, A, Γ.

P 130, l 16 strife] This is the reading of Γ , and is undoubtedly the word used by Browne, as it is also very plainly written in the MS Sloane 1862, which is not the MS from which the "Letter" was printed. In all the other editions the word strife has been substituted, but striving, not strife, is the sense required by the context, and in this sense Browne used (perhaps comed.) the word strife, after the analogy of drift, rift, lift, shift, and thrift, from drive, grow, rise, shrive, and thrive. See below, p 199, l 8.

P 130, l 23 Juno sat cross-legged] referring to the story of the birth of Hercules (Ovid, Métam ix 297 sq.) See l 13 alludes to it in David Lepid v 23 § 9, and Garden of Cyrus, ch 5, p 561, ed Bohn.

P 130, l 27 monsters, &c.] "Monstra contingunt in Medicinis" (Hippocr.) Strange and rare escapes there happen sometimes, in physick. (Note in Γ .)

P 130, l 30 physical] so spelled in Γ , Δ .

P 131, l 3 diseases] the MS has disease, and so St Matth iv 23.

P 131, l 9 make Γ , makes Δ .

P 131, l 9 long lives] MS Sloane 1862 has the longest lives, which seems a better reading.

P 131, l 27 Pliny] "Aristoteles nullum animal nisi a tu recedente exspirare affirmat observatum id multum in Gallico Oceanis, et duntaxat in homine competum"—Hist Nat ii 101 (Note in Γ .)

P 131, l 29 cob of the sea] Cf Mead, De Imperio Solis atque Lunæ, cap 2. Shakespeare, Henry Vth ii 3. (Note in Δ .)

P 131, pen the mother] To those who do not remember the mythological genealogy of the Greeks the sentence would have been plainer if the Author had written "and the mother," Sleep and Death being the children of Night, not of Chaos, as the words in the text might be taken to imply.

P 132, l 8 Scaliger] "Auriparus pendula lobus dicitur, non omnibus ex pars est auribus, non enim is qui noctu nati sunt, sed qui interdiu, maxima ex parte"—Comment in Aristot "de Animal" i St p 73, ed 1619. (Note in Γ .)

P 132, l 10 most animals Γ , animals Δ .

P 132, l 21 That Charles the Fifth, &c.] This and the following sentence are found in the Extracts from Browne's Common Place Books, vol. iii p. 350, ed. Bohn

P 132, l. 27 Fever] All the edd have fiast, which hardly makes sense, but in Browne's Common Place Books (vol. iii p. 350, ed. Bohn) there is the following passage, which supplies the true reading — "Antipater, that died on his birthday, had an anniversary fever all his life upon the day of his nativity," &c. The fact is mentioned by Pliny, Hist. Nat. vii. 52, and Valerius Maximus, i. 8 § 16

P 133, l. 16 sixty-five F, Δ, Λ, other modern edd have and sixty-five

P 133, l. 18 tail of the snake, &c.] According to the Egyptian Hieroglyphick (Note in F)

P 133, l. 21 a remarkable coincidence] This "remarkable coincidence" happened in our Author's case, he himself died on the 76th anniversary of his birthday. (Note in W)

P 133, l. 28 that story, &c.] The passage is quoted in the Extracts from Browne's Common Place Books, vol. iii p. 365, ed. Bohn.

P 134, l. 3 Dante] Dante, describing a very emulated countenance, says —

"Who reads the name
Of man upon his forehead, there the M Has traced most plainly," Purg. c. viii. 2^o.

alluding to the conceit that the letters O M O may be traced in the human face. Cf. Hydriot, chap. 3, p. 32, ed. Bohn (Note in W)

P 134, l. 8. sixta ceruice] i. e. by six persons (Wilkin)

P 134, l. 12 Omnibonus, &c.] This passage is mentioned also in Sir T. Browne's Common Place Books, vol. iv p. 391, ed. Wilkin

P 134, l. 13 behind the ear] He specifies the left ear, on the authority of Avicenna, Canon, iii. 16. i. 2, vol. i. p. 811 b., ed. 1608

P 134, l 25 Mortu] The deity of Death or Fate (Note in F) See Aulus Gellius, Noct Att iii 16, § 11

P. 134, l 27 Caricatura] When men's faces are drawn with resemblance to some other animals, the Italians call it, to be drawn in Caricatura (Note in F)

P 135, l 15 Mozzillons] The Editor has not been able to learn anything about this word, though he has consulted very competent persons both in France and England — neither has he been able to find the passage in Pichot here referred to

P 135, l 19 The following addition from MS (Sloane, 1862) is given by Wilkin — “Though hairs afford but fallible conjectures, yet we cannot but take notice of them. They grow not equally on bodies after death, w men's skulls afford moss as well as men's, and the best I have seen was upon a woman's skull, taken up and laid in a room after twenty-five years' burial. Though the skin be made the place of hairs, yet sometimes they are found on the heart and inward parts. The plica, or glued locks, happen unto both sexes, and being cut off will come again, but they are wary of cutting off the same, for fear of headache and other diseases.”

P 135, l 30 Pyrrhus] His upper and lower jaw being solid, and without distinct rows of teeth (Note in F) This is rather an exaggeration of Plutarch's statement in his Life of Pyrrhus, cap 3

P 136, l 8 three tall over his teeth] never live to three-score years (Note in F)

P. 136, l 11 but fragments of lines which I have enquired into] And of which he has given an account in his Unburial, chap 2, and Brampton Lines, &c., vol iii p 13, 54, 57, ed Bohn

P 136, l 15 juer] Wilkin gives in this place the following paragraph from the MS — “Affection had so blinded some of his nearest relations, as to retain some hope of a posthumous life, and that he might come to life again, and therefore would not have him confined before the third day. Some such rubbishes I conceive we find in story, and one or two I remember myself, but they lived not long after. Some contingent immunities are to be hoped in diseases wherein the lamp of life is but puffed out and seemingly choked, and not where the oil is quite spent and exhausted. Though Nonnus will have it a fever, yet of what disease Lazarus first died is uncertain from the text, as his second death from good authentick history, but since some persons conceived to be dead do sometimes return again unto evidence of life, that miracle was wisely managed by our Saviour, for had he not been dead four days and under corruption, there had not wanted enough who would have cavilled the same, which the Scripture now puts out of doubt. and tradition also confirmeth, that he lived thirty years after, and, being pursued by the Jews, came by sea into Provence, by Marseilles, with Mary Magdalen, Marcellus, and others where remarkable places carry their names unto this day. But to arise from the grave to return again into it, is but an uncomfortable revivion Few men would be content to cradle it once again, except a man can lead his second life better than the first, a man may be doubly condemned for living evilly twice, which were but to make the second death in Scripture the third, and to accumulate in the punishment of two bad lives at the last day. To have performed the duty of corruption in the grave, to live again in it from in death, and are like our Saviour for ever, are the only satisfactions of well-weighted expectations."

P 136, l 17 the disease of his country, the Rickets] This disease was formerly called "Morbus Anglicus," because, if not entirely unknown before the time of Whistler and Glisson, (See Sprengel, Hist. de la Méd., tome v p 598, &c) it was first brought prominently into notice by them. Whistler (De Morbo Puerili, &c, Jugd Bat 1645, 4to) gave it the pretentious and unwieldy designation of "Pneulo splanchno-osteo-cace" which probably no one ever used but himself, Glisson (De Rachitide, &c, Lond 1650, 12mo) was content with the more modest and convenient term, Rachitis (or Rhachitis), which, though by no means perfectly unobjectionable, was adopted by most nosologists, and has maintained its place in Latin works to the present day (See Notes and Queries, 6th series, vol 1 1880)

P 136, l 19 many have been become] Wilkins (T) and Gardiner (W) read many have become The MS has I have seen many to have become.

P 136, l. 21 the disease is scarce so old, &c] Adopting Whistler's and Glisson's opinion that it was first heard of about

1620. The name does not appear in the London Bills of Mortality before 1634. (See A Collection of the Yearly Bills of Mortality, &c., Lond. 1759 4to.)

P 136, l 26. Rouigno, &c] This statement is found also in his Common Place Book, vol iv p 395, ed Wilkin.

P 136, l 27 since ten years ago, &c] This passage enables us to decide with tolerable certainty that the former portion of the Letter to a Friend was written about 1672. Duloir's Travels were published in 1654 and the I B in a passage first added in the sixth ed of the Psul Epit (1672) speaks of his description of the Lunipus 'about twenty years ago' (vol 13, vol ii p 240, ed Boivin).

P 136, l 29 within it is that the deaths increased among us] The subject is discussed by Girault in his Observations on the Bills of Mortality (chap 3), with which little book Sir T B was probably well acquainted. Notwithstanding the prophecy that the disease would disappear entirely in consequence of the Restoration (see John Bius Optima Carolina, 1661) the number of deaths attributed to Rickets in the London Bills of Mortality increased from 14 in 1634 to 570 in 1684 after which time it gradually diminished, and fell in 1755 to 6.

P 136, l inter the King's Evil, &c] When persons were touched for the King's Evil, a gold medal was hung round each patient's neck.

P 136, l penult gro us moi en un an] The number of persons touched during a part of the reign of Charles II is said to have amounted to 92,107. See Douglas's Criticism of Miracles, p 204, ed 1754.

P 137, l 3 ἰσὺν ὁσὸν] Ἀσφαλεστάτος καὶ δῆσιμος, securissimè et facillimè Hippoc [I p d i 3, § 11 t ii p 674, edit Iritre] "Πρὸς ἑβὲ quartina iusto sonat campana." (Note in Γ)

P 137, l 4 The following paragraph is given here by Wilkin from the MS — "Some I observed to wonder how in his consumptive state his hair held on so well, without that considerable deficiency which is one of the first symptoms in such diseases, but they took not notice of a mark in his face, which, if he had lived, was a probable security against baldness, (if the observation of Aristotle will hold, that persons are less apt to be bald who are double chin'd,) nor of the varicose and knotted veins in his legs, which they that have, in the same author's assertions, are less disposed to baldness (According as Theodorus Gazi renders it though Scaliger renders the text otherwise)"

P 138, l 1 exuccous] Wilkin. (1) and Gardiner (w) spell the word exuccous, but Browne elsewhere also writes exuccous See Johnson's Dict

P 138, l 3 I had often found] So A Γ (Note in Γ)

P 138, l 13 Cardan] Cardan in 11 Iconum Podagrica [Opera, vol 1 p 224, ed 1663] reckoneth this among the Dona Podagrica, that they are delivered the chy from the pthys and stone in the bladder (Note in Γ) This p^r sage is also mentioned in Sir I B's Common Place Books, vol iv p 398, ed Wilkin

P. 142, l. 17 desipency] All former edd have discipum, but no doubt desipency (that is desipientia,) is the word used by Browne. Flacie does not appear to be any such word as desipuntia. See below, p. 151 l. 14.

P. 143, l. 21 Democritism] All the editions except Wilkin's (T, X) have Democratism, which is evidently a clerical or typographical error for Democritism, i.e. the laughing philosophy of Democritus.

P. 144, l. 1 Not to fear Death, &c] Summum nec metuas diem nec optas [Matrui, Epig x 47, l. ult.] (Note in F.)

P. 144, l. 6 the second life of Lazarus] Who upon some accounts, and tradition, is said to have lived thirty years after he was raised by our Saviour Baronius (Note in F.) Gardiner (W) refers to St Epiphanius, Hæres lxxvi c. 39. See above, p. 297, l. 8, &c.

(Note in A.)

P 146, l 25 The rest of the Letter is omitted by Crossley in Θ, but not in A.

P 146, l ult The rest of the Letter is omitted by Wilkin (1) and Gardiner (w).

P 147, l 1 Tread softly, &c] All the remaining sections with the exception of a few sentences, are found in the Christian Morals, the references to the pages are given in the margin. Whatever explanatory notes are required will be found appended to the Christian Morals.

P 147, l 1 funambulous tract] In the parallel passage (p 161, l 2) the word is funambulatory, which would be more applicable to a person than to a trail. Hence (if we suppose that Sir I. B. deliberately altered the word when transcribing the passage as considering funambulous to be more correct,) we may perhaps infer that the Letter to a Friend was written after the Christian Morals. See below on p 162 l 1 interp.

P 147, l 8 of me and closer] Crossley (A) has obscure and closer, but Γ, Δ have obscure and closer, and so also below, p 163 l 6. In the same way Sir T. B. has at p 90 l pen I aimed and lost where we might have expected must learn.

P 148, l 25 me] Γ, Δ, A have mitre, but mite is undoubtedly the true reading. See below, p 163, l 22.

P 149, l 17 bo cellous unto themselves] below p 164, l pen, it is bo cellous unto others, which is probably the true reading.

P 150, l 4 natural] below, p 165 l pen, it is almost natural, which is probably the better reading.

P 150, l 9 what thou may'st b] below, p 166, l 4 what is omitted, which seems the true reading, unless we change w into r and read that.

P 151, l 2 motions] below, p 166, l 19 it is motives, which is probably the true reading.

P 151, l 14 [resipiscency] This (from resipiscencia) is undoubtedly the word used by Browne, which was carelessly printed resipiscency, after his death (See above p 142, l 17) There is no such word as resipiscencia

P 153, l 15 [of designs] all the edd have to designs, which has been corrected from the parallel passage, p 171, l 3

P 153, l 19 [actions] below, p 171, l 7, it is achement actions, which seems the better reading

P 153, l 22 Zeno's Ann.] F, Δ have Zeno, Ann., which Grosley (A) corrects See below, p 171, l 11.

P 154, l 4 [unto thyself] at p 162, l 23, it is within thyself.

P 154, l 26 [times] at p 231, l 8, it is time, which seems the better reading

P 154, l. ult [in us] at p 231, l 12, it is of us

P 159, l 2 David, fourth Earl of Leicham had married Miss Littleton's niece Frances Littleton the daughter of her sister Anne (See Wilkin's Suppl Memoir of Sir T B, in Notes, vol. 1 pp lxx, lxx, lxxi, ed Pohn)

P 159, l ult Elizabeth Littleton was the wife of George, youngest son of Sir Thomas Littleton, one of the ancestors of the present Lord Lyttelton (See Wilkin's Suppl Memoir p lxx)

P 160, l 6 [who lived with his father when it was composed by him] This fact will not much help us to determine the date of the Christian Morals, as she did not leave her father's house till 1680, or about two years before his death (See Wilkin's Suppl Memoir p lxx), and there is reason to believe that this work was written about ten years before that date

P 160, l 17 [Arch Bishop of Canterbury] Abp Tenison, when Vicar of St Martin's in the Fields, London, had edited some of Sir T B's works

P 161, l 1 Of the first nineteen sections all except three (§§ 6, 12, 17) are found in the latter part of the Notes to a Friend, in the margin of which are given the references to the pages of the Christian Morals

The marginal ab tract of the different sections is taken (with a few alterations,) from Peter's edition (1)

P 161, l 15 [sincere erudition] ἀληθινὴ Παιδεία, cap 15 There are in this section several other allusions to the Pinax, viz, narrow gate, asperous way, purifying potion, &c. (See capp. 18, 19)

P 161, l 17 hull] Ξ has hall, which was corrected in Π

P 161, l ult from Luna to Manilla] "Through the Pacifick Sea, with a constant gale from the East" (Note in Γ)

P. 162, l 15 an oration] "a petty and minor kind of triumph" (Note in Γ and Ξ)

P. 162, l 23 Wilkin gives in a note, as a fitting continuation to this section, the following extract from Mr Sloar, 1848 — "To restrain the use of extravagances, and timely to ostracise the most overgrowing enormities, makes a calm and quiet state in the dominion of ourselves, for vices have their ambitions, and will be above one another. But though many may possess us, yet is there commonly one that hath the dominion over us, one that lordeth over all, and the rest remain slaves unto the humour of it. Such towering vices are not to be temporally exorcised, but perpetually exiled, or rather to be saved like the ranl poppies in Luquens garden, and made short by the head, for the shrute arrows are to be let fly against all such imperious vice, which, neither enduring priority or equality, Cæsarian or Pompeian primity, must be absolute over all, for these opprobriously denominated vices, and chiefly condemn us hereafter, and will stand in capital letters over our heads as the titles of our sufferings."

P 162, l 28 Cato] "The Censor who frequently unfounded (and by Pope amongst others,) with Cato of Utica" (Note in Π) But Pope here is right, and the Annotator is himself in error. The confusion as to the principal actor in this scandalous transaction dates from the time of Festulian, who (says Bayle, art. Mortuus, note N) "attribue a Caton le Censeur ce qu'il falloit attribuer a Caton d'Utique (l'p'oe, e 39)" See the whole story in Plutarch, Cato Min., capp 25, 52

P 162, l intep Sisters of Darius] It was not the Sisters of Darius, but his daughters, who were taken prisoners at the battle of Iesus, and so it is stated above, p 148, l 21 (See Justin Hist., xi 9, and other authorities) From this discrepancy it may be inferred, (though not of course with absolute certainty,) that the Christian Morals, which contain the error, were written earlier than the Letter to a Friend, in which it is found corrected

P 162, l ult Orison] "Who is said to have mutilated himself" (Note in F and E)

P 163, ll 1, 22 loose] This is not a mere printer's mistake for lose See below, p 186, l 6, and the Index

P 164, l 3 Charon expects no more, &c] viz one obolus from each soul ferried across the Styx

P 164, l 19 far not, &c] In one of Browne's Common Place Books (vol iv p 379, ed Willm) there is this passage — "Question Why do you give so much unto the poor?" Answer I have no less for what I give unto the poor, and I am also still indebted to them

P 164, l 21 Ides] The Ides were the time when money lent out at interest was commonly repaid So Horace, I poet 2, in fine — "Idoneator Alphius [Summedegit Idibus pecuniam,] Quereit Calen is ponere" (Note in II)

P 165, l 19 their own death themselves] Above, p 149, l 11, it is our own death ourselves, which is the better reading

P 165, l 27 Stand magnetically] That is, with a position as immovable as that of the magnetical axis, which is popularly supposed to be invariably parallel to the meridian, or to stand exactly north and south (Note in II)

P 165, l 28 where . . . there] All former edd. have when there, which is hardly sense, and should no doubt be corrected by p 149, l pen

P 166, l 8 the best of the bad, &c] "Optimi malorum pessimi bonorum" (Note in E)

P 166, l 11 consequence] above, p 150, l 25, we find consequences, which seems the better reading

P 166, l pen Virtues and Vices] Wilkin gives the following extract from MS Sloane, 1847 — "Think not modesty will never gild its like; fortitude will not be degraded into audacity and foolhardiness, liberality will not be put off with the name of prodigality, nor frugality exchange its name with avarice and solid parsimony, and so our vices be exalted into virtues."

P. 167, l. 5 a new Ethics] later edd omit a, but without any necessity

P. 167, l. 12 more than eight - all escape] Alluding to the flood of Noah (Wilkin)

P. 168, l. 7 the short madness] "Ira furor brevis est" Horace, l. p. 12, 62 (Note in F)

P. 168, l. 8 Socialis]

"Dulceque veni vicinus Hymetto, (Qui primum receptæ rarâ inter viridi ciceri tæ Accusatori nunc ille dare

Juvenal vi. 185 (quoted in D)

P. 168, l. 13 in Capricorn] "Even when the days are shortest" (Note in F and E)

P. 168, l. 14 in Ashes] Above, p. 152, l. penult it is, in ceteris.

P. 168, l. 16 Tower of Oblivion] "Alluding unto the 'Tower of Oblivion' [φράβριον τῆς Ἀθήνης] mentioned by Irenæus [De Bello Pers. 15], which was the name of a lower of imprisonment among the Persians, whoever was put therein, was (as it were) buried alive and it was death for any but to name him" (Note in F and E)

P. 168, l. 22 without any sense of hope] Above, p. 153, l. 3, it is, without any sense of hope, which seems a better reading

P. 168, l. 23 one name with that in an spirit] viz. ὁ διάβολος, the columniator (Note in W)

P. 168, l. antep. Aristotle's true gentleman] "See Aristotle's Ethics [iv. 3], chapter Of Magnanimity" (Note in F and E)

P. 168, l. antep. St Paul's noble Christum] Alluding probably to Rom. viii.

P. 169, l. 14 the Trisagion] "Holy, holy, holy" (Note in F and E)

P. 169, l. 27 de oured] Wilkin adds this passage from one of the MSS — "Whether there hath not been a passage from the Mediterranean into the Red Sea, and whether the Ocean at first had a passage into the Mediterranean by the Straits of Hercules"

P. 169, l ult. Adiaste and Nemesis] "The powers of vengeance" (Note in Π) But Adiastea, Ἀδραστεια, was not the name of a separate deity, but only a synonym or epithet of Nemesis. And therefore (as Sir I. B.'s learning was not only very extensive, but also in general very accurate,) it seems not improbable that he wrote, not Adiaste and Nemesis, but Adiastean Nemesis. He is rather fond of this sort of epithets, as "Caesarian conquest," 213. 12, "Ciceronian poets," 142. 3, "Homerican Mars," 213. 4, and it will be borne in mind that the Christian Muses were not published till after his death, and therefore not under his own supervision.

P. 170, l 20. em] At p. 154, l 16, it is one temple, which seems the better reading.

P. 170 l antep. in Epicycle] An epicycle is a small revolution made by one planet in the wider orbit of another planet. The meaning is, "I let not ambition form thy circle of action, but move upon other principles, and let ambition only operate as something extrinsic and adventitious." (Note in Π)

P. 170, l antep. and not so much] Above p. 153, l 10, it is, or narrow circuit, which appears the better reading.

P. 171, l 11. Zeno's King] The Stoicks [here repeated by their founder, Zeno,] illustrated their doctrines by describing an ideal personage, whom they called "The Wise Man", and he (they said) was the only King, the only Dictator, the only Rich Man. See Cicero, De Finib. iii. 22, Horace, Sat. i. 3. (Note in w.)

P. 171 l 26. the twelve muses] Alluding to the story of Ulysses, who [Odys. vi. 17,] stopped the ears of his companions with wax when they passed by the Sirens. (Note in Π)

P. 172, l 27. Let ophymurids, &c.] Take note of God's mercies day by day, not merely every four years. (Note in w.)

P. 173, l 3. nor call for many hour glasses] That is, "do not speak much or long in justification of thy faults." The ancient pleaders talked by a clepsydra, or measure of time [by water]. (Note in Π)

P. 173, l. 17. Thilus] Θ, a theta, inscribed upon the judge's tessera, or ballot, was a mark for death [θάνατος], or capital condemnation. (Note in Π)

P. 173, l 18. no nocent, &c.] Alluding to Juvenal, [Sat. xii. 2,] "Sei iudice nemo nocens absolvitur." (Note in Π)

P 174, l. 7 though we behold our own blood] that is, though we bleed when we are wounded, though we find in ourselves the imperfections of humanity (Note in Π)

P 174, l. 7 think ourselves the sons of Jupiter] "As Alexander the Great did" (Note in Ξ)

P 174, l. 13 but then pericci] that is, only placed at a distance in the same line (Note in Π)

P 174, l. 21 wild horses of Plato] Alluding to the famous myth in which Plato describes the soul under the figure of two winged horses (one black, the other white,) and a charioteer (Ihadsus, pp. 246, 253)

P 175, l. 19 contingencies] So spelled in Ξ, other edd. have emergences. See below p. 176, l. 3, emergences

P 175, l. 25 the Inscription on the wall] The short sentence written on the wall of Belshazzar. See Daniel, ch. v (Note in Π)

P 176, l. 3 emergences] So spelled in Ξ, other edd. have emergences. See above, p. 175, l. 19 contingencies.

P 176, l. 19 Stand out of my sun] This was the answer made by Diogenes to Alexander, who asked him what he had to request (Note in Π). See Plutarch, Life of Alexander, ch. 14

P 177, l. 23 the Census of all] The book in which the Census, or account of every man's estate, was registered among the Romans (Note in Π)

P 178, l. 25 tempus] Modern edd. have tempus, but with our absolute necessity

P 179, l. 13 negator] Wlkin gives the following extract from Mr. Stowe, 1885 — "But at this distance and elongation we dearly know that depravity hath ever pierced us, corruption entered like oil into our bone, [P. civ. 17] imperfections upbraid us on all hands, and ignorance stand pointing at us in every corner in nature. We are unknowing in things which fall under cognition, yet drive at that which is above our comprehension. We have a slender knowledge of ourselves, and much less of God, wherein we are like to rest until the advantage of another being, and therefore in vain we seek to satisfy our souls in close apprehensions and piercing theories of the Divinity even from the divine word. Meanwhile we have a happy sufficiency in our own natures, to apprehend His good will and pleasure, it being not of our concern or capacity from thence to apprehend or reach His nature, the divine revelation in such points being not framed unto intellectuals of earth. Even the angels and spirits have enough to admire in their sublimer created natures, admiration being the act of the creature and not of God, Who doth not admire Himself." The last three sentences are also given by Wilkin among the "Extracts from Common Place Books," vol. iv. p. 388.

P. 179, l. 16, for - e consider not, &c.] The next four sentences are found in one of Brownes Common Place Books (vol. iii. p. 355, ed. Bohn).

P. 179, l. 19. Doxia] See "Extracts from Common Place Books," vol. iii. p. 355, ed. Bohn. The story is told by Cardan, Incognitum, sub fin., p. 225, in Opera, tom. i. ed. 1663.

P. 180, l. 1. Socrates and Cardan] Socrates and Cardan (perhaps in imitation of him,) tall ed. of an attendant spirit or genius, that hinted from time to time how they should act. (Note in Π.)

P. 180, l. 8. the I phthalial Salt] The Salt of Wisdom, the waters of which being very salt, and the effect thereof, will scarcely suffer an animal to sink. (Note in Π.) See Petrus et Episcopus vii. 15.

P. 181, l. 15. trains not Orontes into Tiber] "In Tiberini defluxit Orontes," Orontes has brought his stream to the Tiber, says Juvenal [Sat. iii. 62], speaking of the confluence of foreign rivers to Rome. (Note in Π.)

P. 181, l. 29. thou hast an alarm in thy breast] The motion of the heart, which beats about sixty times in a minute or [rather] the motion of respiration, which is nearer to the number mentioned. (Note in Π.)

P. 182, l. 14. twenty thousand miles] More correctly twenty five thousand.

P. 182, l. 18. - all with leaden sandals] Referring probably to the ἴχθυος μόλυβοινοιο and ὑποθηματίον μόλυβδοιο mentioned by Hippocrates, De Art. § 62, tome iv. p. 266. ll. 6, ult., ed. Little.

P. 183, l. 2. others obliquely] Π has a comma at obliquely, which is followed by Wilkin (1), Perce (v) and Gardiner (w) place it after others, which seems the better position for it. In E there is no comma after either word, and this punctuation is adopted in the text, that the reader may be free to read the sentence as he pleases.

P 183, l. 5 Ille niger est, hunc tu, Romane, caveto [Horace Sat 1 4, 85] (Note in Ξ)

P. 183, l. 10 incharitableness] Wilkin gives in a note the following passage from MS Shane, 1847 — "They who thus closely and whisperingly enluminare the absent living, will be apt to strayn their voyee and to be loud enough in infamy of the dead, wherein there should be a civil amnesty and an oblivion concerning those who are in a state where all things are forgotten, but Solon will make us ashamed to speak evil of the dead, a crime not actionable in Christian governments, yet hath been prohibited by Pagan laws and the old sanctions of Athens. Many persons are like many rivers whose mouths are at a vast distance from their head, for their words are as far from their thoughts as Canopus from the head of Nilus. These are of the former (?) of those men, whose punishment in Dante's Hell [c. xx.] is to look evilly tingly backward. If you have a mind to laugh at a man, or dispraise the judgment of any one, set him a talking of things to come, or events of hereafter contingency, which elude the cognition of such an [us?] arrogate the knowledge of them, whereas the ignorant pretend not, and the learned impudently full, wherein men seem to talk but as babes would do in the womb of their mother, of the things of the world which they are entering into."

P 183, l. 12 plaudite] Plaudite was the term by which the ancient theatrical performers saluted a clap. (Note in Π) Will in (t) has plauant,—possibly by mistake,—but Belin reprint (s) has the same word.

P. 183, l. 17 Bless not thyself, &c] "As Socrates did Athens, a place of learning and civility." (Note in Ξ)

P 184, l. 3 Astræa] "Astræa, Goddess of Justice and consequently of all virtue" (Note in Ξ)

P 184, l. 15 a hand to burn] Like Mutius Scaevola [I ivy, II. 12] (Note in Π)

P 185, l. 10 the strength of desire is in its rarity] "Voluptates commendat rarior usus" [Juvenal, Sat xi ult.] (Note in Π)

P 185, l. antep Epicurus himself, &c] In another place (Works, vol. iv. p. 306, ed. Wilkin) Sir T. B says, 'a centum aviculari unâ patellâ congestis esurit. Escopus, oleribus et caseo satiatur Epicurus." The personal simplicity and frugality of the Philosopher are well known, and are specially commended by Sir T. B. in Pseud. Epid. vii 17, § 8. The Cytherian chest noted in the text comes from Diogenes Laertius (x 6, § 11), the dish of onions perhaps from Juvenal (xiii 123); probably there is no ancient writer who mentions both these simple luxuries.

P 185, l penult. Jupiter's brain] "Cerebrum Jovis, for a delicious bit" (Note in E). In another place (Notes, vol. iv p. 307, ed. Willm.), Browne says, "cum quidquid delicatulum, est cerebrum Jovis [veteres] dicebant." See Athenaeus, Deipnos, xii 9, p. 514. Διὸς ἐγκέφαλος.

P 185, l ult. Cytherianian chase] This should be Cythman, but the mistake is not Sir T. B.'s, for the old reading in Diogenes Laertius (Vit. Philos. x 6, § 11) is τῆς τυροῦ κυθρίδου, a word without meaning, which in the best modern ed. is corrected to Kythion, the island of Cythrus being famous for its cheese. (See Smith's Dict. of Gr. and Rom. Geogr.)

P 185, l ult. tongue of a glutinialis] A dish used among the luxurious of antiquity. (Note in E.)

P 186, l 5. Mellus] "Metellus his motions [ontifical supper, the great variety whereat is to be seen in Macrobius]" [Saturn. ii 9] (Note in E). It is more probable that the supper was not given by Metellus Pius, but only minutely recorded by him.

P 186, l 8. Nero] "Nero in his flight" Sueton. [Vit. Nero c. 48] (Note in E.)

P 186, l 10. his snowed water] See Pliny, Hist. Nat. xxvi 23.

P 186, l 11. Calda] "Caldæ gelidæque minister" (Note in E). "Tepid water, with which the ancients tempered their wine" (Note in W.)

P 186, l 30. Quotation mistakes, &c.] Most of the remainder of this Section is found in the "Extracts from Common Place Books" (vol. iii p. 350 Bohn's ed.)

P 187, l 3. De Gloria] The mistake was pointed out by Aulus Gellius, Noct. Att. xv. 6. See Homer, Il. vii 89.

P 187, l 4. ascribed] In the "Extracts" it is ascribed, and the present tense is used below, mistaketh, seems, ll 6, 8, but Sir T. B. probably altered the tense, in consideration of the "De Gloria" being a lost work, of which only a few fragments remain.

P 187, l. 5 Plautus] Somewhere in the Amphitruon

P 187, l. 7 Who call that, &c] Instead of this sentence, the "Extracts" have the following — "I know, who was well seen (?) in Homer, denieth the art of picture in the ἱστορίων [Hist Nat xxv 6], whereas it is plainly said (II 2 483) that Vulcan engraved in the arms of Achilles the earth and stars of heaven

P 187, l. 8 Apollonius Sidonius] See Carmin 1 (ix) 20 (ed P 11, 1879)

I 187, l. 16 I shall not presently say] The "Extracts" insert the following — he was but a weak historian because he commonly exemplified in Cæsar Borgia and the petty princes of Italy or that he' &c

I 187, l. 26 To tell you &c] This and the following sentence are found in the "Extracts," vol iii pp 354 355 ed Bohn

I 187, l. 27 Trismegistus] "In Tilili Smaragdina (Note in 2)

I 187 ult Scaliger &c] See D. Sullii ad Cæsarem Exerc 236, § 1 "he says age is unum ing — "Iulicheriumum us l ititium . . . Nihil (inquit,) Iulcherium inter oculos Cæsaris exiecit supra modum, indecora magnitudine Iostrium folum Cæsaris foedisimam Lingua nihil turpius Quinetium fuscum, sine cineribus color tincti, nitor nullus, &c

P 188, ll 9, 15 Falsch old ant Truth, &c Many things are known &c] See "Extracts," vol iii pp 354, 355, ed Bohn

P 188 l. 21 Sibyl's leaf] On which the Sibyl wrote her oracular answers (Note in II) Virgil, Aen iii 444

P 188, l. 23 appearances] altered in recent edd to appearances

P 188, l. 30 the genealogy of Hector] Alluding probably to the mythological questions with which the Emperor Valerianus used to puzzle his grammarians, "Quæ Mater Heculæ?" &c (See Sueton in Vita Tiberii c 70)

P 188, l. antep King of France] "Lewis the Eleventh Qui nescit dissimulare, nescit regnare" (Note in 2) Jeremy Taylor quotes this saying in his Sermons (vol iv p 531, 1 den s ed) and the editor calls it in his note, "a proverb of the Emperor Sigismund (Æneas Sylvius In Pauoribus lib 1 proce 11 § 17 p 473, in Opera, ed. Basil 1571) adopted by Lewis XI of France, who would allow his son to learn no Latin but those five words, says Paulus Æmylius, De Reb Gest Franc lib v p 358¹ ed Basil 1601.

P 189, l 31 that obscured Virgin] viz Truth alluding to the saying that Truth lies hid at the bottom of a well

P 190, l 4 Pythagoras]

Ipsæ ego (אני נמי) Tr ja u tempore | ell

Panthoidea Luphorbus eran [O d Metast v 10]

(Note in E)

P 190, l 6 six thousand] The word 'years' has probably been omitted by mistake See Note on p 72 l 27

P 190, l 10 Sul i s Lh um] "Who comforted himself [De Senect cap ult] that he should there converse with the old Philosophers. (Note in E)

P 190, l 24 to sing the same song] "Canilena i eraden canis" (science, P iii iii 2, 10)

P 190, l ult It is nullum in se] This sentence, and also some others at the end of this section, are to be found in the "Extracts," viz iii p 355 ed 1601

P 191, l 3 She is] אלהה (Note in E) His travels were translated into English by John Hel in 1662, so that the Christian M s were written later than that date

P 191, l 24 sefrestion and Gls me] In the "Extracts" it is cont n b it i and phil oph

P 191, l antep it just in E] Imusque dies delit extrenum [Senect Cl 958] (Note in E)

P 192, l 11 f m n] Instead of the sentence, MS St m, 154 has the following, which is given by Walkin in a note — hens n sects, and nations, mainly settling upon some Christian particulars, which they conceive most acceptable unto G l and promoting the interest of their inclinations, parties and divisions every one reckoning and preferring himself by the particulars wherein he excelleth and decrying all other, though highly eminent in other Christian virtues

P 192, l 16 the will] The same MS adds, "whereas, if men would not seek themselves abroad, if every one would judge and reckon himself by his worst, and others by the better parts, this deception must needs vanish, humility would gain ground, charity would overpread the face of the Church, and the fruits of the Spirit not be so thinly found among us. This was the imperfection," &c

P 194, l 29 Cupid, &c] The rest of this section is found in the "Extracts from Common Place Books" (vol iii p. 352, ed Bohn), but without any variation of importance

P 195, l 31. beginnings] Wilkin gives, in a note the following from MS Sloane, 1874 — "Wisely stepping about the meridian of their felicities, and unwilling to hazard the favours of the descending wheel, or to fight downward in the setting arch of fortune

'Sic longus ævum
Deseruit incentes, animos et vitæ superstes
Fortuna. Nisi summa dies cum fine bonorum Affluit, et celeri præverit instans levis, Dedecori est fortuna prior. Quiquamne secundis Irresere se satis audet, nisi morte parata?'

Lucan, 7 " [viii 27]

P 195, l pen forgetting the very essence of Fortune, &c.] See the story of Polycrates and Amasis Herod iii 40 sq (Note in W)

P 196, l 6. first quadrate] that is, in the first part of our time, alluding to the four quadra-figures of the moon (Note in II)

P 196, l 10 to become acutely miserable, &c] Alluding probably to Dante's lines,

"Nessun maggior dolore
Che ricordarsi del tempo felice Nella miseria" — (Inferno, v 121)

or perhaps the earlier words of Boethius (quoted by Cary in his note on the above passage), "In omni universitate fortunæ infelicitissimum genus est infortunium, fuisse felicem" (De Consol Philos ii 4)

P. 196, ll 14—18 And thus state of II. II] Instead of this passage, MS Sloane, 1874, has the following, which is given by Wilkin in a note — "And this is the observable course, not only in this visible stage of things, but may be feared in our second beings and everlasting selves, wherein the good things past are recorded by the bad to come and many to whom the embraces of fortune are open here, may find Abraham's arms shut unto him hereafter, which wakes serious consideration, not so much to pity as envy some men's infelicities, wherein, considering the circle of both our beings, and the succession of good unto evil, תַּיִתוּמִים מֵרַב sometimes prove courteous, and malice mercifully cruel. Wherein, notwithstanding, if swelling beginnings have found uncomfortable conclusions, it is by the method and justice of Providence equalizing one with the other, and reducing the sum of the whole unto a mediocrity by the balance of extremities, that in the sum the felicities of great ones hold a truth and parity with most that are below them, whereby the minor favourites of fortune which incur not such sharp transitions, have no cause to whine, nor men of middle fates to murmur at their indifferencies.

By this method of Providence the Devil himself is deluded, who maligning us at all points, and bearing felicity from us even in this earthly being, he becomes a servant unto our future happiness and blessed vicissitude of the next. And this is also the unhappiness of him self, who having reaped his first fruit in Heaven, is made sharply miserable by transition, and more acutely feels the contrary state of hell.

P 196, l 23 memorandum] This sentence is thus continued in MS. Sloane, 1874 — 'Which I, that have not seen the sixtieth part of time [see note on p 222, l 2], have beheld great examples. Then the inconceivable Montrose no man rated a more fortunate part in the first scene of his adventures, but courageous loyalty continuing his attempts, he quickly felt that fortunes favours were out, and fell upon miseries smartly answering his felicitie, which was the only accomplishment wanting before to make him fit for Plutarch's pen, and to parallel the lives of his heroic captains.'

P 196, l 26 see by extramission, without reception or self-reflexion] An allusion to bodily sight, which in Sir I. B.'s words (Pseud Epist iii 7, p 257, ed Bohn) "is made by reception, and not by extramission, by receiving the rays of the object into the eye, and not by sending any out." Here, on the contrary, men send out the rays of their moral vision and perception, but do not receive or take in any lesson for self-reflection.

P 197, l 13 necessary] The following is given by Wilkin from MS. Sloane, 1874:—"Which is the amazing part of that incomprehensible patience, to condescend to act over these vicissitudes even in the despatch of our petitions: and how that omnipotent Spirit, that would not be exasperated by our forefathers above 1,600 years, should thus longingly endure our successive transgressions, and still contend with flesh; or how He can forgive those sins which will be committed again, and accept of repentance, which must have after penitence, is the riddle of His mercies.

"If God had not determined a settled period unto the world, and ordered the duration thereof unto His merciful intentions, it seems a kind of impossibility that He should have it so long continued it. Some think there will be another world after this. Surely God, who hath beheld the iniquity of this, will hardly make another of the same nature. And some wonder why He ever made man at all, since He was so happy in Himself without it, and self-sufficiently free from all provocation, wrath, and indignation, arising from this world, which sets His justice and His mercy at perpetual contention."

P. 198, pen one of the best natur'd Kings of this Throne] In connexion with this passage it will be interesting to bear in mind that Sir T. B. was knighted by Charles the Second on September 28, 1671, and that the Christian Morals were probably written about the same time.

P. 199, l. 18 the experiment in Lucan and Seneca] Seneca, having opened his veins, found the blood flow so slowly, and death lingered so long, that he was forced to quicken it by going into a warm bath. (Note in Π.) See Lucian, Animal xv. 53, 70.

P. 199, l. 8 shift] All the edd. have shift, but in the parallel passage the word is stiff, which is undoubtedly the true reading (see the note on p. 130, l. 16), and has accordingly been here introduced into the text, though without authority.

P. 199, l. 8 we come] In the parallel passage it is came, which is perhaps the better reading.

P. 199, l. 22 Orid] "Demito transfugium, mors mihi munus citi" [Trist. i. 2, 52] (Note in E.)

P. 199, l. ult. Theuistocks] For the commonly assigned cause of the death of Theuistocks, the Note in E. (probably Sir T. B. himself) refers to Plutarch's Life (cap. 31) in which authority for the belief is Aristophanes (Equit. 84). Sir L. L.

might surely have expressed himself more strongly on the impossibility (?) of a man's drinking a sufficient quantity of bull's-blood to cause his death, though the belief in the poisonous character of this substance was certainly very general for many centuries. Any one who wishes to investigate the subject may consult Jarembert's Etat de la Médicine Homère et Hippocrate, p. 40 (Paris, 1859), and the note to his Oribasius, tome i p. 645 (Paris, 1851).

P 200, l 3 the state poison of his country] viz κώνειον, (conium maculatum, Linn.) hemlock. It is probable that Sir T B wrote the state poison not the state potion. In one of the 'Extracts from Common Place Books' (vol iv p. 424 ed Wilkin) he speaks of "the common and state poison of Athens, made out of the hemlock, whereof a drachm of the juice imbibed was a sufficient dose."

P 200, l 4 Socrates in Plato] See the end of the Phædon.

P 200 l 9 gummed of his sword] Wherein he is said to have carried something, whereby upon a struggle or despair he might deliver himself from all misfortunes. (Note in E.) Juvenal says it was carried in a ring — "Ille, | Cannarum vindex et tanti sanguinis ultor, | Annulus" [Sat x 165] (Note in Π.)

P 200, l 14 the Turkish Emperor] "Solyman" [See Knolles,] Turkish History. (Note in E.) The same (or a similar) story is mentioned by Jer. Taylor, Duct Dubit iii 6 § 2, vol. v, p. 514. See also Religio Medici, ii 12 p. 118.

P 201, ll 10, 11 from a nation] Gardiner (W) has from whole nations, which error is repeated in 1.

P 202, ll 8, 9 Adam Methuselah Noah] According to the common chronology Methuselah was contemporary with Adam for 243 years, and with Noah for 600 years.

P 202, l 21 non-existent] In M's Sloane, 1848, this sentence concludes thus — "The world is not half itself, nor the moiety known of its occurrence-, of what hath been acted."

P 203, l 4 he who counterfeited thunder] viz Salmo-næus. See Virgil, Æn vi 585 (Gardiner).

P 203, l 7 Even Angels, &c] This sentence is found in two other places among Sir T B's works, vol iv p. 74, note, and p. 388, ed Wilkin (p. 308, l 3, of this ed.)

P. 203, l. 15 Trismegistus his circle] Since the note on p 19, l 7 was written the authorship of this sentence has been again discussed in Notes and Queries, 1880 "The sphere of Irimegistus" is mentioned in Pseud Epist vii 3, where Wilkin gives the following note by Henry Wren — "Irimegistus said God was a circle, whose center (that is, His present and immutable essence, from whence all things have their being,) is every where, but His circumference (that is, His incomprehensible infinity,) is nowhere."

P 204, l 18 honest in a right line] "Iner recta bicus sima" (Note in E)

P 205, l 3 the mother stus] Pride, covetousness, lust, envy, gluttony, anger, sloth (Note in H)

P 205, l 12 Tree of Goa] Arbor Coelestis, or Ficus Ficta, [more commonly called the Janyan Tree,] whose branches send down shoots which root in the ground, from whence these successively rise others, till one time becomes a wood' (Note in E) Gardiner (W) refers to Limy, Hist Nat xii 5, and Milon, Pai Inst, ix 1, 100, &c

P 205, l 29 thus, below] The following passage occurs here in MS Sloane, 1847 — So may it thou enjoy a smooth face, and sit down in contentation, without those cruel and commotions which take up every affair, displacing at things successful unto others, which the Arch-Diposer of all things thinks not fit for ourselves. To reject only in thine [own] good, exclusively to that of others, is a stiff piece of self-love, wanting the supplying oil of benevolence and charity

P 205, l ult that inhumane] Ἐπιχαρτία [See Aristotle, Eth ii 7, 15] (Note in E)

P 208, l 19 Adam's] "Adam, thought to be created in the state of man, about thirty years old" (Note in E) See above, p 63, l 6

P 209, l 3 Attalus, his Garden] "Attalus [the last King of Pergamus] made a garden which contained only venomous plants" (Note in E) See Justin, Hist xxvii 4. Suet J mentions this garden again in the Garden of Cyrus, ch. i. p. 499, ed Bohn.

P 209, l 11, with black sails] Alluding to the story of Theseus, who had black sails when he went to engage the

to the story of Vedius Pollio, who ordered a slave to be thrown into his pond to feed his lampreys, for happening to break a glass at supper (Seneca, De Irâ, iii 40)

P 212, l 16 not pound him in a mortar who offendeth thee] Anaxarchus was killed in this manner by Nicocreon, King of Cyprus (Diogenes Laertius, l. it. Philis ix 10 § 59)

P 213, l 4 like Homerican Muses]

'Tu mater exchumis ut Stentori vincere possis,

l 213, l 19 taught from Heaven] MS Sloane, 1817, b7r not to be learned elsewhere

P 213, l 21 make not an end, &c] The MS has, quiet one party, but leave unquietness in the other,—of a seeming friend making but a close adversary

P 214, l 2. sleeps but like Regulus] who was commonly said to have been put to death by want of sleep and other tortures, "vigiliis ac dolore" (Aurel Victor, De Vir Illust, c 40)

P 217, l 30 a cloud as big as a hand] Alluding to 1 Kings viii 4, "There ariseth a little cloud out of the ser, like a man's hand"

P. 219, l. 26. Olybrius his urn] "which after many hundred years was found burning under ground, and went out as soon as the air came to it" (Note in E) This story is mentioned also in the Pseud. Epid iii 21, vol 1 p 327, ed Lohm 101 a curious discussion on these marvellous lamps, see Oratorum Philosophical Recreations, by Hatton, vol 1 p 496 (Will in) Jeremy Taylor mentions the subject on the authority of Lucius, De Recond Antiq Lucernis, vol. 1. p 174, vol 11 p 481, ed Lden

P. 219, l. 30 Call not Jove to witness, &c] "Jovem Iuripidem iurare," (Note in E) "quod sanctissimum jurandum est habitum." (Gellius, Noct. Att. 1. 21, § 4)

P 220, l. 3 the urn of the Prætor] The vessel into which the ticket of condemnation or acquittal was cast (Note in Π)

P 220, l. 5 Osman] "See the oath of Sultan Osman in his life, in the addition to Knolls his Turkish History," [p 1383, ed 1638] (Note in Ξ)

P 220, l 12 by keeping their faith they swear] "Colendo fidem jurant," Curtius' [vii 8] (Note in Ξ)

P 221, l 22 a moralist of the Mount] that is, according to the rules laid down in our Saviour's Sermon on the Mount (Note in Π)

P 222, l 2 about the sixtieth part of Time] What this exactly means is not quite clear, though in one of the previous editions I have thought it necessary to explain the expression. It seems to agree in a rough way with the "seventy or eighty years" mentioned at the beginning of this section, and Sir L B. says (p 314, l 23), 'I have not seen the sixtieth part of Time,' when he was probably not quite seventy years old. But even eighty years, multiplied by sixty only comes to 4,800 and this is far too short a period to have been assigned either to "Time," or to our Luth, even in the seventeenth century. Upon the whole it seems probable that Sir L B. was thinking of the ten thousand years, which he has mentioned several times before (see Note on p 72, l 27), but if so, it would have been more accurate to call a man's life "about the eightieth part of Time" than the "sixtieth." There is a similar expression below, p 230, l 17, &c

P 222, l 27 Orbitz, &c] His riches may be to him a source of repentance and regret, because he has been deprived of all his natural heirs

P 223, l 20 Solomon's Maxims] that all is vanity [Eccles i 2] (Note in Π)

P 224, l 16 we come not] Gardiner (w) has we came not, which is copied by Fields (v), but there is no necessity for the change, though it is perhaps an improvement. See above, p 130, l 17, and p 199, l 8

P 225, l penult When the Stock sails, &c] "Vitam necno accipiet, si daretur scientibus," Seneca (Note in Ξ)

- HANDS As it is the custom to shake hands with a friend both at first meeting him and also at taking leave of him the phrase to shake hands with is used in two very different senses Sometimes it signifies to welcome and be on friendly terms with, as in Dr Pusey's (?) Introductory Remarks to the Manual of Rules for the Brotherhood of the Holy Trinity (1832) to 'shake hands with the world' Sometimes the words are used in the sense of to turn away from, or bid adieu to, as Harrison in Illustrated, vol 1 p 314 ed 1807 (quoted by Girdiner) "to shake hand with labour for ever", and Charles Lamb in Elia, on Early Rising, "has shaken hands with the world's business, has done with it, has discharged himself of it" It is in the latter sense that the words are used by Sir I. SALVATION, our confidence re peeting 89 1' &c

SALVE (verb) a word used several times by Sir I B, and changed into sol e or save by some modern editors (see Notes on 39 80 48 19 98

28) It is explained by Gardiner to mean to cure remedy, as if from the A S seal fian, but it is rather to be taken as derived from the Lat seal meaning 'to help, ensure, by seal' as a cause or reservation."

salvo, meaning "to help or save by" is used "in excuse or reservation" (Johnson). In SALVO PRISCILLA, PAGE (.8 .98) is not to save it, but

(JOHN 6:17) TO SAVE PRISCILLA'S FEELING (JO 6:25) IT NOT TO touch it BUT, to avoid breaking it. (See PRISCILLA). The general sense of the word
